Jean Gascon Quit Medicine To Form Theatre Group Which Has Been Successful

MONTREAL (CP) — People familiar with theatre in French Canada know Jean Gascon is founder and director of Theatre du Nouveau Monde, perhaps North America's most successful theatrical company.

They're also aware he is executive director of the National Theatre School, (capa NTS) an organization that does a prodigious amount for theatre in Canada.

He and his company have been seen and applauded in such centres as Stratford, Ont. New York, Paris and Montreal.

But not many know that Jean Gascon almost didn't become an actor at all. When he enrolled as a medical student at the University of Montreal in 1945, he planned to become a doctor.

True he was already interested in theatre, and while at university he acted with the well - known company of the time, Les Compagnons. But it wasn't until after the Second World War that he saw any chance of making his life in the theatre.

WORKED IN PARIS

He quit medicine in 1945 and the following year won a French government scholarship that enabled him to study abroad for five years and to work with theatrical organizations in Paris and Switzerland.

He returned to Canada in 1951 and with several friends formed Theatre du Nouveau Monde. Its reputation—and his own—have grown tall—from sturdy seed.

When questioned about theatre, his knowledge and enthusiasm seems boundless. Speaking of Moliere, whose works are a specialty of the TNM, Gascon said:

"What humanity there is in his plays! What bliss to play them! He comes from a great tradition—one that understands people.

"In the age of the bomb, playwrights have somehow lost sight of this tradition. Moliere, Shakespeare and the Greeks found subjects for great plays at every corner. And they gave us a complete picture of life, its fragments."

QUEBEC THEATRE VITAL

What about theatre in Quebec?

"It's really alive! C'est extrement vivant!"

Will it stay that way?

"Yes," Gascon replied emphatically. "There are a lot of theatre companies now all receiving grants to help them along.

"Even I'm convinced Quebecers won't let theatre die, they have a kind of thirst for it." Asked how he explains the fantastic growth of theatre in Quebec during the last 10 years, the actor and director said:

"It's not always easy to understand. Perhaps it's because we French Canadians are a minority group, living on a kind of Indian reserve.

"Bound tightly together by the same language and culture, we find the rest of North America—which has a different culture—closed to us.

"Even France is closed, one reason being that there are too many unemployed French actors there .So we're thrown upon ourselves.

"In the rest of Canada, talented people find it necessary to go to the United States or England but in Quebec talent remains and boils away without evaporating."

HELPED BY TV

Gascon said anothes reason for the dynamism of Quebec theatre is that American television has less influence here than elsewhere in Canada.

"If Ed Sullivan went to Toronto (as he did for his March 31 show) everyone would flock to see him. In Quebec, they flock to see us, for we're the ones they see on television."

What are the drawbacks to living on an "Indian reserve?"

"It makes it difficult to renew yourself at times," Gascon said. "It's like living in a jar whose top is not easily pushed open. Every once in a while, you feel like getting out, badly."

But altogether Gascon seemed happy with things in Quebec, especially theatre.

"Things are moving here, and actors are able to practise their craft, which is the main thing."

GET FRENCH TV

TEMISKAMING, Ont. (CP)—The French-speaking population of Temiskaming and Mattawa now have a French - language television station which went into operation here recently.

The Easter Seal Campaign conducted by the Ontario Society for Crippled Children provides the funds for such treatment. Your support of the campaign guarantees a continuance of these and other services for crippled children.

TALENT REMAINS — Jean Gascon, founder of the Theatre du Noveau Monde, thinks theatre in French Canada is thriving because acting talent remains in the area. The Montreal actor and director says the rest of North America is closed to French Canadians by barriers of language and culture.

DESERONTO

Deseronto Mill Rate Increased

DESERONTO — An increase of 9.30 mills on residential property and 9.87 mills on industrial property over the mill rate of last year was set at the regular council meeting Monday night, at which time the 1963 budget was passed by the six members present.

A request received from the Deseronto Athletic Association for a donation of $300 was turned over to the finance committee for a recommendation to be brought up at the next council meeting.

Permission was granted to the Girl Guides for the sale of Hot Cross buns and cookies.

The audit report of last year was received from John D. Lewars and was filed. A letter from the Fire Marshall's office regarding the course for Chiefs at the University of Toronto was referred to the Fire and Police committee.

A request from the garbage collector for an increase in salary was laid over to the next meeting again as the council had not contacted Mr. Sutcliffe since the last meeting.

The letter of the Deseronto Ratepayers Association recommending all possible cooperation with Mr. O. Chisholm, who desires to establish a meat packing plant in town, was filed.

Councillor Howard advised council that he had been in conversation with Charles Thorne of Belleville regarding catching dogs running at large and had come to an agreement whereby Mr. Thorne would assume the duties at Deseronto. It will cost $3.50 per day for mileage and $3.00 per dog. Councillor Detlor advised that in his opinion the offer should be in writing and on his motion the clerk is to ask Mr. Thorne to submit a letter quoting prices.

The Industrial and Publicity committee recommended that the Medical Officer submit a report on the meat packing plant now being operated by Mr. Chisholm north of Belleville.

Reeve Lott told council at a discussion with Mr. Chisholm regarding the disposal of the wash water from the proposed plant and the means that would be used to prevent any odors.

On recommendation of Councillor Alford, the managers of the Pina Service station were leased the south store of the Ballz block at a rental of $425 per month with the first four months free for repairing the building.

The clerk advised that the auditors report was available for inspection—if any ratepayer desired to see it and that a copy would be published in the local paper.

Councillor Brooks asked the mayor if any report had been received on the test drilling for water that was conducted last winter by the Water Resources Commission. The mayor advised council that no report had been received as yet, but that one was expected very shortly.

Councillor Detlor gave notice of motion of the proposed changes in the Rules of Order. Charles Reid spoke to council regarding the sale of lots purchased by Mr. Reid from the Crown. He read to the council his Crown Grant and stated that in his opinion the council could not sell these lots for taxes.

Mr. Cummings spoke briefly to council and urged more cooperation between the council and the people of the town. He told of holes in the road near his residence that had been there for two years.

F. Toppin, on behalf of the Public Utilities Commission, said that council should advise the people that the P.U.C. had nothing to do with the water situation in the town. The commission was only working for the council.

A Word to Mothers-in-Law

DEAR DORIS—We all have read in so many places how terrible having or being a mother-in-law is. Well, I beg to differ. When my son married I knew I had a problem. His wife was moody, quiet and not too easy to get to know. He loved her and I had to learn.

DORIS CLARK

My first advice is to take it easy. Offer help but don't force it on them. When I saw my son wasn't helping her or taking her out as he should I told him so in front of her. I let her know I knew he was not perfect. Now we are getting along just swell.

She can talk to me about him and can take any advice I can give her, no matter if it is about herself. We shop, have coffee, and even go out in an evening together. I feel I have in her more than my own daughter.

My greatest thrill was when she asked me to stay with her the night before my grandson was born. I knew then I had reached my goal as a good mother-in-law. Take heart and work at it, girls. It pays off a thousandfold.—HAPPY MOTHER-IN-LAW.

DEAR HAPPY—Your technique was perfect. First, you let her know you were all for her. She was grateful, she needed you and you followed through. Score for the mother-in-laws!

DEAR DORIS—How should I act in school with a teacher who is going with my cousin? He and I are quite good personal friends. I think the rest of the students are jealous. They think he lets me away with more and gives me higher marks.—SWEET SIXTEEN.

DEAR SIXTEEN—Act like a pupil with a teacher. Last name only; courteous respect in class. In private talk with him let him see how anything else puts you on the spot.

(Don't just muddle along. Do something about what's troubling you. Write to Doris for a fresh approach.)

Canada Will Decide Future, Prime Minister

By ARCH MacKENZIE

BRANTFORD (CP)—The Canadian people won't be told "by a few what they can do, inside or outside Canada," says Prime Minister Diefenbaker.

"May it never be said that a prime minister of Canada when he speaks out for Canada, is against any other nation," he told a crowd of 1,500 here Friday night.

"On that issue I ask your support." In Monday's general election. Let us decide Canada's future be determined in Canada and that Canadians will determine it."

Mr. Diefenbaker spoke to a capacity audience in the Capital Theatre — there were 300 standing. Earlier, he also addressed 600 at Paris 10 miles away.

Today, he boarded his special train for an intensive final trek of the campaign, through 11 Western Ontario towns stretching from Galt to Hespeler, Kitchener, Baden, New Hamburg, Stratford Mitchell, Seaforth Goderich, Exeter and Strathroy.

TO FLY WEST

Addresses are scheduled at Goderich, after Premier Robarts joins the party, and at Sarnia tonight. Then Mr. Diefenbaker flies to Prince Albert, Sask., his home constituency, for the election.

One loud-voiced but polite heckler bombarded him with interjections Friday night but the prime minister fielded them deftly to loud applause.

The heckler, who identified himself as a Brantford factory worker, Cecil MacPhee, told the prime minister on leaving the theatre: "That's all right, John. You're a great man."

Friday's speeches touched the ridings of Brantford and Brant-Haldimand, both converted to Liberal seats last June.

Mr. Diefenbaker told his night audience that the press of the larger Canadian cities now is hedging on a Liberal majority government. Support was flowing strongly to the Conservatives across the country.

The government, despite ridicule, had been right economically and there were press predictions that 1963 would be another year of vigorous growth.

CONTRIBUTE TOO MUCH?

"Some of the most powerful people in Canada think too much has been contributed to social security," he said.

But the Progressive Conservatives had acted in the last 5½ years for the aged, the young, the veterans and the crippled "to give at least a reasonable modicum of a pension."

The Liberals had thought $6 more was enough in old age pensions in 1957. Saskatchewan's socialist government paid lower old-age assistance than other provinces.

At Paris Mr. Diefenbaker struck a more restrained tone as he talked about agriculture, urged Canadian Indians to vote —He said they will suffer no loss of any existing rights—and about the futility of voting for any third party.

CONDUCTS A-TEST

WASHINGTON (AP) — An underground nuclear test was conducted Friday by the U.S. Atomic Energy Commission at its Nevada site.

Bedlam Rocks Montreal Forum Caouette Rally

By RON LEBEL

MONTREAL (CP) — Bedlam broke loose when about 15,000 vociferous spectators jammed the Forum Friday night for the climactic rally of the Social Credit campaign in Quebec.

A "jeering section" of 300 university students from Ottawa and Montreal created pandemonium before being broken up by seething, fist-swinging Social Credit supporters.

An number of preliminary speakers were virtually drowned out as the students staged noisy demonstrations until they were ejected bodily from the arena or pummelled into submission.

The disorders had died down somewhat when Deputy Social Credit Leader Real Caouette made an impassioned 20-minute appeal for support from Montreal residents, who gave Social Credit candidates a cool reception in last June's election.

Mr. Caouette was preceded by Premier W. A. C. Bennett of British Columbia, who flew in from Victoria earlier in the day and had warm praise for his fiery Quebec colleague.

THOMPSON REPORTS

National Leader Robert Thompson was scheduled to address the rally by telephone from Barrie, Ont., but this was cancelled. Mr. Caouette merely announced that Mr. Thompson's aides had called to report they had a large meeting in Barrie.

The deputy leader, ignoring a hoarseness in his voice, predicted that his party will form the government after Monday's election with 130 to 135 seats in the 265-seat House of Commons.

Referring to Liberal charges that Social Credit monetary theories would bring galloping inflation and financial ruin, he said:

"Social Credit will not mean ruin for the people, but it will mean ruin for high finance."

Two unidentified students were treated for blurred eyes at Montreal General Hospital after being hustled out of the Forum.

Many other students emerged with cut lips and welts after being shoved down concrete steps and punched.

HE IS FURIOUS

Mr. Caouette said it made him "furious" to see students devoid of any education try to cause trouble and deny him freedom of speech.

The students, some of whom said they support the Quebec separatist movement, were massed together high in the stands.

They waved a Nazi flag, rose en masse to give Nazi salutes and shouted: "Heil Hitler, Real Caouette." These were apparent references to Mr. Caouette's statement last year that he admired the economic policies of Adolf Hitler and Benito Mussolini, while he deplored their acts of agression.

At other points the students shouted, "we want dollars, we want Caouette." Some threw small stink bombs and one scored a hit on the lectern with an egg, splattering a party official on the platform. Each speaker was greeted with a din of whistles, cow bells, horns and boos.

Social Credit supporters countered this with lusty cheering

Thompson Sees Social Credit Election Sweep

By JAMES NELSON

TORONTO (CP) — Social Credit Leader Thompson flies home to Red Deer, Alta., today confident that his party will win majority in Monday's election as a small-letter alternative to the other Conservative and Liberal parties.

The old parties, he said in his windup a national campaign speech Friday night, have demonstrated their inability to give Canada stable government, and the country does not want socialism as represented by the New Democratic Party.

Mr. Thompson drove here late Friday night after close brush with possible injury in a minor helicopter accident. He flies west today to campaign in his home constituency of Red Deer, to vote there Monday and then to wait for the election results.

He predicted a Social Credit sweep of the country, winning 60 seats in Quebec 12 to 14 in Alberta and enough in the rest of the country to form a government. Tuesday night in Ottawa he said it might only be a minority government, but Friday night he predicted his party will win majority control of the new Commons.

DESCRIBES PARTY

Earlier Friday, in Sudbury, Ont., Mr. Thompson described the Social Credit party as one which is essentially both conservative and liberal, without the capital letters identifying it with the old parties.

The Liberals, he said, were in power for 22 years and "if they produced a kind of stable government Canada needed, they would still be there." The Progressive Conservatives, even when they had the largest Commons membership of any party in history, failed to give Canada anything but "the same old thing under a different name."

"It's time to get somebody else in to take their place," Mr. Thompson said.

The 48-year-old national party leader, whose 3 members in the last Commons—26 of them from Quebec under Deputy Leader Real Caouette—held a balance of power, said his party is not a vehicle voters can turn because it is based on the sound original principles of the Social Credit party, is edified only enough to meet present day needs. He dismissed the principles of socialism and said Social Credit is a strong private enterprise party.

He promised that, if elected prime minister, his government will face Canada's economic problems squarely and openly. There would be "no deals we are ashamed to reveal to the Canadian citizen."

Earlier at Sudbury, Mr. Thompson said Canada needs to imperil the economic policies of Adolf Hitler and Benito Mussolini, while he explored their acts of agression.

At other points the students shouted, "we want dollars, we want Caouette." Some threw small stink bombs and one scored a hit on the lectern with an egg, splattering a party official on the platform. Each speaker was greeted with a din of whistles, cow bells, horns and boos.

Social Credit supporters countered this with lusty cheering

Wildly Cheering Toronto Crowd Greets Pearson

By DON HANRIGHT

TORONTO (CP) — Liberal Leader Lester Pearson faced a huge Toronto crowd Friday night and said his hour has arrived.

It is the hour, he said, that all his life, experience and training has been for—to be prime minister of Canada, at the head of a strong and stable Liberal government.

He asked Canadians to put their confidence in him.

"Give me your trust. God is willing, I will not let you down."

They cheered him wildly. And they went on cheering him, chanting his name.

Half-way through a 40-minute speech he repeated the need for a stable majority government. He said it in a way that invited applause.

But he couldn't have expected what followed. A crowd unable to contain itself burst into cheering that lasted for fully three minutes. Then they chanted "Mike, Mike," giving him a standing ovation.

"I feel like I've just scored the winning goal in the last game of the Stanley Cup," he told them. Mrs. Pearson stepped up and kissed him.

TURN MANY AWAY

Besides the 16,000 in the Gardens, thousands more were turned away. About 2,000 of them got into Massey Hall 12 blocks away, to hear his speech on loudspeaker. An hour later hundreds were still trying to get inside.

Only a few hecklers were in the Gardens. And they were so high in the rafters—the bleachers farthest removed from the platform — that they could scarcely be heard on the Gardens floor.

Mr. Pearson, it was known, entered the Gardens with some misgivings. Reporters who have followed him in this campaign know his dislike for huge crowds in big places; he feels isolated on the platform, unable to "get to" his audience. Then there was last Monday's near-riot in Quebec.

He had another reason to be chary of the Gardens. In 1957 he appeared on the platform with then Prime Minister Louis St. Laurent. Several years later Mr. Pearson told a group that it was on that night that he sensed the impending Liberal defeat.

CROWD IS WITH HIM

Friday night was a long way from 1957. The crowd was with him all the way. And he rose to the occasion.

A pre-speech incident characterized the crowd.

Two men appealed on the floor with an anti-nuclear banner. At first the crowd seemed stunned, just looking. Then it broke into a chorus of jeers and angry shouts. The two men were surrounded and in a trice their banner was pulled down and ripped to shreds. They were unhurt.

Mr. Pearson delivered his most personal, most eloquent speech of the campaign.

Early in it he said:

"It is not the Academy Award you are deciding on Monday. It

Will Support Govt. That Ups Pension to $75

PORT MOODY, B.C. (CP)—T. C. Douglas, national leader of the New Democratic Party, said Friday night the NDP, should it not form the next federal government, will refuse to support a minority government which does not first agree to boost old age pensions to $75 a month.

Mr. Douglas made the statement in an off-the-cuff address to a rally in his home riding of Burnaby-Coquitlam where he is seeking re-election Monday. He spoke to a crowd of 150 in this community 15 miles east of Vancouver.

The NDP leader predicted big gains for his party in Ontario and the Prairies as well as an increase in its standing in British Columbia, where 10 New Democrats were elected last June 18.

He repeated his prediction that the party's popular vote in Quebec would be increased two to three times over 1962 and referred to strong support the party was receiving in Quebec's French-language press.

The NDP leader is spending the weekend in Burnaby - Coquitlam, winding up his campaign with a speech at the nearby predominantly French-speaking community of Maillardville.

is not the recognition of a dramatic performance or striking showmanship.

MUCH MORE AT STAKE

"It is the future of our country that is being determined, in the most important election in our history. There is much more at stake than the success of any political party or the salvation of any particular individual.

"It is time to take stock of our destiny, not merely to evaluate a performance.

"What is required is a decision to put into office a strong, stable, majority government which will help to secure our future by a program of progressive and responsible action.

"The time for political talk is over. The time for political action has come."

If it is he has not pretended there are any cure-alls to Canada's problems.

"The high road is the hard road," he said. It would take hard work and sacrifice to make progress.

Moira

MOIRA—Mrs. Ross Ketcheson and daughter, Linda, spent Saturday afternoon and evening with her mother, Mrs. J. Lake, Stirling.

On Friday night the Young People of Moira, numbering 21, enjoyed a "bowling party" at Belleville and on their return home, Mr. and Mrs. Donald McInroy entertained the group to coffee and cake at their home.

Mr. Owen Ketcheson returned home on Friday night for the holiday as he has finished the course for this term and received word on Monday that he passed highest in his class.

Mr. Fred Ketcheson celebrated his 92nd birthday on Sunday, March 31. His daughter, Mrs. James Vanderwater, had a lovely birthday dinner at noon. He received many cards and gifts and congratulations were extended to him from many.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Wood and girls spent Sunday evening with Mr. and Mrs. Ross Ketcheson.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Forsythe were Saturday callers on her brother, Mr. Walter Holgate and Mrs. Holgate, Ivanhoe.

TO THE ELECTORS PRINCE EDWARD-LENNOX

I have the honor of being the Progressive Conservative candidate in Prince Edward-Lennox, representing a Party to which you have been loyal for many years, not because of tradition, but because both you and I recognize that this is the Party of the People, of Progress and Prosperity.

We recognize, by the FACTS, that with Conservative Members (George Tustin, C. A. Milligan and now myself) that this riding has been well looked after under their able representation. Since I was elected your Member ten months ago, two million, five hundred dollars have been spent on Federal projects in the Riding. There have been new Post Offices, special road grants, renovation of armories, dredging, new wharves, technical schools in Napanee and Picton, Army Camp at Picton, Mt. View Airport, etc., under Conservative M.P.'s. The Riding has NOT been forgotten. The 'doom and gloom' group fail to see the benefits secured, and the wisdom of continuing Conservative representation. We need Faith and Optimism for Progress.

My chief desire to serve as your Member is the opportunity to serve ALL the people of this Riding, and to this I will devote FULL time.

My experience as your Member, many year's experience in the municipal field (including Mayor of Napanee), community service, is offered you, along with experience at Ottawa. I have initiated other projects which I hope to be able to carry out. I can assure you that Prince Edward-Lennox will be HEARD from.

Prince Edward-Lennox is ON the Map already and as your Member I will attempt to keep it there.

I wish to be your REPRESENTATIVE, to have your briefs and opinions, and to act upon them, as in the past.

As a Member for eight months, I can assure you that Liberal OBSTRUCTION was the reason much good legislation was not enacted. Given your mandate on Monday, the Progressive Conservative Party will immediately enact legislation to KEEP the economy rolling.

For reasons of their own, various papers and others have sought to wreck a great Party. All I ask is that YOU consider conditions in Canada today, note the Progress being made, the programs for Agriculture, Health and Welfare, the growth of Trade, greatly improved economic conditions. YOU know the FACTS and I am confident that you will not be "brain washed" by the mass hysteria engendered by certain papers, for unknown reasons.

I appreciated the support of those who do not normally support the Conservative Party, but now do so to assure a Majority and Stable Government at Ottawa. I will appreciate the support of every elector who wants a Peaceful, Prosperous and Progressive Canada for Canadians.

I sincerely urge you to vote on Monday, and again seek a renewal of the confidence you placed in me last June and which I have sought to merit.

Sincerely

Douglas Alkenbrack

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

WELLINGTON — There is a marked undercurrent of excitement rippling the placid workaday life of this pretty lakeside village. There is a humdrum of activity in certain circles.

The burghers are getting ready for the biggest birthday party held here since the village founder, Daniel "Old Smoke" Reynolds, held a venison powwow with his Indian friends around shoreline campfires to mark his first anniversary as head paleface of the settlement. That was back in the 1780's.

On the Civic Holiday weekend, the village named after the illustrious British general, who sent the Little Corporal, one Napoleon Bonaparte back to his peasoups and Josephines after the historical hassle at Waterloo, will mark its 196th birthday.

Actually the village dubbed by loyal burghers as the brightest jewel in the crown of the Garden County of Ontario, has been around a lot longer than a century.

In fact, this lovely lake-bordered lady was eligible for the old-age pension before that memorable day in 1863 when returning officer John T. Dorland counted the ballots of the first election that paved the way to membership in the family of Canada's incorporated villages.

That first council composed of F. McMahon, E. D. McMahon, Donald Campbell, William Harris, Jonathon Brown and Joseph Cummings elected Mr. F. McMahon as the first reeve. William Young was the first clerk and Thomas Jackson the first bailiff.

An all-out effort that is rapidly gaining momentum is laying the foundation of the biggest natal day celebration in the history of the community. It is slated for August 2 - 4 - 5 and sixth with a program that stands out with its variety, historical significance, entertainment and reunion highlights.

"It is by far the biggest thing we have ever attempted," says General Committee Chairman Councillor Jack Ogilvy. "We are getting fine support from the the villagers and we have committees that even now are operating in high gear."

Lieut.-Col. William Darvell, veteran of two World Wars, and former commanding officer of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, is another hard-working committee chairman. "We are getting outstanding cooperation from not only our local people and organizations, but from county and district associations. Everybody is working hard to make it a success."

Equally hard at work on special assignments, are Reeve Clare Platt, Dr. R. S. Thomson, publicity chairman; village clerk Jim Cleminson; assistant chairman Aleta Ogilvy; the village historian Mrs. Frank Harris, and Bob Boyce, parade chairman, and many others.

There will be parades and carnivals, fish derbies and dances, wrestlings and ribbon-cuttings, picnics and pyrotechnic displays, rejoicing at reunions and a general letting down of the community hair.

Prominent political and municipal government dignitaries of the county and district will be here. It is expected Ontario Premier Roberts will perform at a special function. Wardens of neighboring counties and mayors of district urban centres will add their dignity.

"Madame Wellington" will mark her official 180th natal day, and her 175th year of existence in a blaze of celebrative glory. She is providing for her many visiting sons and daughters a handsome 100-page illustrated booklet, a fitting colorful souvenir of the biggest birthday event in her history.

All this, of course, would not have been made possible had Daniel "Old Smoke" Reynolds not decided on that day back in 1778 to point the bow of his bateau toward a pretty sheltered bay on the north shore of Lake Ontario.

He put ashore —and liked what he saw. The hard-bitten Connecticut Yankee was greeted by a red-skinned reception committee and the voluble settler-to-be soon convinced them he was their man. He sweet-talked the chief into his way of thinking and the two became fast friends. "Smoke," the chief, even allowed "Dannul" to join the first fish and game club.

Reynolds was made. He went back to Albany and returned later where he set up housekeeping and business. He was given a grant of 600 acres and convinced the Indians he was by far the best white man in the district to work for.

He built the "Reynolds House," now called "The Manor," after deciding his original log structure was not big enough for house parties, conventions and tribal get-togethers. He cleared the land and cut the timber. He amassed a fleet of bateaux and hauled barley and other commodities to Kingston.

He even crashed royal society. In 1796 Lord and Lady Simcoe were travelling from Kingston to Niagara when her ladyship fell ill. The governor's party put in at Wellington where they were entertained at the Reynolds menage.

Lady Simcoe was too ill to travel and she remained at the Reynolds home for six weeks, carefully nursed and nurtured by Reynolds and his Indians. Squaws searched the woods for special herbs, which, history claims, were instrumental in bringing Lady Simcoe back to health.

Shoots Blazing Comeback 66

Nicklaus Starts Masters Drive

By MERCER BAILEY

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP)—Pudgy Jack Nicklaus of the young man to watch starting today's third round of the Masters golf tournament.

Although he and Jay Hebert were one shot behind the midpoint leader, Mike Souchak, the 23-year-old Nicklaus held centre - stage after his dazzling comeback in the second round when a blazing putter carried him to a six-under-par 66.

Souchak's 36-hole chart was 69-70—139.

Nicklaus was 74-66—140 and Hebert 70-70—140.

Two of three Canadian entries survived the cutoff Friday at 152. The leading Canadian was still Vancouver veteran Stan Leonard, seven strokes off the pace.

BALDING IS OUT

All three Canadians shot 72s Friday, but Toronto's Al Balding needed a three-under score as he sailed to 154 and failed to stay in the running. Alvie Thompson of Toronto had 79-72—151 and just made it.

Leonard, 72, gave him a two-day total of 146.

The 66 Nicklaus threw at the field was the lowest score in the two rounds of the 72-hole event and was only two shots off the record set by Lloyd Mangrum 23 years ago—the year Nicklaus was born.

Souchak escaped a three-way deadlock when he scraped his second straight steady round with a four-foot birdie putt on the 18th hole.

Bo Wininger, tied with Souchak at 69 after the first round, wound up with a 73 for 141 total. That put him in a tie for fourth place with Ed Furgol, former United States Open champion who birdied two of the last three holes for a 71.

Par for the 6,830 - yard Augusta National Course is 36-36—72.

Neither Gary Player nor Arnold Palmer, who with Nicklaus are the big stars under current day golf, was in a particularly threatening position.

Player finished to a 74 for 145—six strokes off the pace. Palmer, the defending champion, had a 76 for 147.

Sam Snead, three-time Masters champion, with a 72, Dick Mayer, with a 70, and Tony Lema, one of the hot young men among the touring pros, with a 69, were deadlocked in sixth place at 143.

Don't Need Ford to Win Says Houk

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP)—The last time the Yankees lost the pennant was in 1949 when Casey Stengel made a preseason "victory speech," saying, "I've got the American League by the tail." Chicago White Sox won the flag.

Manager Ralph Houk isn't concerned with the precedent. In his annual pre-season statement Friday, he predicted the third straight Yank flag in his three years as boss.

"This team is stronger than it was a year ago in two ways," said Houk. "We have Tony Kubek at shortstop and Tom Tresh in the outfield from the beginning. Secondly, the pitching depth is much better than last year."

Whitey Ford, however, is laid up and there is no telling how long it will take him to recover from his mysterious shoulder ailment.

"We'll win it whether Ford pitches or not," said Houk.

McCormick Goes to Rochester

Bonus Baby Back In Minors

BALTIMORE (AP) — Mike McCormick's arm has been a mystery for some time but now the 24 - year - old Baltimore pitcher has turned detective.

McCormick, who's been a major leaguer since the day he signed a bonus contract with New York Giants in 1956, was headed today for the Orioles' Rochester farm club in the International League to try to solve some of the mysteries of his performance.

Obtained from the Giants in one of the winter's trades, McCormick has been coming along slowly in the Orioles' camp. Manager Billy Hitchcock feels an additional stretch with the minor leaguers under the Florida sun could be the cure-all needed.

McCormick has had the goods since he broke in with the Giants. Somewhere along the line, however, they became somewhat perishable. From 1958 to 1960, after the club had moved to San Francisco, McCormick was a regular starter, winning 11, 12 and 15.

RECORD SLIPS

In 1961, he slipped to 13-16, then last season ran into the first mystery and slid to 5-5 while spending most of his time on the sidelines with a sore arm.

Announcement of McCormick's first tour of duty with the minor leaguers came on a slack day along the exhibition trail.

In the only games played, Cincinnati Reds edged Chicago White Sox 3-2, and New York Yankees whipped Philadelphia Phillies 4-2.

Mickey Mantle put the Yanks ahead to stay against Phil's ace Jim Bunning with a two-run double in a three-run, game-winning uprising that put it out of reach. Mahaffey, trying to work the kinks out of a sore shoulder, worked four innings.

Sonny Liston To Undergo Surgery

CHICAGO (AP) — Heavyweight champion Sonny Liston will have to undergo surgery on his left knee, it was reported Friday night.

Ben Bentley, the champion's publicity agent, said the operation would be performed in Philadelphia. No date was set.

Liston was reported to have suffered the knee injury while swinging a golf club to pose for a photographer.

Because of the injury, a rematch with former champion Floyd Patterson would be out of the question until possibly August or September.

May Close 12 Tracks In England

LONDON (AP)—Twelve British race tracks, including Lincoln, where the flat racing season traditionally opens each spring, may be forced to close under a plan to modernize the sport in England.

The government's betting levy board, which subsidizes the tracks from taxes on bookmakers, gave notice Friday the 12 tracks would get no more subsidies for purses, equipment or improvements after 1966.

Lord Harding, chairman of the board, said he had £4,400,000 to spend and it would be used for tracks which had proved themselves most successful.

Harding listed 20 tracks qualifying for top priority, while another 29 are under review. He said 12 tracks is unpopular because of poor facilities and because a large sum would be necessary for rebuilding. The Lincolnshire Handicap there is always the first important race of the season.

Will Not Challenge For Cup

QUEBEC (CP)—The Marlitimes and Quebec junior hockey champions will not challenge for the Memorial Cup this year, Lionel Fleury of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association said Friday.

The Memorial Cup will be decided in a playoff between the Ontario Hockey Association junior champion and the Western Canada champion.

Fleury said in an interview Quebec's three junior leagues and those in the Maritimes have complained in recent years that the regional playoffs don't give them time to hold adequate provincial playoffs.

Quebec still has two playoff series to go before it chooses a team to meet the winner of the Maritimes-Ottawa District series.

Ottawa Montagnards and Cornwall now are playing off for the right to meet Charlottetown, the Maritimes champion.

Ortiz Defends Title Sunday

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP) — Lightweight champion Carlos Ortiz and challenger Ismael Laguna have finished workouts for Sunday night's 15-round world title fight.

Ortiz, 26-year-old Puerto Rican, wound up training with a three-round workout and pronounced himself fully recovered from a stomach trouble that forced one postponement in the fight, originally scheduled for last Saturday.

Valliant, 25, a Cuban living in Miami, Fla., finished off his training regimen with calisthenics and shadow boxing.

Quakers Win 5-3 Over Maroons

SASKATOON (CP) — Veteran centre George Senick and winger Maurice Oftebro put on sparkling scoring displays Friday night to pace Saskatoon Quakers to a 5-3 victory over Winnipeg Maroons and give Quakers a 2-0 lead in their best-of-seven Allan Cup semi-final senior hockey series.

Senick scored three goals and assisted on another while Oftebro scored once and added three assists. Jerry Esch got the other Saskatoon goal.

Chuck Lumsden, Ron Castelane and Jim McKenzie accounted for the Maroon scoring.

DETROIT (CP)—A fluke? That's a pertinent question now that Detroit Red Wings are just a step away from the Stanley Cup final against the National Hockey League champion Toronto Maple Leafs.

Wings are the club that didn't even belong. They were given a brushoff in the pre-season ratings by pundits around the NHL. They were almost unanimously chosen to finish in fifth place, one notch below a Cup playoff berth—now here they are needing only one victory over Chicago Black Hawks to go for the big payday.

The Wings finished fourth in the 70-game NHL schedule, but five points out of first place.

"It's not that they're (meaning the experts) laughing at us but they just don't seem to want to give us credit," manager-coach Sid Abel said Friday after the Wings had whipped Black Hawks straight following two losses.

The latest was a 4-2 victory at Chicago, following 4-2 and 4-1 triumphs in Detroit to open the series at home with 5-4 and 3-2 triumphs.

They play here Sunday night in the sixth game.

A loss would send the Hawks home packing where they'd have to negotiate next season's contracts with general manager Tommy Ivan. And they could be tough.

The Wings aren't obviously cocky about taking this series although the last three games have convinced observers that they have the legs to beat the Hawks. Abel has made hotel reservations in Chicago in the event a deciding seventh game is necessary Tuesday.....

There's a statistic. In the last 22 Cup series—semi-final and final—only once has gone the full seven games, that was in the 1950 semi-final when the Leafs defeated Boston Bruins four games to three.

One puzzling thing about this series is that it has been hard-fought and wide open as club-that hits early and often, have practically lambasted opponents. This was pointed out by Red Wing defenceman Bill Gadsby who said Friday that it might "have been doing a lot of bodychecking and every game we've hurt them a lot. I don't think that's the reason that they're getting out of legs in the last period of each game, particularly in the last three."

Barons Oust Amerks 2-1

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Cleveland Barons hope the first 100 were the hardest.

Wings Tougher Than Hawks-Imlach

Have Trouble With Both

By BILL MacDOUGALL

TORONTO (CP)—Punch Imlach says he can't cure whom Toronto Maple Leafs meet in the Stanley Cup final, but he indicates he is on a speculation that Detroit Red Wings might be tougher than Chicago Black Hawks.

"Let's put it bluntly—we've trouble with both of them," the Toronto manager-coach said Friday, working in his office as the team had a day off after its 4-1 victory in the best-of-seven Stanley Cup semi-final against Montreal Canadiens.

Chicago and Detroit are still battling in the other semi-final, Detroit leading 3-2 with the next game scheduled for Detroit Sunday night.

"If you go by the records, Detroit gave us more trouble over the season than Chicago, but then there are lots of other things to consider" he added without explaining what the other things are.

After Leafs beat Montreal 5-0 Thursday night to enter the final, Imlach indicated he would prefer to meet the Black Hawks because they play a "rougher game—our kind of hockey."

Over the season, Toronto won seven, lost four and tied three of its games against Chicago. Against Detroit, the Leafs had a 6-4-2 won-lost-tied record. They scored 37 goals against both clubs and Detroit replied with the same number. Black Hawks were able to score 25 times.

Imlach said: "I think Detroit has a better-skating team, but Chicago has better balance and a little bit better goaltending. But Chicago hasn't got (Gordie) Howe."

Isn't Hawks' Bobby Hull also a power to contend with?

"Yeah, he's a good hockey player. And you gotta give him marks for coming back after getting his nose smashed with no protection on his face."

The Leafs met Chicago in the final series last year, when they won in six games to take the Stanley Cup for the first time since 1951. They last met Detroit in a playoff series in 1949 and won the Stanley Cup in four straight games, all 3-1 victories.

In the 1942 final, Detroit won the first three games but, in an unequalled upset, the Leafs bounced back to take the next four and the Stanley Cup.

McDougalls Win Quinte Classic Bowling Title

McDougall Insurance with a score of 209 points won the Quinte Classic Bowling League championship for the 1962-63 season at the Bowl-O-Drome last night.

Butch's Drive-In won the fourth quarter with the new champions taking the second and third and Hotel Proprietors the first.

Members of the McDougall championship team are: Ron Saylor, Wally Dever, Paul Bailey and Glen Hamilton.

Les Lemmon rolled 425 single last night to tie Ron Saylor for high single. Saylor's 425 came earlier in the season.

Jim McKenzie took the season's high 4-string with 1283, while Les Labelle finished the season with high average of 253.

Last night's individual scores:

Forts Bow To Brandon, Trail 2-0

FORT WILLIAM (CP) — A breakaway goal by Denny Hextall while his Brandon Wheat Kings were shorthanded gave Brandon a 4-3 victory over Fort William Canadiens Friday in the second game of their Western Canada Memorial Cup semi-final.

Wheat Kings now lead the best-of-seven Manitoba - Thunder Bay series 2-0, after winning the opener 5-3 Wednesday. Next two games are slated for Brandon Tuesday and Wednesday.

Jerry Korp, Jim Murray and John Vopal scored the other goals for Wheat Kings who had to come from behind twice to forge the victory.

For Fort William, Wes Walchuk, Ken Campbell and Gary Veneruso had a goal each.

Grateful Sportsmen Banquet Bucks

Deer Dine On Winter Clover

By JOE DUPUIS

MONTREAL (CP) — Deer hunting in a rarely Labelle County has always been rewarding, and grateful sportsmen are trying to make sure it stays that way.

Labelle yields more deer to hunters than any other area in Quebec. It never falls below 2,000 and in the short 40-day 1962 season the total was 3,042.

So far, severe winters and wolves have not significantly reduced the number of deer, but hunters aren't taking any chances.

This winter a committee of sportsmen was formed and it began paying a $10 bounty on killer wolves. It has also spent more than $400 feeding the deer high-quality clover and alfalfa during the worst weather. Deer turn up their noses at the cheaper ordinary hay.

Both tasks were undertaken by the committee after the provincial government vacated the bounty field and halted a small peagram of winter deer feeding. Chairman of the committee is Arcade Pilote, a retired contractor. All the members, including Montreal La Presse wildlife columnist Serge Deyglun, are volunteers.

SOME STARVE

The problem this year has been a tough winter with deep snow. Young deer not fast enough to reach tree branches for food "are starving to death," says Deyglun.

Using trucks, tractors and snowmobiles, the committee has distributed 40 tons of clover in strategic spots throughout the county. Raymond Groulx, a St. Eustache car-le-lac farmer-hunter, aided the cause by selling the committee clover at low prices.

Feeding trips have been made to deer grounds near Lac des Iles, Lake Thompson, Minneral, Pearson, Lake Babcock and Lake Mimaiche.

The loads are deposited after a major snow storm. On one weekend trip by Pilote and other members of the committee 20 tons of clover were spread.

"In one area we spread out a pile of hay in a likely spot," said Pilote. "When we came back two hours later a whole herd of deer was eating the stuff and more were appearing."

Deer "smell the hay' in the air and devour it "pretty fast," he said. It never has time to freeze.

One problem the committee takes pains to cope with is deer poaching. Feeding stations are moved frequently and their location is kept secret to confuse poachers.

Claude Minguy, a provincial government wild life official, provoked a mild controversy when he described the movement as "very humanitarian but not really necessary.

He quoted statistics from Idaho to show that artificial nourishment of deer is not a factor in maintaining their numbers. Minguy also insisted that wolves are important in maintaining the balance of nature among the deer population.

The committee countered by saying it is helping feeding the deer but merely helping them pull through the difficult days immediately after a storm when food is scarce.

The committee also asked: If the deer are not to be killed off by hunters in sufficient numbers, and wolves are needed to do the job, why such a short hunting season in Labelle?

The committee, which hopes to expand its services to include moose hunting sites, has a promotional slogan: 'Votre foin pour du foin pour le chevreuil. Roughly translated, it means that sportsmen are being asked for "your money or your hay."

Giants, Tigers Second Choices

Baseball Writers Pick Yankees, Dodgers

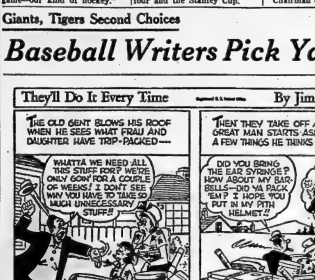
By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The 1963 World Series opponents will be the New York Yankees and the Los Angeles Dodgers, according to an Associated Press poll of the Baseball Writer's Association of America. The writers picked the Dodgers by a whisker over San Francisco Giants, and the Yankees to repeat by a healthy margin over Detroit Tigers.

A total of 70 of the men who cover major league games participated in the annual AP poll.



The Dodgers drew 27 first-place votes in the National League balloting, to 38 for the Giants. Oddly, the writers picked Cincinnati Reds, but the 1961 champions could not muster enough support for second place and wound up the third pick on total points.

One writer picked St. Louis Cardinals, the only other team to get a first-place vote.

The Yankees were the selection of 53 writers. The Tigers got six first-place votes, Baltimore four, Minnesota three, and Los Angeles Angels and Chicago White Sox one vote each.

On points—awarded on a 10-9-8, etc., basis — the Dodgers drew 636 points, to 626 for the Giants and 606 for the Reds.

The Giants beat out the Dodgers in a playoff last season, with the Reds third.

Sport "Over 'Ome"

Young Fighters "Tickle" Fans

By PAUL WESTBROOK

LONDON (CP)—Cassius Clay can compose poetry and champion Sonny Liston may smart but it's two youngsters you won't find in the record (or poetry) books who tickle the British fight fan's fancy.

Frankie (Tiger) Taylor is 20 and unbeaten in 14 fights as a featherweight. Lennie (Lion) Williams is a year younger, but has had 28 contests without a loss.

These two young battlers meet for the first time April 9 at Albert Hall here, and thanks to some expert public relations a sell-out is certain.

"At last they meet, the match of the decade," blare the posters scattered by promoter Mickey Duff who is forking out 50 per cent of the gate to get the two in the ring.

TAYLOR IS WRITER

Lancashire - born Taylor pounds a newspaper typewriter by day and sparring partner by night. He was voted Young Boxer of 1962 by ring-writers.

He turned pro last year under the management of Bobby Neill, a former Empire featherweight champion whose career ended in 1960 when he needed brain surgery to recover from a hammering from Londoner Terry Spinks.

Williams, who swings a part-time pick at Cosgnant Colliery, is heralded as the successor to Jimmy Wilde, the frail flyweight who climbed out of the collieries to win the world title in First World War days.

Unlike Taylor, the South Wales southpaw with the punch grin never ventured into the amateur ranks. He had his first paid fight at 16 when he was just about qualifying for a place in the choir of his local chapel in Mexboro.

BIG BUILDUP

Manager Benny Jacobs, a veritable veteran of the Cardiff scene, is the force behind Williams. He talks of the time when his precocious protege slammed a punch - bag clean through a ceiling and how he is the only boxer in the country who knocks out opponents without softening them up first.

Nobody is sure who's going to win. Some reckon Williams' southpaw stance might upset Taylor. Others say that the columnist-cum-boxer might be too cool for the fiery Welshman.

The outside world might not be warmly interested, but for the first time in many years British fans have really got something to shout about.

Hawks, Dogs Open Series On Sunday

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP)—Moncton Hawks and Windsor Bulldogs open their best-of-seven Allan Cup semi-finals here Sunday afternoon but there are still some wrinkles to be ironed out.

The second game is scheduled Monday, the third game Wednesday and the fourth game next Saturday.

The fourth game is the one causing concern in Windsor. The Hawks apparently do not want to play on Good Friday or Easter Sunday if they must but feel a Saturday game would be financial suicide.

There is a possibility that a Saturday game would have to tangle with a Stanley Cup playoff telecast and the Bulldogs know it would hurt the game. Also, Sunday afternoon is the traditional Windsor hockey date.

When the Hawks arrive here, Bulldog officials will try to persuade them and the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association that playing Easter Sunday afternoon would benefit all parties.

The fifth game if necessary will be Monday, April 15 and other games would be Wednesday, April 17 and Friday, April 19.

The winner of the series will meet the western Canadian champs in a best-of-seven set for the Allan Cup.

Ensign O'Toole Keel-Hauled Raising Ire of Jones Boy

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — "They talk about actors being childish," said Dean Jones angrily. "What about networks and sponsors?"

The slender, personable actor was reacting to the news that his show, Ensign O'Toole, would not return to NBC for a second season.

"I don't understand it," said Jones, shaking his head. "The ratings were good, the critical reaction was favorable, the public liked the show. O'Toole is a good series; I know it is. And yet we got dropped."

How did it happen?

"Childishness. The sponsors wanted to move to a later time period, to pick up a more mature audience. The network wanted to keep the show where it was, Sunday at 7. Neither side would give in, so the sponsors cancelled."

NBC RELENTS

"Then the network said they could have another time, Wednesday at 8:30. But the sponsors wouldn't reconsider."

There was still hope that CBS would toss a lifeline to the troubled Ensign. That prospect found Jones in a dilemma.

"When your show goes only a single season, that means it's a flop," he said. "I would like it to continue. If only to prove that it was a good show.

"On the other hand, I long for freedom. I don't like the idea of knowing that I have to work so many weeks at the same job. I don't like to be fenced in."

Jones's career demonstrates that. He spent three of his early years at MGM, where he worked more than any other actor on the lot, but to little avail. He asked to be let out, had a fling at Broadway in a flop with Jane Fonda and a hit Under the Yum-Yum Tree.

"A Kind of Loving" Brings a New Wave of Realism to the Screen

One of the most interesting and revealing films to emerge from the new-wave school of British film-making hits opens Monday when Anglo Amalgamated's latest release, "A Kind of Loving," comes to the Park Theatre for its first Belleville and district showings.

Set against a background of present-day prosperity in Lancashire, "A Kind of Loving" is the bitter-sweet story of a young draughtsman's search for his ideal love and how this leads to an unhappy marriage wrecked by a jealous mother-in-law. But the couple decide to settle in a place of their own and hope for "a kind of loving."

Alan Bates, the most-talked-about young star of the moment, has the starring role of Vic Brown, the draughtsman whose search for love leads to Ingrid Rothwell, an employee in his company. Ingrid, played by newcomer June Ritchie making her screen debut, falls in love with Vic, with the blind belief that she will find herself pregnant, and Vic regretfully marries her. Her miscarriage leaves Vic with the bitter thought "I didn't have to marry her" and lashed by the acid-tongued remarks of a new mother-in-law, portrayed by famous character actress Thora Hird, Vic runs away, only to return with a more mature and adult outlook to face married life.

In the production of "A Kind of Loving" nothing has been spared to achieve harsh reality. The director, John Schlesinger, whose documentary features have won world-wide awards, has used all his new and startling directing techniques for this, his first full-length film, to achieve the desired effect. In particular Schlesinger preferred to use real-life people instead of actors for some of the scenes — and his distinct use of close-ups has already created much admiration in the film industry. Producer Joseph Janni, whose many successes include "The Glass Mountain" and "A Town Like Alice", together with the famous scriptwriting team of Keith Waterhouse and Willis Hall, has brought all the realism of Stan Barstow's best-selling novel to the screen.

A Joseph Janni production, "A Kind of Loving" stars Alan Bates, with Thora Hird, and introduces June Ritchie in her first screen role. Adapted from the novel by Stan Barstow, "A Kind of Loving" was produced by Joseph Janni and directed by John Schlesinger from a screenplay by Keith Waterhouse and Willis Hall. The film is released by Anglo Amalgamated Film Distributors Ltd.

On the same program an air force hilarious comedy, "On the Fiddle," with the greatest line-up in years starring Sean Connery, Alfred Lynch, Cecil Parker, Wilfred Hyde White, Stanley Holloway, Kathleen Harrison and Eleanor Summerfield.

One complete show starts at 7:30, "On the Fiddle" shown at 7:35 and "A Kind of Loving", at 9:25 p.m.

Wolves Nip Hull-Ottawa Lead 2-0

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Although Hull-Ottawa Canadiens' defence was strengthened Friday night by the return of Jacques Laperriere from Montreal, their offence didn't take advantage and the Canadiens lost 1-0 to Sudbury Wolves.

As a result the upstart Wolves, who finished third during the season well behind the second-place Canadiens, took a commanding 2-0 lead in their best - of - five Eastern Professional Hockey League semi-final series.

Laperriere and Terry Harper were called up by the parent Montreal Canadiens at the end of the National Hockey League season and for the Stanley Cup semi - finals against Toronto Maple Leafs, which the Leafs won four games to one.

Laperriere's return helped the defence, which limited the Wolves to 24 shots on goal, but it didn't seem to help the offence, which was inspired to only 22 shots on Gerry Cheevers.

Cheevers, however, managed to make a few difficult saves as he picked up his first shutout of the season.

Paul Andrea scored the only goal of the game, beating Cesare Maniago in the Hull-Ottawa net early in the second period.

The third game of the series will be tonight in Ottawa.

If a fourth game is necessary it will be played in Sudbury Sunday afternoon.

Paul Brown Goes To Eagles

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A syndicate headed by Paul Brown, former coach and general manager of Cleveland Browns, probably will buy Philadelphia Eagles of the National Football League for between $4,500,000 and $5,000,000—it has been learned.

A source close to the Eagles says he is confident a majority of the 89 stockholders will vote to sell.

In Cleveland, Arthur Modell, president of the Browns, who fired Brown in January, cleared the way for the deal by saying Friday he will release Brown from a contract obligation.

Brown, who would take over as general manager and coach of the Eagles, has six years remaining on a 10-year contract as vice-president of the Cleveland team at an estimated $70,000 a year.

The Eagles earned $500,000 in the last two years, making them one of the more profitable franchises in the NFL.

For April 8

Aries (March 21 to April 19) Spiritual reinforcement desirable. Your surroundings can now spell out the beauteous rhythm of nature. Attend church of choice to provide inspiration. Basically, a day to gather strength.

Taurus (April 20 to May 20) Much in your favor. Your choices in recent past bear fruit. Others admit you were right. Now, swing into greater action with basic plans. Profit from previous mistakes in personal life.

Gemini (May 21 to June 21) You can feel others are attracted, that you are winning your way. Stress confidence, harmony. Spotlight on home, present, being with family. Take steps toward future security.

Cancer (June 22 to July 21) You can get your way. Remain close to home. Excellent for gracious entertaining . . . for dealing with women. Like Aries, gather in spiritual allies. Good time to find your places.

Leo (July 23 to August 21) Plus day for participation in sports. Also good for picnics, travel, visiting relatives. Ideas come fast. Take notes. Make resolutions, and keep them! Golden Rule spotlighted.

Virgo (August 22 to Sept. 22) Be active in social affairs. Study, read, learn. Share talents, opinions. Excellent for fellowship, getting to know surroundings. Give knowledge and you will also receive.

Libra (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Emotional cross-currents evident. But your cycle is still high. Display sense of humor. Be independent, original. Be a leader, not a follower. This is your day.

Scorpio (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Make sure "foundations" are solid, including promises. Hap-hazard planning won't do. Others may wax poetic. But, when chips are down, you may have to do job yourself.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Key is understanding spiritual values. Means don't take narrow, material view. Look and really see. Day to enhance brotherhood, to grow and mature. Be especially considerate of family.

Capricorn (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Check details, especially where community and church projects are concerned. Live up to promises, responsibilities. Accept honors with pride. Give credit where due.

Aquarius (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Fine for outdoor sports, travel, visits, vacation. Get the most from money, time, by planning. Evening features exchange of ideas through stimulating conversation. Be alert.

Pisces (Feb. 20 to March 20) Today you are able to find answers to puzzling questions. Fine for reading, writing and for delving into motives of associates, friends. Profitable information forthcoming.

If today is your birthday you are sincere, fair, have a driving desire to promote justice, equality. Would make fine social worker.

GENERAL TENDENCIES:— Spotlight on Libra individuals. Special days, 9 Aries. Watch public relations. Make sure you are understood.

FOR APRIL 8

Aries (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19): Full Moon spotlights public, legal agreements, sales possibilities. Day to realize you must account for all promises. Key is responsibility. Good intentions not enough. Follow through!

Taurus (Apr. 20 to May 20): Service, willingness to help underdog highlighted by Full Moon position. Be especially considerate of those working with or serving you. A little understanding goes very far.

Gemini (May 21 to June 21): Full Moon promises romance, chance to show real feelings. Stress confidence, honor, generosity. Day for leadership, companionship and love. Nothing halfway, complete projects!

Cancer (June 22 to July 21): Practically stressed today. Live up to potential. Set constructive forces in motion. See those in authority. Emphasize your plans, hopes, willingness to work. Spotlight on achievement.

Leo (July 22 to Aug. 21): Put off journeys, if possible. Don't go off on wild goose chase. Channel energies. Exercise self-discipline. Better for finishing projects than for hurrying to new ones. Be thorough.

Ratepayers Endorse New Packing Plant

DESERONTO — On Friday night of last week an organization meeting of the Ratepayers' Association was held in the Legion Hall. Chairman R. Neal Chisholm opened the meeting and the main topic for discussion was the proposed meat packing plant operated by Mr. O. Chisholm of Belleville who was present and told of the proposed plans of the packing house and his wishing to locate in Deseronto.

He answered several questions asked from the floor and advised the gathering that he could not, under federal licence operate a plant that would cause any obnoxious odors.

The meeting was in full accord with the locating of the plant in Deseronto and a recommendation was passed unanimously that the town council be advised of the wishes of the meeting.

The gathering of some 90 ratepayers felt that they could do a great deal to bring about better co-operation of the people with the council.

It was decided by the association to hold meetings monthly and to attempt to build up the membership. Any ratepayer attending the meetings will be heard and any problem discussed.

Several persons spoke to the meeting on matters that concerned the welfare of the town.

During the evening a membership committee was set up, and at the next meeting their recommendations for the executive will be submitted. The regular meeting night was set for the fourth Monday of each month and the next meeting will be held in the Legion Hall on April 25th.

Garden Notes
Recognition Through Travel

By FLORA M. SAVILLE

Distance lends enchantment to many things. We are inclined to value imported plants above native material. A look at the history of ornamental plants will give us a new respect for the plants that grew on our own continent.

Many of the best plants had to travel to England to be recognized before they gained acceptance. This began long ago when explorers and missionaries collected native wild flowers and sent them back to English gardeners.

In 1696 the herbalist John Gerard recorded that the Yucca gloriosa and Thuya occidentalis (American arborvitae) had been introduced to England.

John Bannister, a missionary in Virginia from 1675 to 1713, sent back to Doctor Henry Compton and the bishop of London many seeds and plants which he grew in his garden. These included Magnolia, Rose cider, Dogwoods, Sumac and Liquidamber.

HOLIDAY TRIP

At one time such garden plants as lilies, delphiniums and roses all came from abroad across the Atlantic Ocean to us from England. Now these same plants are being shipped east from our continent to the British Isles and the continent of Europe. Even the specialty of our hybridists but the British hybridists have been busy with their native lilies too. Many were valued in their native form but the new hybrids are even better.

These include those from the famous plant breeder, Jan Douglas. He sent California poppies, Clarkia and Satin flower to the Chelsea Show.

Other American exports were Coreopsis maritima, Nemophalia (California blue bells), Gaillardias (blue Bedder), Phacelia campanularia, Silene pendula, Nicotiana alata, Godetia grandiflora, also known as Oenegra tea and Bee balm, and Phlox drummondii. All these are treasured by the British gardener.

Improved plants are well represented too in our exports. There is the Gaillardia, Coreopsis tickseed, Rudbeckia sanuosa (annual garden sunflowers), Cosa flower (Bachelor's Button) and Gypsophilia companulata, Phlox Drummondi, Nasturtia dichyma, also known as Oenegra tea and Bee balm, and Phlox drummondi. All these are treasured by the British gardener.

We now import their hybrids back as Perennial asters.

Many of our Canadian poets, I think it was Archibald Lampman, and J. G. Sime, saw beauty in a field of weeds than all the hot house gardens ever.

It is well to remember that all our lovely garden flowers and trees were sent to us from the old country.

Canada's Fate Now In Hands Of Electors

Record Vote Expected Good Weather Forecast

By BEN WARD
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Canadians vote today in a federal general election billed by political leaders as one of the most crucial voting tests in the nation's history. A record turn out is expected.

Good weather is forecast for most of the country.

The burning questions:

Can Prime Minister Diefenbaker's Progressive Conservatives hold off the Liberals led by Lester B. Pearson?

Will a majority government be put in charge of national affairs or would the voter indecision of last June be continued?

The answers rest with a record 9,875,473 eligible voters electing the 265 members for the House of Commons in the 26th Parliament from among 1,057 candidates—another record. Polls open for 11 hours from 9 a.m. to 7 p.m. local standard time.

This is the fourth federal election in less than six years and the 26th since Confederation—in 1867. The government elected today may well be the nation's centennial administration.

AWAITS AT HOME

Mr. Diefenbaker awaits election returns in his home riding of Prince Albert in central Saskatchewan. Mr. Pearson is in Ottawa. Social Credit Leader Thompson in Red Deer, Alta., and New Democratic Leader T. C. Douglas in his Vancouver-area riding of Burnaby-Coquitlam.

The campaign fell to a whimper during the weekend as the four party leaders put the final touches on their election drives.

Probably the most intriguing question in today's vote is whether Mr. Diefenbaker can hold power in the new Parliament.

He came to power in June of 1957, heading a minority government which ended a 22-year-old Liberal reign. He called an other election for March, 1958, and swept 208 seats for the biggest majority in Canadian history.

Last June the government was branded back into a minority situation, winning 116 seats while the Liberals doubled their strength to 100.

That election also marked a resurgence by two minor parties. The right-wing Social Credit group won 30 seats after being blanked in 1958 and the Socialist - leaning New Democrats took 19, an increase from eight.

THE STAGE

Mr. Diefenbaker stayed in power with the backing of Social Credit until 1962 when the three opposition parties united on a confidence issue in the Commons and overthrew the government, setting the stage for today's election.

Voter interest was built up to

20 Fatalities Across Canada During Weekend

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Half of Canada's provinces spent a fatality-free weekend and the others reported reduced accident tolls to give the country one of its lowest fatality counts this year—20 deaths.

A Canadian Press survey from 6 p.m. Friday to midnight Sunday local times showed two-thirds of the weekend deaths occurred on the highways.

Ontario led with five traffic fatalities and three drownings. Quebec recorded three deaths on the roads, one drowning and one death in a fall.

In Alberta, three persons died in traffic while Nova Scotia reported two traffic deaths. British Columbia had two accidental deaths—in traffic and a fire.

There were no fatalities reported in Newfoundland, Prince Edward Island, New Brunswick, Manitoba and Saskatchewan.

The survey does not include known slayings or suicides, industrial accidents or natural deaths.

Lung Cells Kept in Test-Tubes Affected by Smog and Cigarettes

LA JOLLA, Calif. (AP) — Smog, the bane of cities, and cigarette smoke, the pleasure of millions, play havoc with human lung cells growing in test-tubes, a scientist finds.

Irritants in the smog make the lung cells grow and multiply about as fast as a known cancer-causing chemical does, says Dr. Charles M. Pomerat of the Pasadena, Calif., Foundation for Medical Research.

And lung cells exposed to cigarette smoke show far more breaks in the chromosomes, the carriers of heredity, than cells not exposed to the smoke, he told an American Cancer Society seminar for science writers. Breaks in that break chromosomes, like X-ray chemicals, are known to produce cancers.

This test-tube or tissue culture method of growing lung cells promises a good test to analyze proposed smog remedies, Dr. Pomerat said. Comparisons can be made, for example, between samples of gas collected before or after going through a device designed to filter out automobile exhaust gases.

Dr. Pomerat's team also has found the chromosomes in living lung cells can be damaged within half a minute by exposure to smoke from even a few puffs from one cigarette.

This damage is "significantly less" when the cells are exposed to the smoke from a filtered cigarette, or a king-size cigar tte, he said.

TWO MONTREAL FIREMEN PERISH UNDER DEBRIS

Ceiling, Two Floors Collapsed on Them

MONTREAL (CP) — Two Montreal firemen died Saturday when a ceiling and two floors of a building collapsed on top of them.

Two more were rescued in an eight-hour, tortuous operation by firemen who had to grind their way through a tangle of debris to get to the trapped men, making sure to prevent a further collapse.

Patrick McManus, 37, and Marcel Remillard, 30, were crushed to death in the sudden avalanche which took place after firemen had the blaze under control in the annex building of the large Woodhouse Furniture Store in downtown Montreal.

A refrigerator speeding down the slope of the collapsed second floor ceiling knocked Fireman Gilles Menard from the second floor to the sidewalk and knocked debris on top of him. He suffered a broken back.

Trapped with the three collapse, Fireman Adrien Gingras, 29, was located, pinned down by a beam. Another fireman, Robert Leggett, 34, was heard yelling from a tangle of pipes, wires and cedar shingles.

CRAWLS ON STOMACH

A young woman doctor, Geneviève Dorion, on duty at Notre Dame Hospital, entered the building and crawled on her stomach under the debris to administer morphine to the firemen until they could be rescued.

She remained up the scene, although admitting the great danger, until the last body was brought out 12 hours later.

A civic funeral has been tentatively scheduled for Wednesday.

Fire Director Armand Durrette said the collapse was caused by the weight of a great damage of water trapped in the top storey.

Rescue crews used sawing equipment, drills and much muscular effort as they cut their way through steel, wood, and mortar and dislodged mattresses and refrigerators on their way to the trapped men. They had to prop every foot of the passage to prevent further collapse.

Gingras was freed five hours after the collapse. He suffered a broken ankle.

TALKS TO RESCUERS

Leggett, trapped much deeper in the rubble, kept his spirits up by talking to his rescuers, including his father, himself a veteran of 31 years service in the fire department.

He was freed eight hours after the collapse and is recovering in hospital from a dislocated hip and shock.

When the buildings were recovered, the pile of rubble—all carefully extricated from the debris—covered 25 feet high and included washing machines, refrigerators, office sets and other pieces of furniture as well as beams and bricks.

Commons and overdrafts preliminary damage estimates at $500,000. The building had been exproprietated by the city and was due to be torn down shortly to make way for widening of the street between the main store and the annex.

In hourly stages a surging mob of spectators, estimated by police at more than 5,000 also interferred with the rescue work.

The crowd kept pushing close to the building despite police efforts to hold them back. Several fights broke out when some

Terrorist Group Foiled In Try to Blow up Tower

MONTREAL (CP)—The terrorist Front de Liberation Quebecois struck again during the weekend, but police neutralized the explosive bundle of 24 sticks of dynamite before it could knock out a vital communications atop Mount Royal.

Splashes of red paint at the foot of the 364 - foot tower spelled out Liberte and FLQ—insignia of the terrorist group whose "suicide commandos" have pledged themselves to achieve Quebec independence by violent means.

The tower carries Montreal and provincial police communications, the Montreal fire department and federal transport department's radio systems and the broadcasts of two private television stations — English-language CFCF-TV and French-language CFTM-TV. Also being installed are facilities for the CBC's English and French-language stations.

Leon Perusse, a CBC technician, discovered the bomb Saturday afternoon and police immediately arrived at 5 p.m. The timer, an alarm clock with the housing removed, was set for 6 o'clock.

Sgt. Leo Plouffe, the police department's bomb expert, said it appeared that the explosives had been put together by "a professional" but planted on the tower by an amateur.

The 24 sticks of dynamite were in two packs of 12 marked "left" and "right," which indicated they were to be twisted in two separate legs of the tower. "Instead, they were both tied to one leg," Sgt. Plouffe said.

The FLQ has claimed to be responsible for recent acts of sabotage, including a minor explosion in the federal income tax building in downtown Montreal and a damaged rail on the CNR main line south of Quebec City shortly before a train carrying Prime Minister Diefenbaker was to pass through.

Following these incidents last week, a special meeting of Montreal police with representatives of Quebec Provincial Police and the RCMP was held to plan an all-out campaign against terrorism.

Pro-Red Pathet Lao Fights Neutralists, Former Allies

CP from Reuters-AP

VIENTIANE, Laos — Pathet Lao neutralist forces have been driven out of the key town of Xieng Khouang on the Plain of Jars by the pro-Communist Pathet Lab and are appealing for reinforcements, it was reported today.

Reliable sources said the skirmishing on the plain had last grown into fierce fighting with 5,000 neutralist troops battling about 10,000 Pathet Lao.

Reports of the loss of Xieng Khouang, former neutralist headquarters in central Laos, came as Aviar Sigh, Indian chairman of the three-nation Laotian neutrality, said the situation on the plain was "grave."

Right-wing military sources said neutralist leader Gen. Kong Le had asked for battalions to be sent to help the beleaguered neutralists after the Pathet Lao, their former allies, had driven them from Communist North Vietnam to join the Pathet Lao in the attack on Kong Le's forces.

The sources said the neutralists had come under heavy attack in their retreat to the Plain of Jars and airstrip and many of them had been captured.

Since last year's Geneva agreement ending fighting between right-wing forces on the one hand and neutralist and pro-Communist forces on the other, relations between the neutralists and their former allies have steadily deteriorated.

Differences came to a head with the murder of Kong Le's aide, Col. Letsana Vongsavong.

PRIME MINISTER AWAITS RESULTS IN HOME RIDING

Met Old Friends Attended Church,

PRINCE ALBERT, Sask. (CP) — Prime Minister Diefenbaker awaited the nation's decision today on his self-styled "all-the floor campaign" in his fourth straight leader's mandate.

If both Mr. Diefenbaker and Mrs. Dorothy Wingham, who will equal Sir John A. Macdonald's record of four straight victories.

In the northern Saskatchewan town where the lanky Prairie lawyer began his political career in 1925, he will learn his fate in a special car on a railroad siding.

Mr. Diefenbaker and his wife, who finished a five-week campaign Saturday night in Sarnia, Ont., arrived here early Sunday morning by chartered transport department plane. They put in an easy day.

The prime minister caught up on his sleep, read some congratulatory telegrams, took a 35-minute brisk stroll around town and then attended evening service at first Baptist Church.

Today, he was voting at 9:00 a.m. CST and intended to do more "main-steering" — stirring and blending interest to shake hands in stops and on sidewalks, take a quick look at some points of interest and record his voting answers.

OFFERS CONTRAST

Sunday was a chilly, cloudy day with sidewalks dotted by the pools and mud spots, a contrast with the campaign finale in sunny southwestern Ontario Saturday where the prime minister by special train stopped at 13 points from Galt to Sarnia.

At each stop, he shook hands and at some bit hard at his campaign message.

The Liberals had obstructed Parliament. Despite their previous 1963 economic progress spoke for itself and 1963 might be even better.

British Cripple Cuban Exiles, Seizing Bases

Air Strip on Tiny Isle In Bahamas Discovered

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Cuban rebel sources admitted today that a British crackdown on bases in the Bahama islands has severely crippled their operations against Fidel Castro.

Informants said the raiders lost at least four bases in the last two weeks, including an air strip on a tiny island where small planes belonging to Cuba's Agrarian Reform Institute picked up supplies and flew them to anti-Castro guerrillas in Cuba.

Pilots of the planes are said to be members of a Cuban underground network in Matanzas province.

Losses included a base at Williams Cay, another in the Anguilla Cays between Cay Sal and Andros Island, a third in the lower Exuma group and a fourth whose location was not specified.

"We cannot help but admit that we have suffered a tremendous blow," a spokesman said. "Important fighting is going on and we have been put out of action and our bases have been wiped out."

A source said about 170 men were involved in the area where the British and Americans have cracked down to prevent raids on Cuba.

BRITISH DENY

A British spokesman denied the action was a combined operation involving British and American forces.

Commodore J. E. L. Martin, senior naval officer in West Indies who is in charge of military operations in the islands, told a reporter in Nassau: "We don't ask the U.S. Coast Guard to fly off and give any assistance needed. They did in fact fly reconnaissance flights for us but there was no further information."

The frigate Londonderry was due in Nassau today with nine men picked up last Friday on Ambrose Island, about 70 miles southeast of Nassau. Arms, ammunition and equipment was confiscated.

Immigration officials released five men at Miami late Sunday, including Maj. Eloy Gutierrez Menoyo, 29, one of the most important rebel leaders. They were captured Saturday after the coast guard after a chase near Orange Cay in the Bahamas.

Another raider arrested by the British was Capt. Evelio Duque, leader of a band of 17 survivors of a bloody New Year's week ago and returned to Miami Friday.

Birmingham Policemen and Dogs Rout Prayer-Marching Negroes

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP)— Negro leaders have urged renewed desegregation efforts in this Deep - South city after police dogs were used to end violence during demonstrations Thursday.

At least 29 negroes were arrested as police halted a prayer march led by Rev. A. D. King, brother of integration leader Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.

More demonstrations were scheduled today. Blind singer Al Hibbler—of You'll Never Walk Alone fame—was due to arrive. He has volunteered to help in the desegregation effort.

Violence broke out when a knife-wielding Negro tried to slash a police dog. The dog turned the man to the ground and a surging crowd of more than 200 negroes moved forward to come to the man's rescue.

About 50 policemen and at least six other dogs quickly jumped into the fray. The crowd immediately broke and ran, with the dogs and patrolmen at its heels.

'Vast and Historic Significance'

Sees China Unmasked by Indian War

PARIS (Reuters)—U.S. State Secretary Dean Rusk told the opening session of a conference of the Southeast Asia Treaty Organization here today that "the blatant aggression of Communist China on the Indian border has vast and historic significance."

Rusk said: "Suffice it to say that it revealed for the whole world Communist China's readiness to turn even on those who have tried to be a friend, and to resort to overt aggression whenever its expansionist aims are thereby served."

French Premier Georges Pompidou referred to the fighting in Laos—which overshadowed the SEATO conference—in his welcoming speech to the visiting ministers.

Pompidou said the process of subversion still had not been checked in the former French colony of Indochina—now comprising South and North Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia—and this remained a "formidable issue."

But he said SEATO had roped with the tasks so far assigned to it, and stood today as "a firm institution."

Rusk assured the conference the United States fully supported the objectives of last year's Geneva agreement aimed at making and keeping Laos neutral, and declared: "We have strictly complied with their terms."

He said: "We are not satisfied, however, that the other side has done so, particularly the requirement that all foreign military forces be withdrawn."

Rusk said this emphasized the importance of freedom for the international control commission of India Canada and Poland to conduct effective, unhindered investigations throughout Laos, particularly in those parts controlled by the pro-Communist Pathet Lao now closed to the commission.

"Until there is co-operation in this respect, and until the Communist - supported Pathet Lao

Well-Dressed Deer May Be Wearing Collar Next Fall

The well-dressed deer may be wearing a collar next hunting season. The collar will bear a serial number to show where the deer spent the winter.

It's all part of a program to find out how large an area each deer ranges at times. Lands & Forests officials in the Tweed district last month set up several "scenting" log trails in known deer yards. When the deer is caught, a short struggle will free him, but with the identifying collar still around his neck. The collar won't harm the deer or restrict its movements.

If the deer is shot during hunting season the hunter will be expected to turn the collar with some information, over to the Department of Lands and Forests.

This year's program is on a very small scale, planned more to test the efficiency of the scent method in tagging than to trace the deer. The method has shown results in the U.S., with 25% of the deer killed being tagged.

Early Sunday morning some property owners involved in the dispute decided to take the issue into their own hands — by digging a drainage ditch across the improved property. In the action that followed a street-light was blown out with a shotgun blast; a rose trellis damaged and blows swapped.

Provincial police sent two cruisers to the village to sort the incident out and officers say they and local police stayed on the spot for nearly four hours.

"It's what happens when you take the law into your own hands," said a local officer.

No charges were reported laid.

Water Dispute Ends in Scuffle At Stirling

STIRLING (Special) — A water dispute in this village boiled over early Sunday morning in a fracas that brought provincial police intervention.

The incident was described as "neighbor" trouble and today was reported as smoothed over. However, source of the trouble still remains.

Police say it goes back to improvement of a private lot in the village which resulted in allegedly interfering with a municipal ditch. Drainage from the ditch now is insufficient to carry the spring runoff and the result has been flooding of a lumber yard and other property in the area.

Matters came to a head last week when village concurred with a legal opinion that it had no responsibility in the matter.

Trans-Atlantic Swindlers Get Total of $2,250

TORONTO (CP)—An Englishman who just arrived in Canada sold police he was swindled out of about $2,250 by two men thousands of miles apart.

Morris Garrett, 31, said that while still in England, he had given a man about $1,500 to invest for him in Chatham, Ont. The man was supposed to be a Canadian seaman.

Garrett said the man arranged to meet in Toronto later, but the man didn't keep the appointment.

Another man in Toronto told Garrett he was a friend of the man in England and would arrange the meeting in Chatham after Garrett bought a new car.

This man took $750 from Garrett and went to pick up the car. He did not return.

Vote, Don't Just Squawk Is Election Day Appeal

Thanks in a "get out the vote" gimmick sponsored by the local Junior Chamber of Commerce, Belleville voters today were being reminded of their duty at the polls.

A sidewalk sandwich man, attired in a Donald Duck costume, reminded voters that they had the right and privilege to cast their ballots in the Federal election.

At the same time there was the suggested reminder that if they didn't go to the polls they didn't have a right to squawk if things didn't go well after the election.

"I don't vote, I just squawk," was the message carried by the Donald Duck caricature.

As of noon today a "very good turnout of voters was reported throughout the city.

But as is the case in most modern day elections the bulk of the voting will be done after four o'clock this afternoon.

PORT ARTHUR (CP) — One man was charged with capital murder and a second with noncapital murder following the discovery of two bodies, the victims of separate slayings, within 13 hours here Saturday.

Arthur Frank Smith, 40, was charged with capital murder after his 39-year-old wife, Billy, was found strangled at their south-end home. The body was discovered in the bedroom of the two-storey frame dwelling by her unemployed husband.

Their two children, girls aged nine and 12 years old, were taken in by the Children's Aid Society.

Dr. de Groot refused to give her name to reporters, saying she was not sure how her job she wanted no publicity. She was identified by policemen at the scene.

The woman doctor came out of the building several times during the afternoon and each time was their precarious passage through the debris.

It was not whether it was dangerous inside, she replied "Well, it's not safe." She held out her hand, stained with soot, and it was shaking visibly.

She declined to give details of age and background.

Tall and dark-haired, she appeared in her 30s.

Before each trip into the building, she calmly and methodically chose the equipment and drugs she needed.

Dr. de Groot spoke briefly to a reporter, however, about the trapped men while she grabbed a cup of coffee in a nearby small restaurant after her first trip.

HOLD UP MORALE

"They're both amazing," said the bilingual doctor while lighting a cigarette. One is pinned across his legs and the other is completely buried—we can't see him at all. But he's been helping to both of them. Their morale is good and the buried man is still talking to the rescuers."

After she finished her coffee and ground out her cigarette, she looked at her torn aytons and said with a tired smile: "I wonder if the fire department will give me $1.25 for some new nylons."

Had high praise for Dr. de Groot.

Television Star Will Be Seeking Compensation

LONDON (AP)—British television star Sophie Gravina received safely in London from Berlin Saturday night aboard his rented plane and prepared to posed the question of compensation "as a result of this fantastic affair."

On a flight into Berlin Tuesday, Soviet fighters buzzed his plane. When he disregarded signals to land, one Soviet fighter fired six warning bursts. The Russians tried to keep him from flying out again, but then allowed the flight to the West, and Green, 45, flew unmolested to London Saturday.

"A question I shall ask the prime minister when I write him a letter Monday will be, who is going to compensate me to the tune of £250 ($750) as a result of this fantastic affair," Green said on his arrival.

Green—born in England but a Canadian citizen — said he wants compensation for a London-Berlin fare by commercial airliner, as well as the cost of chartering a plane from London to Grimsby Friday. He had to return to Britain during the week for an engagement and left his private plane behind until he could pick it up Saturday.

Moscow radio meanwhile accused the West of raising "a noisy anti - Soviet campaign" over the incident. In a home service broadcast, Moscow said Green was flying "without any timetable arrangements or any preparation on the part of the Soviet section in the air safety centre."

Ron Chapman, of the Quinte Aqua Divers, empties a bucket of gravel pumped up from Poplar Bar, in Lake Ontario, into a sample tray held by marine biologist Jack Christie, of the Fisheries Research Station at Glenora. The gravel was pumped up Saturday in a search for the whitefish spawning grounds in the area.

LOOKING FOR FISH EGGS — Marine biologist Jack Christie of the Fisheries Research Station at Glenora, and diver Earl Dickmoether, of the Quinte Aqua Divers, search for whitefish eggs in a tray of gravel brought up from Poplar Bar, in Lake Ontario. Earl brought up the gravel Saturday, working with a pump from the fisheries research tug Namacush, as part of a program to establish the location of the whitefish spawning grounds in the lake.

Never Anything Like Fuss Over Churchill, Eisenhower

By W. B. RAGSDALE Jr.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Britain and the United States have been trading honors and gifts ever since tempers cooled from the War of 1812, but there's never been anything like the fuss over Dwight D. Eisenhower and Sir Winston S. Churchill.

Britain piled honors on Gen. Eisenhower after he led the Allies to victory over Hitler's Germany in the Second World War. He received honorary degrees galore and was made freeman of Edinburgh and the ancient burgh of Maypole.

King George VI proclaimed Eisenhower a Grand Knight of the Bath, and Scotland gave him a permanent home—a 180-year-old castle and 2,000 acres of shooting preserves in Ayrshire.

OFTEN HONORED

Churchill received many honorary degrees and other honors in the U.S. When Eisenhower became president he struck off a special medal to honor Britain's Second World War prime minister.

Now Congress has voted to make the 88-year-old Churchill an honorary citizen of the United States—first man to be so honored.

Churchill will be looking on from across the ocean Tuesday when President Kennedy signs the measure. The ceremony will be beamed to England by the Telstar satellite.

Apparently, all Churchill will have to show for the honor will be a certificate from the president. He won't be able to vote in U.S. elections, and he won't be given a castle, or even a house. But then he won't have to pay U.S. income taxes, either.

Credit Union Chapter Hears Oshawa Man

The monthly meeting of the Quinte and District Credit Union Chapter was held last Wednesday at the Club Canara.

Nine credit unions were represented. They included Wilson Concrete Products, Stephens-Adamson, Civil Service, Trenton; C.N.R., Belleville; Frankford and District; Picton, Norwich, C.P.R., Trenton, and Belleville General Hospital.

The guest speaker was William Howie, assistant manager of the Auto Workers' Credit Union, Oshawa. His topic, "A Delinquency Program" dealt with procedures on how to handle delinquent loans. He mentioned that there were no cut and dried rules. Each delinquent member must be handled at an individual. He said that 90 percent of delinquent members had a definite problem. This problem must first be determined, then a suitable solution found. In handling the delinquent member the credit union official should be friendly, open-minded, business-like, and helpful. Proper attention must always be paid to the individual dignity of the member.

Frogmen Aid Fish Experts Hunt for Spawning Grounds Of Whitefish at Poplar Bar

Where do Lake Ontario whitefish lay their eggs? Somewhere near Poplar Bar off the south shore of Prince Edward county, apparently, but the exact spot is unknown. The Department of Lands and Forests wants to find out, though, because whitefish catches in the lake have dropped from about 2,800,000 pounds in 1924 to about 300,000 now. More important, the catch is fluctuating from year to year, and some fisheries experts fear the fish may eventually disappear.

Attempts have been made to restock the lake artificially, but the results were not satisfactory. For some reason, the hatchery-raised fish made little difference to the total catch.

The search for spawning grounds is part of a program to find out just what is happening to the fish and the spawning grounds after Poplar Bar are important because, according to the theory, the fish shouldn't spawn there.

Normally, whitefish eggs are laid on a gravel bottom, close to a protected inlet. About Easter, when the eggs usually hatch, the fry can swim into the sun-warmed water of the inlet, and live on plankton. But near Poplar Bar there are no such inlets, and the fry shouldn't be able to live. Fish in spawning condition have been caught in the area, however, and there are no known spawning grounds within about 50 miles, as the fish swims. Stranger still, there is reason to believe that the Poplar Bar area has produced fish when other, apparently more suitable, spawning grounds have failed.

FROGMEN SEARCH

The reasons can't be found until the exact location of the spawning area is known, and the Department of Lands and Forests Fisheries Research Station, at Glenora is looking for them. Saturday, for the second time during the winter, a search of the Poplar Bar area was made by frogmen from the Quinte Aqua Divers Club, working from the Fisheries Research tug Namaycush.

The first step of the search was to find the gravel beds on which the fish might be expected to lay their egg. There are only a few gravel beds on the smooth rock of the lake bottom in that area. Diver Earl Dickmoether, secretary-manager of the Belleville Chamber of Commerce was towed behind the tug, looking for likely spots. As he passed over a gravel bed, Earl released a marker buoy.

To inspect each bed, Earl "vacuumed" the gravel with the intake hose of a water pump. The gravel and marine life picked up by the pump were strained from the pump outlet, aboard the boat, alternate diver Ron Chapman and marine biologist Jack Christie went to work then, picking over the loads of gravel brought up from each bed, looking for whitefish eggs.

Several eggs were found Saturday, proving that there are whitefish spawning somewhere nearby. But the exact location is still unknown, except to whitefish.

Next step in the search will be an attempt to catch whitefish fry, trawling with a drogue net and a small boat. Catching the fry won't locate the spawning grounds exactly, but it will indicate where next year's search should concentrate.

Little Flooding, Few Frost Boils Reduce County Roads Maintenance

With the exception of isolated stretches of two roads, the Hastings county roads system survived the spring break-up very well, according to county roads foreman Harold Crosby.

The two county roads which broke up the worst were the 2nd concession of Thurlow from the city limits to the Shannonville gravel, and the suburban road from Belleville to Wallbridge.

The second concession road was the worst along the east end while the Wallbridge Road broke up the worst in the vicinity of Tuckers Woods and at Wallbridge.

Both roads have been passable and county roads crews have been gravelling and grading to get them back in shape.

The Cordova Road north of Marmora also has a number of frost boils, it was stated.

But County roads in the Lonsdale and Read section weathered the spring break up well.

Lack of serious flooding this season has minimized spring roads maintenance to some extent with few washouts to be repaired. Roads employees say they never saw the spring run-off disappear so quickly with so little flooding.

"On the whole we have been fairly lucky," stated the roads foreman.

Boys and Girls Still Walking Around District

Two eleven - year - old Queen Victoria School students, Jimmy Sloot and his friend John Fancy, joined the fad of marathon walking on Saturday when they made a 17-mile walk to Demorestville.

The grade six students left Queen Victoria School at 8.00 a.m. Saturday morning and arrived at their destination at 1.00 p.m. They were returned to Belleville by car, none the worse for their ordeal except for tired feet.

On Sunday, two grade eleven Moira Secondary students joined the fast growing group of walkers by walking from Moira Secondary to Trenton, and back.

Anita Nelischer and Joanne Horlock departed at 10.00 a.m. and arrived back at the school at 7.00 p.m.

The footsore pair were in good spirits after their 27-mile walk, and commented they just wanted to prove that girls could make the walk as easily as the boys have been doing.

Scapegoat

Carl A. Pollock, president of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, told a government sponsored trade conference recently that the problem facing Canadian industry is how to make Canadian workers conscious of the need for exportable goods that are competitive with foreign products in quality, appeal and price.

Substituting the word "manufacturers" for "workers", the same statement could have been made, with more justice, by a union leader to a labor conference. The workers already know of the need for better Canadian products. It is just this need which forces them to buy imports.

Goods compete, or fail to compete in the modern world, on design. Nothing a worker can do will aid foreign sales of goods which are inferior in design to competing goods, and there is little to be done about poor workmanship in goods which are too complex for the price range in which they are to sell.

By demanding from the designers goods adapted to mass production and low costs, however, the manufacturers can move in the right direction. By demanding superior design, too, the manufacturers can produce goods more desirable than their cheaper competitors, and in many cases can eliminate poor workmanship as a problem by eliminating the need for precise workmanship in their designs. If this cannot be accomplished, the manufacturers can at least provide inspections to control workmanship at the source.

The Canadian Manufacturers' Association cannot justify the failure of Canadian manufactured goods in international trade by complaints about employees. It is the job of the men who are members of the C.M.A. to see that the goods produced are competitive, in every way. If they are not willing to accept this responsibility, they could at least take the blame for failure themselves.

Police Want a Change

"The practice of a police officer receiving all or part of his salary from fees is open to abuse," according to Thomas Latten, administrator of the Ontario Police Association. Mr. Latten was a member of a delegation of Ontario policemen which presented a brief last week to Attorney General Fred Cass, urging amendments to the Police Act.

In an interview, Mr. Latten charged that in some Northern Ontario centres police are underpaid, but have the opportunity to make extra money by serving traffic summonses. He said the policemen could collect part of the court costs collected from violators. Mr. Latten told of one case in Ontario where a chief constable and his brother had worked together to move portable stop signs, in order to catch motorists. He said portable stop signs are used in at least four southern Ontario centres.

In Metropolitan Toronto, Mr. Latten charged, police officers are rated on the number of traffic tickets they issue. Police cadets are sometimes told, he said, that they will not become constables if they can't hand out enough tickets.

In the motorists have often complained such systems are in effect, but the complaints of a motorist charged with a violation are often ignored. When an official of the Ontario Police Association makes the same statement, however, it must be considered. If it is established that such practices exist, it is time for a change.

Rough Justice

British colonial officials in the Bahamas and U.S. authorities in Florida and Puerto Rico are co-operating to stop rebel raids on Cuba. Both governments realize the raids can do little harm to Castro, but are a serious threat to Russian-Western relations. They might also be used as a pretext for the return of offensive weapons to Cuban soil.

But the current practice of arresting Cuban exiles as they set out on raids, and releasing them with token punishment, is not effective. The raiders are violating the laws and the hospitality of the countries which have given them refuge.

It would be more effective, perhaps, if the raiders were merely tracked by British or American forces as they set out on raids, and their positions reported to the Cuban authorities as they enter Cuban waters. Castro would be quite happy to deal with them from that point on.

Knowledge and timber shouldn't be much used till they are seasoned.—Oliver Wendell Holmes.

Praising Desultory Reading

Montreal Gazette

Nathanial Hawthorne said that one of the most pleasant experiences of his life was to find himself snowbound in a wayside inn, with nothing to read save a few old books or newspapers which he might find lying about. Under these circumstances reading had to be desultory, rambling, without hard purpose or expected use. It was easy, agreeable, restful — a recreation and escape.

There are those, of course, who frown upon every reading that is not systematic, thorough, informative. For them, all they read is grist for the mill.

These are often the people who would insist that no book can be said to have been read unless it has been read from cover to cover. Skipping or dipping is to them abhorrent. They would not wish to be caught in such crimes themselves. They do not disguise their contempt for those who are found guilty; and they look, in judgment, on those who admit such faults cheerfully.

Yet, there is some reason to doubt whether readers with so grim a will, and so little to relish the most delightful pleasures of literature. It is not merely the amateur scholar, but the unskilled reader, who may like to read how here, now there. More often it may be the well-loved bookman who knows the art and pleasure of "turning the leaves," of finding what he wants.

The French essayist of the sixteenth century, Michel de Montaigne, admitted that his reading was frankly desultory: "If one book bores me, I quickly pick up another." Among his favorites were the minor works of Plutarch and the letters of Seneca. "They hold here this eminence . . ." he explained. "I do not have to sweat at them, and can drop them when I please; for one part does not depend upon or follow the other."

Reading as he wished, he was a happy reader. Just because he favored books with undemanding manners, they were companions with the manners to comfort him in his infirmities.

"For you can't imagine how comforting it is to have them by my side, to be opened when I will; and what refreshment they are to my life."

Nor is it true that he who reads in a desultory way, however confusedly, does not learn informed. Considerable knowledge may be picked up along the way.

Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes (author of "The Autocrat of the Breakfast Table") liked to read an encyclopedia. And he liked to read it not only as a work of reference for some particular point, but to turn from page to page, "I love to read it," he said; "it's so ignorant." He looked up the history of the Bicycle, and then I love to find out the ingredients of ink soups, and all sorts of things which I have never had the time to learn."

More profoundly, the desultory reader may in the end come to enter into the free knowledge of a book, if it is a favorite of his, and if he returns to it again and again. The systematic reader, having once gone through a book from cover to cover, may set it aside "as read," and that is the end of the matter.

But no book worth knowing is ever known for having been read once. A good book should last a lifetime, rarely read from cover to cover, but here and there, again and again. There's no getting to the end of a good book.

Hawthorne knew that. He had a copy of Sir Philip Sidney's Arcadia," which had been given to him from some remote ancestry. He had read it so often during 40 years that it was nearly worn out of its thick leather cover.

But the desultory reader, however loving, rarely wears books he picks up and lays down, will never be left quite as he found them. He who claims to read books from cover to cover or not at all. He will never be guilty of the greater crime of the enormity of his crime.

The desultory reader, however, is not wholly without recourse. He may try saying what Dr. Samuel Johnson once said:

Always a desultory reader, Dr. Johnson was once in the company of a certain Mr. Elphinston, who was talking of some book that was much admired. He asked Dr. Johnson if he had read it.

"I have looked into it," the doctor replied.

"What," insisted Elphinston, "have you not read it through?"

Johnson, offended at being thus pressed, answered tartly: "No, Sir, do you read books through?"

That was a nice note of the flant scepticism. And it was just what Mr. Elphinston deserved.

Visible Scar Is Too Old

Stratford Beacon-Herald

Smallpox is now such a rare disease, that many practising physicians have never seen one or seen a case. People are no longer afraid of smallpox, because most Canadians have had it or known of a case in their own area of acquaintanceships.

Just because smallpox appears to have been defeated and wiped out, some public health authorities are fearful that there could be a major epidemic. People have grown careless about getting vaccinated, because they are no longer aware of a fatality or case of smallpox getting loose in the country could cause many deaths because people who have not track of how many years ago it was that their vaccination was last performed.

Anyone who goes for a holiday or business trip to Europe, or to any African country must be safe minded. He learns that unless he has proof of recent vaccination, he can not get back into Canada again. The Dominion health authorities are rigid in the watch they keep at the seaports and airports, to guard against a single case of smallpox getting into the country.

As recently as 1924, there was an outbreak of smallpox at Windsor, Ont.; there were 67 cases, and 32 of them died. This was a small outbreak compared with the smallpox epidemic that hit Montreal back in the winter of 1885-86. In that outbreak 3,164 Montrealers died of smallpox; more than 2,000 of them were small children.

Smallpox has affected the history of Canada more than most of the wars, treaties and constitutional arguments to which the history books give space.

The disease was brought to Canada by the first white colonists. The first recorded epidemic was among the Montagnais Indians of the lower St. Lawrence who were almost wiped out in 1636-38. French traders and missionaries carried smallpox to the Huron Indians, in Western Ontario; the victims of the Iroquois over the Huron in 1649, which destroyed the Huron nation, was probably in large part due to the ravages of smallpox among the Hurons; their fighting strength was reduced by smallpox.

Smallpox cut the effectiveness of the French forces in the Seven Years War, and played a part in North American in the English-speaking colonies. When the Americans captured Montreal in 1775 during Quebec, in 1776, smallpox hit the American Army in its encampments around Quebec, and forced, by any other factor, led to the failure of the siege.

Vaccination against smallpox was introduced to Canada soon after 1800, and it may have been more than a coincidence that a defence against smallpox became available at the same time as the main flow of British colonization was coming to Canada. If the timing had been different, Canada might now be all French, or might have been the 14th State of the American Union.

No medical expert will let himself be pinned down to a flat statement about how long a vaccination lasts. Some say seven years, more think that five years is a reasonable average, and we have seen many a medical opinion that vaccination should be renewed every three years.

There is no excuse whatever to the middle-aged and elderly. If you can see the vaccination scar on your arm hide it, but be only too old to be doing you much good. Modern techniques have now made it possible to have a mark on your upper arm, the size of a dime or a nickel, as a souvenir of your most recent vaccination, then it was probably done too long ago.

Determined apparently to beat Valley Time — and have March 31st as a birthday rather than be an April Fool's package, the staff at the Belleville General Hospital on that date gave doctors and nurses in the obstetrical ward an especially busy day of it. No less than seven births were recorded during the day. A record, announced by hospital authorities, the sudden spurt at the end of the month bringing the number of births for March to eighty-three.

50 YEARS AGO

April 8th, 1913

The Rev. Dr. Baker of South Ste. Marie, Ont., a former pastor of Bridge Street Methodist Church here, may possibly succeed the Rev. Dr. Dyer as principal of Albert College. Dr. Dyer is retiring owing to poor health.

In a baseball game at the Y.M.C.A. between the Y.M.C.A. team and the team of the O.B.C., the former team won, the scores being 37 to 30. The following composed the teams: Y.M.C.A. team — Alexander, Moore, Elvins, Moon and Plaskie. O.B.C. team — Bell, Bryant, Mayor, Breckenridge and Page. The referee was Percy Hunter.

Mr. W. E. Crawford of Hamilton is spending a few days in town.

The second muster parade of the 16th Regiment will be held tomorrow night. The armouries are filling up well and the turnout should be a record breaker.

Strictly Personal

Today's Goods Impermanent, Inferior

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

I was given a fountain pen for my twelfth birthday. It was a handsome, substantial instrument, which I kept and used for more than a dozen years, and felt a keen sense of loss when it disappeared one day.

Now a full generation later, I own no fountain pen. Instead, like most of us, I am forever buying cheap ball-point pens. They write poorly, they have no character and they seem to vanish from sight overnight.

The case of the ball-point pen is almost the prototype of our modern social order: We have more of everything, but less of anything. A dozen ball-point pens, scattered about the house, with half of them useless, do not somehow add up to one good fountain pen.

It is a trivial example, but not without significance. The old-fashioned fountain pen did not really become obsolete; good pens of this sort today are even better than they were 30 years ago — but we have got out of the habit of buying them and using them.

It seems easier and cheaper to pick up a dozen ball-points; but it is in fact more wasteful per nor cheaper. For the pens don't work when you want them to, and over a period of a year they add up to more than the price of a decent pen that might last a decade.

It is too easy to blame the manufacturer, or the advertising process, or the advertising agencies, for this sad decline in the quality of goods. Obviously it is harder to do is to accept the fact that permanence, continuity, excellence of workmanship are no longer the standards we live up to in our own lives.

And perhaps it must be so in our "affluent society." Perhaps our rise in the material standard of living demands that we purchase inferior objects, discard them speedily and buy new ones just as inferior. To keep a pen, or any object, for a long time, is to limit our "consumptive capacity." Perhaps, as some economists argue, waste makes wealth.

Each people develop their own material style. Our style, as the 20th century proceeds, seems to be more and more an ideal directed at change, novelty, temporariness, the annual model turnover, and "planned obsolescence." It is not to be considered a Yankee virtue to buy something that would last a long time or to put down a sin against our economic deities.

The ball-point pen is a modern phenomenon, along with the frozen dinner, the instant coffee, the disposable diaper, the plastic dish, the paper-bound book. In each case there is some advantage; but we have not yet come to ask ourselves whether our ideas and ideals are becoming as temporary and disposable as our objects.

To Your Good Health

Some Birthmarks Can Easily Be Removed by Treatment

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: I read a letter in your column from a woman whose infant daughter has a birthmark on the arm.

It was described as being exactly like my daughter's "strawberry nevus," with which she was born. By the time the baby was three months old it was the size of a quarter. It was on her wrist — raised and lumpy.

We took her to a dermatologist. He gave her X-ray treatments for two years.

He said that by the time she is six years old the mark would vanish. She is not quite five now, and it is completely gone — no scars or any sign. We are eternally grateful to the dermatologist. Perhaps you can forward my letter to the mother if you have her name in your files, or if not just print my message for parents with a similar problem, so that they will know something can be done about ugly birthmarks. — Mrs. F. M.

You are right. Something can be done about ugly birthmarks. Not always the same thing, because it depends on the case.

I don't save letters from readers. I accept them as confidential and if I want to have one I cut off the name and address with a pair of scissors.

I can't forward your letter to the mother — but anyway I can print it for all parents who are worried about birthmarks — stains, strawberry marks, moles and so on.

Some of these marks fade spontaneously. Some are better left alone for a while in order that when they can be removed by simple office surgery, or by plastic surgery, depending on location, or can be obliterated by electric needle. Freezing with dry ice techniques is also sometimes used.

Of all the kinds of "spots before the eyes," none causes so much concern as the blemishes on a child's skin as seen by parents. Being a father myself I understand.

There are mighty few of these blemishes that cannot be corrected. But as I said, not all respond to the same treatment.

How does a physician choose which is which? He can't, without a long period of training — and that's why some doctors become dermatologists or skin specialists.

I'm not a dermatologist. However, if one of my children had had such a birthmark, I would have gone to a specialist and asked him what to do. By virtue of his experience, he could have told at a glance (or maybe after close examination) what kind of blemish and the best way to treat it with the least sign afterward, if any.

He might have, as in the case of Mrs. F. M.'s daughter, been able to predict the time within which, after treatment, the birthmark would disappear.

It takes skill to do this. But skill is available.

Dear Dr. Molner: I have the beginning of a double chin. I am not fat, either. Is there any exercise or other method to prevent it? — R. K.

A double chin comes from one or two things: Overweight, which is in the skin, flabby skin. Since you aren't fat, that leaves the other. No exercise will help this, but an appearance grab, plastic surgery, if it becomes a nuisance so far every can correct it.

Dear Dr. Molner: I don't have a mustache so I am asking you. Is it possible for a baby to become pregnant during her period? — F.

No.

Count your calories the easy way! To receive a copy of my pamphlet, "The Calorie Chart," write to Dr. Molner, care of The Chicago Sun-Times Syndicate, P.O. Box 158, Dundee, Ill., enclosing a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 10 cents in coin to cover handling.

Prime Minister Sir John A. Macdonald's motion that a select committee investigate charges in the Pacific Scandal was passed by the Canadian Parliament 90 years ago today—in 1873.

The previous day charges had been levelled that the governing Liberal - Conservative coalition had solicited funds from Sir Hugh Allan, who headed the company that had been given a charter to build a railway to the Pacific. The scandal subsequently led to the fall of the government to resign and in the elections later that year it was overwhelmingly defeated.

1939—Albania's King Zog fled from Italian occupation forces.

1954—A Trans-Canada Air Lines passenger plane collided with an RCAF trainer at Moose Jaw, Sask., killing 37 persons.

THE PACKSACK

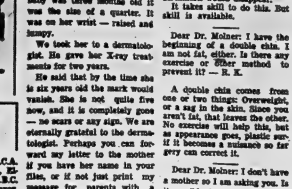
By GREGORY CLARK



"I regret," says a university professor, "to see people taking credit for their brains, their talents, or even their tastes. It is astonishing the number of clever, gifted people who are blithely under the impression that they have created their own brains.

Clearly brains they have got were given to them. Even the inclination or the energy to use their brains is also a gift. But it never occurs to them that they owe these blessings to a happy combination of genes in their ancestry. I realize that some of them feel justified in their self-esteem because their parents were pretty stodgy citizens. Even their grandparents may have been undistinguished members of the species. But somewhere in the background of all of the gifted has entered a meeting of the genes of brilliance — maybe between a farmer and a great-great-aunt on the one side and our immediate parent on the other. It is like a crapgame. You have to have a lucky combination.

The embroidery of smarty people strutting about in the delusion that they created their own brains is being amusing to scientists as well as to theologians, though on different grounds."

TRENTON (Special) — In this day and age most men have a hobby to go home to after the day's work is done.

Such a man is Roy Cornish, editor of the Trentonian. Mr. Cornish is one of the few newspapermen, if not the only one, whose hobby is playing the organ. Last week he was playing every noon hour on the new custom-built pipe organ in Trenton's King Street United Church.

The new organ, which has two manual controls and pedals, including the crescendo pedal to add tone to loudness, is similar to Mr. Cornish's own self contained Hammond home organ which he has fitted in the living room of his home. The main difference is that the Hammond does not have pipes, and Mr. Cornish says a pipe organ is easier to play and has depth which is not possible on an electronically operated instrument.

He should know. Mr. Cornish has been practising on various organs and pianos since he was 12, although he has had no formal training.

"I first became interested in the piano when I visited some friends. I couldn't play the instrument but it fascinated me, and when later I got the opportunity to have a few lessons in note reading and scale control from a Toronto organist I jumped at it".

His first instrument was a reed organ which he purchased for five dollars. This enabled him to practise and later he bought a piano for $35. He improved rapidly and at 22 was playing at church services in Toronto.

FIRST PASTORSHIP

Mr. Cornish later entered the ministry, and when he went to Napanee on his first pastorship in 1947, he took with him a two-stop reed organ.

When Mr. Cornish came to Trenton to be a newspaper man, he brought the organ with him and continued to practise. About two and a half years ago, he bought his present organ, a full, church-type instrument which has a 25-note pedal board, two manuals, reverberation unit and percussion controls, and which will play most organ music.

"And I've been practising like mad ever since," he says "I rashly suggested that I could play the new King Street Church organ when I heard about it. Really I found it relatively easy and enjoy playing it."

Mr. Cornish added that he doesn't believe he is good enough to make a living playing the organ, and his playing remains unfinanced.

His preference is for classical organ music and he has a large valuable growing library of music. He usually listens to several versions of the same piece before attempting his own interpretation. All his playing is from notes, not memory.

Mr. Cornish says he would like more opportunity to play the organ before the public, but adds that unlike other instruments the organ does not lend itself to being moved around for performances.

However, he said there has been some talk of installing an organ at the Community Gardens and this might present such an opportunity in the future.

Meanwhile, Mr. Cornish's first love when he stops being a newspaper man is music, and specifically organ music.

Five Brood Sows, Hens Lost in Fire

TRENTON — Fire on Friday destroyed a large barn owned by Glenn Arthur, R. R. 3, Trenton. Lost in the fire were five brood sows and a large number of laying hens. A seeder and plow and a quantity of hay were considered minor losses.

Mrs. Arthur said today that her husband had been to the barn about 8 before 12:30 p.m. when the fire broke out. He had returned to the house area when he heard a loud noise and glancing towards the barn he saw that the whole upper part of the building was ablaze. He was unable to save any of the livestock.

Firemen from Trenton, called to the scene, found the Frankford department already there, but as the Frankford men received a call to proceed to another fire back of their village, the Trenton firemen remained. Firefighting efforts were hampered by a strong wind.

Mrs. Arthur today set the loss at $5,000. She said that it was partially covered by insurance. Eleven years ago, the Arthurs lost their farmhouse in a fire.

Frankford firemen fought one grass fire on Friday and attempted to save a barn at R. R. 1, Wooler, owned by Hugh Taylor. The barn was being used as a store house. Lost in the fire was machinery and $400 worth of material which was to be used to build a greenhouse.

Picton — Guardsman Suffers Broken Back

PICTON (Special) — A Canadian guardsman stationed at Camp Picton was seriously injured when a car in which he was a passenger crashed through a bridge and dropped 40 feet to a creek near Demorestville early Sunday morning.

Guardsman David Solinger, aged 20, suffered a broken back and was rushed to the Canadian Military Hospital at Kingston.

He was thrown from the vehicle as it crashed through the bridge and hit an abutment at the base.

Driver of the car, Guardsman Gyozo Brossman, 27, also stationed at Camp Picton was described as "not too badly hurt."

Safe Robbers Get $640 Cash At Picton Fruit Growers

PICTON (Special). — The Prince Edward Fruit Growers Association cold-storage plant, located in the northwest of the town, was entered Saturday night and the safe smashed open. Police reported that $640 in cash and $500 in cheques were taken from the safe.

The thieves also found their way into the office of the Prince Edward Co-Op, located in the same building, but their attempts to open a wall safe were unsuccessful. Damage to the safe was reported extensive.

Several tools, stolen from a railway shed, located near the plant, were left behind in the offices.

Entry to the building was gained by smashing the lock on the front door. Damage was extensive to both offices and papers were strewn across the floor.

The plant, in an isolated location from the town, was the scene of a similar robbery about six years ago when thieves blew open the safe by using nitroglycerine.

Provincial police at Picton are investigating.

MESSENGERS

RAWDON — On Sunday morning at the church hall 28 children and four adults were in attendance for the monthly meeting of Mount Pleasant-Rawdon Messengers.

Members divided into groups for the study period. Mrs. Clarence Scott was in charge of the juniors and Mrs. Raymond McConnell, the primary children. Miss Janet Fleisher showed an interesting film.

The devotional period opened with quiet music by Miss Donna Knight. Carolyn Merrick gave the message on the theme "Recognizing the Wrong."

Jean Jeffs gave the call to worship, Janet Scott read the Bible and Mrs. C. Scott read the meditation and prayer. Janet Spencer gathered the offering which was dedicated by Mrs. Frank Spencer. Reports were presented by Nancy Johnson and Glenn Spencer.

The program consisted of a piano solo by Lorraine Jeffs and a vocal duet by Brenda Williams and Brenda Campbell.

About Foster Parenting

DORIS CLARK

DEAR DORIS—You're quite right. Foster parenting should not be taken on for the board money. There must be an extra special and very deep love of children in prospective Foster "Moms" and "Dads."

These wee ones require more love and care than one's natural offspring because of the insecure lives they have undoubtedly led. A great percentage of us are just not up to coping with the emotional instabilities presented.

Further, to use these children as a means of bolstering a family's financial status is only adding to the family problems. The monthly pittance paid for each child will not pull anyone out of a financial mire.—ADOPTED MOM OF FOUR.

DEAR ADOPTED MOM—Thanks for the wise words. Obviously you've been through it all and come out on top. For those who understand children, foster parenting has its own non-monetary but wonderful rewards.

DEAR DORIS—This is probably one of the silliest problems one can come up with, but my husband (who is wonderful in every way) has a mood about him I can't cope with.

When he fails asleep and I try to awaken him his arms start swinging and striking back so that I can't come near him. He starts raving and yelling, so I end up leaving him alone, but in the morning it is impossible for him to get up for work and he finally ends up being late.

He tells me he doesn't know he does this and that I'm probably making up this fantastic story. Now can you either give me a cure or answer to this problem—NOT DREAMING.

DEAR NOT—Try to discover the frustrations he controls when he is awake. And buy a loud alarm clock. Set it in the room far end of the room. When it goes off the row will wake up the neighborhood. And be sure it's Dear Hubby who turns it off.

DEAR DORIS—I am very much interested in becoming a model. Could you please tell me whether there are any special requirements such as schooling, weight and height?—CAREER HAPPY.

DEAR CAREER HAPPY—The more high school you have the better. Good proportions for weight and height are important, but if you are a little over or under, the charm school where you train will help you shape up to requirements. For more details, write for my leaflet on the career of modelling, enclosing a five-cent-stamped self-addressed envelope.

DEAR DORIS—My girl friend accepts a dance from a boy whether she is interested in him or not. I don't think it is a sin if you say no. Is it?—WANTS ADVICE FOR FRIEND.

DEAR WANTS—Not a sin—but risky. Once a girl gets to be known as high hat even nice boys will be chicken about asking her out onto the floor.

DEAR DORIS—There are four boys on my block who like me and I only like one of them. Would you tell me how to tell the other three that I don't like them and I like someone else, without hurting their feelings? —WORRIED.

• • •

DEAR WORRIED—You can't. Unless they are the thick-skinned type. But aren't you getting choosy pretty early?

• • •

CONFIDENTIAL TO MRS. M. M. N.—There'll be further ideas about earning money at home, and if you would like a private letter about it please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope the next time you write.

• • •

(Let Doris tell you what's good taste and good etiquette. And remember that stamped envelope when you write!)

Policewoman's Garb Has Some Guessing

VICTORIA (CP)—This city's first uniformed policewoman is pounding her beat and her garb has some people guessing.

"People can't make up their minds whether I'm wearing the uniform of an air stewardess or a navy type, says Kay Allshouse.

In hiring her, the police department was prompted by the same reasoning that has led other major Canadian cities to add women to their forces.

"A policeman is stymied once a female suspect heads for the powder room," said Chief John Blackstock. "This is where a good policewoman fits in."

Although Policewoman Allshouse was raised not far from here, in Nanaimo, she travelled far afield to gain experience for her present job.

She quit as a bank teller and joined the RCAF in 1952 because she "wanted something different."

WAS INVESTIGATOR

She was a member of the plainclothes branch, taking her turn at guard duties around the base and as a member of the RCAF's investigating branch.

She served in Ontario, Quebec, Labrador and New Brunswick, rising to the rank of flying officer. Her last promotion finished her stint in the RCAF.

"I couldn't see myself being an administrative officer the rest of my life so I left the service and joined the Ottawa police force in 1958."

Along with 24 other policewomen, she was employed on traffic duties before the pull of Pacific coast weather drew her back to Vancouver Island.

"She'll mostly concentrate on the downtown area, patrolling dance halls, the arena, beer parlors and restaurants where youngsters are likely to gang up," says Chief Blackstock.

MAIL CALL

Question: Supposedly it isn't necessary to tip a hairdresser if he or she is the owner of the shop. Does this apply to shops in the home? Does the manager, in this case, expect a tip? A few women I know do tip, and they can get an appointment at their convenience.—Lemont, Ill.

Answer: If steady customers usually tip, then obviously it's the accepted — and expected — thing to do. Ordinarily, though, the owner is tipped only when she gives very special service, like slipping someone in for an emergency appointment or taking care of a whole group — like a wedding party — at the same time.

Question: My parents are divorced and my mother was remarried last month. I will continue to use my father's name. My mother and stepfather have agreed to help chaperone at a school dance next month and I'm not sure how I should introduce them to my friends. What do you suggest? — L.R., Chicago, Ill.

Answer: Your mother may be introduced alone as "my mother, Mrs. Smith," or she won't mistakenly be addressed by her former name, "Mrs. Jones." When introducing both, you may say 'my mother, Mrs. Smith and my stepfather, Mr. Smith."

British-Born Author Astonished at Success

Nautical look of Spring goes to town in a sleeveless, relaxed double knit shirt with sailor collar and loosely-tied scarf. By Mia.

PORT ARTHUR (CP)—Seen crawling through the marshes of Loon Lake or Lake Superior, 44-year-old Sheila Burnford has none of the appearance of a successful author.

Generally, this brilliant British born housewife and nature lover is hunting chicks when come upon in her chamols vest, billed cap and hip waders, but she also may be hunting mushrooms for the family table.

Mrs. Burnford two years ago burst on the literary scene with The Incredible Journey, a novel concerning three domestic animals and their trials reaching their home on a 250-mile journey through dense, forbidding bushland.

She says she was astonished at the success of her first novel but that any report of her "finishing" her second is "outright exaggeration".

She was pleased when most of the critics "got" what she was trying to say in her book.

"I was not trying to write a nice furry animal story for children."

NOT FIRST VENTURE

"The real challenge was to show the animals' character through their own actions; to send them away and bring them back developing their character on the way without giving them human personalities."

But this was far from her first ar only venture in literature.

She writes regularly for Punch, Blackwood's Magazine, the Atlantic Monthly and Canada Spring on "everything from garbage-can salesmen to girls' camps."

Another of her diversions is reading things written about herself.

Mrs. Burnford spent her teenage years in Ayrshire, Scotland and attended St. George's and Harrogate College, but not university.

"Only a few girls went on to university then . . . blue stockings who were exceptionally brilliant in a special field like physics or something."

RADICAL IN YOUTH

"Most students are pretty radical, but they grow out of it," she says.

"I was a confirmed Communist at 17. Paul Robeson was my idol."

She came to Canada for a second time, and to stay, 12 years ago with her husband and daughter Personnelle.

Her first journey here was in 1926 when she journeyed out with her brother and spent three years with their grandparents at Brantford, Ont.

But, while she prefers to remain in the background, her book continues carrying her name forward. It was a best-seller in the United States, where it first was published, in England and Canada, has been translated into eight languages and has won two literary awards.

Claire France Has 3 Books To Her Credit

By Paquerette Villeneuve
Canadian Press Correspondent

PARIS (CP)—It's almost routine for the publisher of a first novel by a young French girl to announce the discovery of "another Francoise Sagan."

The idea is to exploit any hint that the author has a precocious knowledge of sex, practically a Sagan trademark.

Claire France, a 26-year-old novelist from the Lake St. John area of Quebec, since was heralded as a new Francoise Sagan. That was after her first book was published. And it wasn't particularly deserved.

Now that she has three books to her credit she has outgrown the Sagan stage. She's just as happy, too, since the field is becoming crowded. There are an estimated half-dozen Francoise Sagans from French Canada now.

Besides, says a Montreal friend, Miss France's books are "pure and naive" just the opposite of Sagan's, although Children in Love a n d And the Seventh Day are primarily love stories.

Her third book, Around You, Tristan is about a Lake St. John—family during the Second World War, and although it was awarded the Grand Prix du Maine, an award for literature from the French province of Maine, it was more successful in France than in Quebec where it was coldly received.

NO ILLUSIONS

A sickler for detail, Miss France spent considerable time in Normandy, where part of the novel takes place, getting exact scenic background. The remainder is set in the Lake St. John area.

Claire, who lives in Paris with her husband, sotor Marc Dub her has no illusions about her writing career, which began several years ago when she had poems published in the Quebec City newspaper Le Soleil.

"I don't want to have to count on literature for my bread," she says. "I'd rather wash dishes. Besides, you know how difficult it is for a writer to live off her work."

Claire also writes lyrics for songs and has studied ballet for a number of years. When interviewed she was meticulously writing a narrative for a French revue.

Although she is fond of Paris and has spent several years here, she plans eventually to return to Quebec with her husband. The two hope to open a drama studio where Marc will teach acting and directing and Claire will instruct in gesture and movement.

"Freedom From Hunger" Topic At Bridge St. United Church

The new Education Hall of Bridge Street United Church was filled with luncheon guests to hear Dr. Margaret S. McCready, Dean of Macdonald Institute, Guelph, speak on "The Freedom from Hunger Campaign".

Dr. McCready is well qualified to speak on this topic as she had a part in the first group which worked toward "Freedom from Hunger" under the United Nations Charter, and is proud that Canada was a participant.

Dr. McCready is now serving in a voluntary capacity on the Canadian Freedom from Hunger Committee, selecting projects and making arrangements for their supervision by the F.A.O.

Though the Canadian standard of living is comparatively high, it is only a matter of 30 years since hunger stalked this country. Even today there are areas where an adequate diet is lacking.

The picture is sadder in the underdeveloped and developing countries. In these areas agriculture and more land—at least at the same rate as industry or the society is unworkable.

In these areas too, women have a large part to play in agriculture as they actually till the fields and garner the crops.

WOMEN'S RESPONSIBILITY

Everywhere women have the responsibility of nourishing their family members. This is not just a matter of food, but a climate which makes for a healthy living in a social and emotional way as well.

The training in methods of proper food preservation is an innovation to many underdeveloped areas.

This campaign does not aim at the temporary relief from hunger and malnutrition, it aims at their progressive and lasting removal from their human scene. The basis for success in this effort is self-help.

The campaign, which continues until 1965, needs funds to provide tools, scholarships, text books and seeds, to assist people to raise their own standards of agriculture.

A few pilot projects were described and various means of contributions shown. These included coin cards which can be obtained and paid into any Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce or from the campaign headquarters, Box 2040, Station "D" Ottawa.

ARTISTIC EASTER THEME

The hall and tables were decorated in an Easter theme artistically carried out by a committee under Mrs. Lyle Jones.

The guests were welcomed by Mrs. Arthur Clare, president of Bridge Street U.C.W. Dr. Elizabeth Scott introduced Dr. McCready to the capacity audience and thanked by Mrs. Freeman Burrows.

Conveners were: Mrs. Roy Jeffrey, Mrs. George Wishart, Mrs. A. Quickert, Mrs. W. McGee, Mrs. J. R. Reynolds, Mrs. E. S. Fairman, and Mrs. G. Shaver.

During the afternoon, Mrs. K. Bird provided piano music.

The hostesses for the occasion were: Mrs. S. Gilmour, Mrs. N. O'Neill and Mrs. B. Leslie.

Many other ladies of the U.C.W. worked in various ways to make it a success and are to be congratulated on bringing such an outstanding speaker to Belleville.

Ann Landers

Appalling Home Conditions Put Teenagers on Spot

ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANN LANDERS—I would like to reopen the subject of the teenager who sat in front of her house, in her boy friend's car for two hours. You said "a car is for transportation. It is no place to entertain.

I'd like to describe my home situation, and then I hope you will tell me if your advice still holds.

My father works nights. He weighs over 300 pounds and shaves about twice a week. He sits in the living room all day wearing a dirty undershirt and torn shorts. Either he is drinking beer of watching TV or he is snoring on the couch.

I invited girl friends over twice this year hoping he would take the hint and pet on a bathrobe or leave the living room. He ignored us. My mother asked him to please co-operate but he says the house is his and he's not going to "put on the dog" for anybody.

Now that you have the facts, Ann Landers, what is your advice for me?—SWEET (?) SIXTEEN.

DEAR SIXTEEN—I received hundreds of letters from teenagers who described deplorable home situations, and who explained that they, too, must entertain in cars. It is pathetic when a teenager can't invite guests into her living room because of a half-dressed, beer-swizzelling walrus who calls himself a father. One girl wrote about an alcoholic mother who sometimes wore no clothing.

Kids in this spot obviously must find another place to talk. I recommend long walks, the corner malt shop or a coffee house. If the school auditorium has a recreation room where you can pull up a couple of chairs and chat privately, go there.

DEAR ANNE LANDERS—What have you got against plumbers? When you were making the point that psychiatrists' children weren't any worse than anyone else's why did you use (as a comparison) the plumber's children, as if they are the dumbest segment of all humanity?

Maybe a plumber doesn't have a college degree but he is a lot more effective in his work than most psychiatrists who get $25 an hour. When you call a plumber and tell him to fix something he doesn't leave until it's fixed—and I mean fixed—on that one trip. Yet people go to psychiatrists for months—and even years—and they are just as nutty as they always were.

Civilized man couldn't get along without plumbers, so why don't you say something nice about them once in a while instead of building up the head shrinkers all the time?—PLUMBER'S WIFE.

DEAR WIFE—I did say something nice about plumbers a few years ago and, they made me an honorary member of the Chicago Plumbers' Journeymen Union, Local No. 130.

Now aren't you ashamed of yourself? A tap across the knuckles with a pipe wrench for you, Girl.

DEAR ANN LANDERS—Several girls who work in this building gave a shower for a co-worker last September. She was to be married in October. We gave her some lovely gifts.

The man she was engaged to was having trouble getting a divorce. This was common knowledge and several of us knew the man's wife.

The wedding never came off. We feel this is the same as a broken engagement and that we should get our gifts back. What do you say?—STILL BURNING.

DEAR STILL—Best out the flames and forget it. You dames gave a shower for a girl friend and a married man.

Are your parents too strict? You can benefit from the experience of thousands of teenagers if you write for Ann Landers' booklet, "How To Live With Your Parents," enclosing with your request 25 cents in coin and a long self-addressed envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a self-addressed envelope.

Five Competing For Seat in Halton Riding

BURLINGTON, Ont. (CP)—An outwardly low - key campaign in Halton riding disguised intense electioneering at the person-to-person level as five young candidates competed for votes in the campaign for today's federal election.

Halton, a swiftly - growing county between Hamilton and Toronto on Lake Ontario's north shore, was a constituency where the winning Liberal margin in last June's election was fewer than 100 votes and where the service vote decided the issue.

Conservative A. C. (Sandy) Best, a Georgetown scientist-farmer, saw his election-day edge of 29 votes turn into a 98-vote defeat on the basis of a predominantly Liberal service vote that sent Oakville physician Harry Harley to Ottawa. Final count was: Liberal 18,356; PC 18,458. Mr. Best had won the riding in 1957 and recaptured it in 1958 by 2,500 votes.

Dr. Harley, 36, and Mr. Best, 31, are the main contenders again this time. Political novice Ellis Fullerton, 41-year-old high school teacher carried the New Democratic banner from a solid organizational base that took 4,001 of the 40,029 votes cast last year. Burlington businessman Irving Wilson, 43, worked to increase the 547-vote showing he made last time on the Social Credit ticket.

SEE NEW FACTORS

Two new factors were injected into the Halton contest this year—Independent candidate Henry Timmins and an additional 5,000 eligible voters.

Mr. Timmins, a 25-year-old Toronto securities analyst who lives in suburban Oakville, describes himself as a small-c Conservative.

The extra voters — boosting the electoral roll to some 60,000 names—are an indication of the week-by-week changes wrought in Halton that unsettle politicians and keep local pundits guessing. Candidates agree that a large proportion of the electorate was uncommitted at the outset of the campaign.

Halton, a fertile rectangle of market gardens and orchards until a few years ago, now feels the pressures of being part of the industrial golden horseshoe arcing around the western end of Lake Ontario—a productive area for the Liberals last time.

Communities like Knatchbull, Sodom and Speyside in the north of the county retain what's left of the rural atmosphere. The border - bursting towns of Oakville and Burlington, Georgetown and Milton serve as dormitories for Toronto and Hamilton and house employees of expanding local industry, including the big Oakville Ford plant and new oil refineries at Bronte.

During Campaign Pearson Set Out to Prove He Is Both Politician, Statesman

By DON HANRIGHT

OTTAWA (CP)—The stock introduction on the hustings for Liberal Leader Pearson went like this: "If he is less a politician, he is more a statesman."

Leader B. Pearson set out to prove he is both. He recognized that he had to be a politician to get elected, and said so in public. By the end of the campaign — and particularly near the end — he looked as much the politician as any of the party leaders.

"Policies are people," he told one audience. "Politics are people. Our program is based on that concept of politics."

That concept, however, did not shake him out of what he called the "high, hard" line in which he said Canada's problems will not yield to any easy solutions in sugary doses—but would require hard work and sacrifice. "There must be a spirit of "sacrifice."

He was still on this line in Toronto's Maple Leaf Gardens Friday night, where a crowd of more than 18,000 was described by the Liberal leader as the biggest political rally in Canadian history.

ENDED CAMPAIGN

It was there, for all practical purposes, that he ended a campaign that involved 20,000 miles of air travel alone. In the last two weeks he concentrated on the big cities, and the big crowds that he finds the most difficult to cope with.

He returned Saturday to an enthusiastic airport reception where he said:

"I don't want to seem cocky or over-confident, but I think the tide has moved in our favor."

Earlier he had sounded even more confident, in his own riding of Algoma East he told supporters Thursday that henceforth their own member's residence in Ottawa would be the prime minister's residence on Sussex Drive.

Mr. Pearson was plainly distressed after facing the hostile ous bunch of rowdies in Hamilton March 25. Yet two days later, after the next night's meeting in Kingston, he lamented the threat to democracy from such organized disruptions.

The most famous near-riot in Vancouver last Monday night showed him at his best. While they shouted him down for the first 20 minutes, he sat his jaw and glared back.

DECRIES TACTICS

He went on to decry them for undemocratic tactics, for an abuse of freedom.

Mr. Pearson displayed a genuine dislike of Prime Minister Diefenbaker.

When the prime minister made his well - publicized remark about Canada being "a burnt sacrifice" if the Bomarc missile were armed and thus became a target for enemy fire, Mr. Pearson told reporters:

"That will be in Pravda tomorrow."

Repeatedly he struck hard at what he described as Mr. Diefenbaker's insinuations of anti-Americanism. He attacked the prime minister's "irrational and irresponsible" defence statements. He said Mr. Diefenbaker had lost the trust of his strongest cabinet colleagues.

When the Pearsons returned home Saturday, both looked a little tired.

Mr. Pearson himself gets little exercise. But he appears fit. In Vancouver's Chinatown, he climbed a stepladder to a makeshift stage on the street. When he finished speaking, he swung down in one smooth motion that belied his 66 years.

Socred Leader Spent Sunday At His Home

By JACK REST

RED DEER, Alta (CP) — Social Credit Leader Thompson relaxed Sunday following a gruelling election campaign.

He attended Palm Sunday services at Bethany Baptist Church, then spent the rest of the chill spring day with his family at their farm home five miles south of here.

Today he plans to cast his ballot and look up some old friends in the Red Deer constituency where he is seeking re-election.

Mr. Thompson is opposed by Gordon Towers, a farmer, seeking to recapture the Red Deer seat for the Conservatives who held it from 1958 to 1962; Liberal Max de Hamel, clergyman, and New Democratic candidate Paul Jenson, a school teacher.

It's been a stiff fight and all one stage the Red Deer Social Credit organization, fearing that Mr. Thompson might be in trouble, sharply increased its campaign advertising budget. He won the seat in 1962 with a margin of about 2,400 over the Progressive Conservative candidate.

IS MIXED AREA

Red Deer constituency, in central Alberta, is a prosperous mixed farming area which in recent times has sent Social Credit or Conservative representatives to Ottawa and Social Credit representatives to the legislature in Edmonton.

The city of Red Deer, thriving heart of the constituency, has a population of 23,000.

In a non-stop campaign, the 48-year-old former chiropractor drove himself unsparingly for the last month or so, seeking to bolster Social Credit strength in the House of Commons.

Concentrating on the western provinces, which elected only four Social Credit members last year against Quebec's 26, Mr. Thompson barnstormed from early morning to late night. He averaged 4½ hours of sleep, often using the night hours for travel instead of slumber.

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

At this time of year the overture "Prelude to Baseball" rings over the land as the stars and others of the great summer festival stand in the wings awaiting their cues.

Twenty actors, ten in the National and ten in the American Leagues, will take part in the great diamond opera that will be climaxed by the grand World Series finale come October 1st or thereabouts.

Two of these collective greats will take front and centre with their separate galaxies of individual stars. To one will go the glory, here and main share of the participants' box-office loot. The show is staged with a minimum of four performances and a maximum of seven.

The above is a statement of facts. There is nothing new about it. What is conjectural is who will be the rapier-bearing Dons of the diamond to cross steel in the grand finals?

For this is the pre-dawn zone. That misty time when the crystal gazers, swamis, yogies, seers, sages, savants, predictcers, prognosticators, and other foretellers of the future, the majority of them wishful thinkers, come up with their annual soothsayings.

But there is one happy band of forecasters who deliver the annual "prognostectie" and who should know whereof they speak. They are the players themselves who are polled by a prominent sports magazine.

And their collective opinions should be of great cheer to Yankee lovers, for the boys foresee no threat to the Bronx Bombers' domination of the American League.

They've either forgiven the Los Angeles Dodgers for flipping their collective wigs last year or figure their sudden season-end lapse when the Giants nudged them out of the pennant, was a flash in the pan.

They bear the West Coast "Bums" no grudge and pick them as three-to-one favorites to win the National League pennant.

And how does this selection jibe with your private crystalball shootings? The Yankees came far out in front with 142 first-place votes with the second-place Detroit Tigers second with just 13. The Tigers barely nosed out the Minnesota Twins in third with the rest of the league closely bunched.

The boys picked the White Sox to finish fourth, with the Orioles in fifth spot. Then comes in order the Angels, Indians, Red Sox, Athletics and Senators.

The overall balance is much closer in the National League, the players felt. They foresee the pennant clash a two-club affair between the Dodgers and the Giants with the Reds, Cardinals and St. Louis slugging it out for the next three spots in that order. Not far behind are the Pirates, Braves, Phillies, Cubs, Colts and the lowly Mets.

Individually, last year's stars did not suffer in the pre-season guessing game. The Big Mickey is the American League choice for leading hitter and most valuable player. They expect no let-up in Harmon Killebrew's homer-clouting with Rocky Terry the top hurler. Minnie's closest rival for the MPV honor was Al Kaline. Pascuale finished ahead of Whitey Ford in the pitching selection.

But in the National the incomparable Willie Mays ran away with the MVP and home-run leadership. He received 69 votes for MVP and only Frank Robinson and Tommy Davies with 23 got more than six. Ninety-five voted for Willie to finish tops in the homer department while Cepeda, a 1962 dismppointanest, received only 32.

In the leading-hitter department Hank Aaron was the choice of 47 with Frank Robinson getting 35. The most dazzling pitching duo? The Dodgers' Drysdale with 77 votes and Sandy Koufax with 45.

The general summary, the Yankees are too strong for the other nine clubs, and the Dodgers cannot lose with Bill Skowron and a sound Sandy Koufax, among others.

The world series winner? Phone me around October 10th.

'Will Never Play Again'-Selke

Lou Fontinato Through

DETROIT (CP) — Frank Selke, managing director of the Montreal Canadiens of the National Hockey League, said Sunday night that injured defenceman Lou Fontinato will never play hockey again.

In an interview on CBC television between periods of the sixth semi-final game between Chicago Black Hawks and Detroit Red Wings, Selke said in a discussion of Montreal's late-season injuries:

"He (Fontinato) will never play hockey again."

Then, in a remark addressed to Fontinato: "If you're watching" the Canadiens' organization "will take care of you."

Fontinato was injured late in the season when he lost his balance after being checked by Vic Hadfield of New York Rangers. The veteran defenceman, who played with New York before going to Montreal, still is in hospital with a serious neck injury.

In Montreal, Fontinato was watching the game from his hospital bed. He is not allowed visitors yet, and nurses said he had shown no unusual reaction to Selke's statement. They said his spirits earlier in the day were "fine."

Wings Three-In-Third Scuttle Hawks

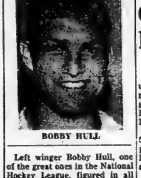
By JACK SULLIVAN
Canadian Press Sports Writer

DETROIT (CP)—Sid Abel and Gordie Howe were on a big Detroit line in 1948 and 1949 when Toronto Maple Leafs cooled out the Red Wings in eight consecutive games to win back-to-back Stanley Cup titles.

Today, for the first time since, the Leafs and Wings are ready to square off in another final.



Coach Abel and player Howe recall those drought years after Detroit polished off Chicago Black Hawks 7-4 Sunday night to win their best-of-seven semi-final 4-2. Leafs disposed of Montreal Canadiens in five games and have been waiting since Thursday for their opponents to identify themselves.

The Wings did it in style. They beat the Hawks four straight after losing a pair of games on Chicago ice and Sunday night defied all playoff tradition by playing a loose, free-skating and sometimes weird contest to move the Hawks out of the picture.

Abel has blended some old pros and a bunch of puck-happy young scoolers who set up a 4-2 lead in the second period, watched it disappear as the Hawks scored twice in three minutes and then over-powered them with three goals in the last 20 minutes.

GOALIES LOOSE

The goaltending wasn't impressive as Glenn Hall in the Chicago net and Detroit custodian Terry Sawchuk allowed some softies.

BOBBY HULL

Left winger Bobby Hull, one of the great ones in the National Hockey League, figured in all Chicago goals but couldn't single-handedly beat the Wings. He scored three goals, set up Eric Nesterenko for the other and played his heart out in a losing cause.

Normie Ullman, fast reaching his peak after a 29-goal season with Detroit, scored twice and assisted on three others. Parker MacDonald Alex Faulkner, Larry Jeffrey, Alex Delvecchio and Bill Gadsby scored singles.

Howe, who came out of it with a bruised nose and three assists, moved to within striking range of the all-time playoff point-scorer, Maurice Richard, who had 126. Howe has 115, three better than Bernie Geoffrion of Canadiens, and at 35 the big right winger still has a few good years left.

A crowd of 13,884 was in a continual uproar in the game that saw some blood - letting. Hall played the final 45 minutes with a 15-stitch cut after a blackjack by Howe bounced off his chest and smacked his upper lip.

FIGHT DRAWS BLOOD

The Wings' Bruce MacGregor was pummelled by tough Red Fleming in the second period and came out of it with a five-stitch eye cut. Fleming received three penalties—a minor for board-checking MacGregor, a five-minute major for fighting and a 10-minute misconduct. MacGregor received a major.

Referee Vern Buffey called 17 penalties, bringing the series total to a cup record 97. The old mark of 97 was set in the six-game Toronto-Chicago final last spring.

Toronto manager-coach Punch Imlach was in the stands and probably the best intelligence he picked up was that the Wings can skate right alongside his Leafs and that Sawchuk apparently is a setup for long and high shots.

Hull's first goal was an ankle-high screamer from the blueline. His third goal, elbow high, was scored from almost the same spot. Nesterenko's goal, another high drive, came from about 15 feet out.

LUCKY ON ANOTHER

Sawchuk was beaten again on a high shot by Murray Balfour in the third period but the puck hit the port.

Coach Rudy Pilous of the Hawks said the Wings were "just too persistent." He thought they could give the league-champion Leafs "a real battle."

Abel said the Wings "deserved to win this series and I know they'll put out just as much, if not more in the next series."

The second game will be played in Toronto Thursday night and the third and fourth have been set Sunday and Tuesday. If a fifth game is necessary, it will be played at Toronto Thursday, April 18. If the series goes beyond this, the sixth game will be played at Detroit Sunday, April 21, and the seventh at Toronto, Tuesday, April 23.

Nicklaus Still Golden Boy Of Golf

Wins Masters, $20,000

By MERCER BAILEY

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP)—Young Jack Nicklaus, a sandy-haired powder monkey with golf clubs as his tools, seems intent on reducing the game's "big three" to the "big one."

With his victory in the 27th Masters tournament Sunday, this powerful 23-year-old sophomore professional continued to dominate other members of golf's ruling trio — Arnold Palmer and Gary Player—in most of their major meetings, starting with the United States Open last year.

In that Open, he beat Palmer in a playoff for the title, later he whipped Palmer and Player in the inaugural World Series of Golf, where the trio met head-to-head in a whole match, and now has taken a Masters crown from the two former Masters champions.

Only in the 1962 Professional Golfers' Association championship did Nicklaus' mastery of the other two titans of the game slip. Player won that one, Nicklaus lost to Dave Ihlenfeldt and Palmer tied for 17th.

Shouldering aside ever - increasing pressure as first one, then another competitor made a bid and fell back in the final round of the Masters, Nicklaus showed the determination it takes to make a great champion.

STAGES RALLIES

After going one over par on Nos. 8 and 12 to lose the lead, he rallied with a pair of birdies and sank a clutch three-foot putt on the 18th to win by one shot from Tony Lema and beat Julius Boros and faltering Sam Snead by two strokes.

Nicklaus, starting where he left Saturday, extended his string of pars to 18 before going one over par on No. 8. He was also one over on the 12th and had to sink a long putt to accomplish that. But he offset this with birdies on the 13th and 16th holes for a par-72 finish and 286.

Lema closed with a two-under-par 70 for 287.

Boros, playing with Nicklaus, also had a 72 for 288 and Snead fired a 71 for 289.

Two Canadians shared in the rich winner's pot. Veteran Stan Leonard of Vancouver earned $1,000 by closing with a 75, his worst round of the four-round competition, for 294.

Toronto's Alvis Thompson, Canadian Professional Golfers' Association champ who is playing his first winter tour, carded a 73 Sunday, his best round, to finish with 297, good for $750.

Leonard was 74-72-73-75—294 and Thompson was 75-73-75-74—297.

TIES FOR NINTH

Palmer, the defending champion, started rallies in both the third and fourth rounds, but never was able to get one of his amazing scorecard specials really rolling. He closed with a 72 for 289 and a tie with Don Januery for ninth place.

Player, who twice during the final round was tied with Snead and Nicklaus for top spot, finished with a 79 and 289, putting him in a tie for fifth with Chuck Furgol and Dow Finsterwald.

Nicklaus plans to enter the British Open again this year, as well as the U.S. Open and the PGA championship. With the master, they make up the "grand slam" of professional golf—for several years a dream of Palmer's.

Nicklaus picked up $20,000 for his victory and that put him on top of the PGA money-winning list at $36,715. Player dropped to second with $32,000 winnings of $37,502. Lema climbed to third place from fourth with $26,233 and Palmer fell to fourth with $25,025.

Junior 'A' Playoffs

Flyers Defeat Maroons 4-1

TORONTO (CP) — Niagara Falls Flyers won their eighth straight Junior hockey playoff game Sunday, defeating Toronto Neil McNeil Maroons de-fence 4-1 to win the best-of-seven Ontario Hockey Association Junior A playoffs.

Niagara Falls ended in first place in the OHA provincial junior A league this year, finishing the defending Memorial Cup champion Maroons with a 4-1 in the best-of-seven league semi-final and Montreal junior Canadiens 4-0 in the league final.

The Maroons, successors to the Toronto St. Michael's Majors who won the Memorial Cup two years ago before dropping to junior A status, posted almost as good a mark in the Metro Toronto Junior A league, 34-10-6, to finish second place, defeated Toronto Knob Hill 4-0 in the best-of-seven league semi-final and Toronto Marboros 4-2 in the final.

Neil McNeil, captain Andre Champagne, the only player left from the St. Michael's club of 1961, and Niagara Falls defenceman Ray Martyniuk were each given give minor penalties.

Dick Morin, Garry Harmer, Wayne Maxner and Dornhoefer scored for Niagara Falls.

Paul Gauthier gave the lone Neil McNeil goal near the start of the second period.

JERUSALEM (Reuters) — Pilgrims and tourists arrived from many parts of the world Saturday for Easter.

Joe Denucci Decisions Joe Giambra

BOSTON (AP)—Joe Denucci piled up points with a whirlwind attack in the early rounds Saturday night and then withstood a late offensive by ranking middleweight Joey Giambra to win a televised 10-round split decision.

The 23-year-old Denucci, of Newton, Mass., weighed 158 pounds. Giambra, eighth-ranking middleweight from Hollywood, Calif., weighed 161.

Referee Eddie Bradley had Denucci the winner 95-94 and Judge Harold Ackerberg had Denucci in front 97 - 92. Judge George Flate scored Giambra the winner 96-94. The Associated Press card had Giambra a 94-93 winner.

Giambra was a late substitute for Joey Archer, the No. 6 contender for champion Dick Tiger's crown. Archer had to withdraw when he suffered cracked ribs during a training session.

Cyclone Taylor Admitted To Hospital

VANCOUVER (CP) — Fred (Cyclone) Taylor, 73, all-time hockey great, was taken to hospital Saturday night.

Officials at St. Vincent's Hospital said Sunday "he spent a good night, but he's still restricted as to visitors." His condition was described as satisfactory.

John Taylor, his son, said doctors had not yet diagnosed the illness but "he's probably just suffering from exhaustion."

Kennedy Throws-'Away They Go'

By JOE REICHLER
Associated Press Sports Writer

Four new managers, four dozen new players and a new strike zone help usher in the 1963 major league baseball season today.

As has been the custom for some time, Washington Senators in the American League and Cincinnati Reds in the National got a 24-hour jump on the other clubs with games today. Baltimore Orioles were the Senators' rivals while Pittsburgh Pirates were the Reds' opponents at Crosley Field.

The remaining clubs will launch their pennant drives tomorrow.

President Kennedy had his right arm all cranked up for the traditional first toss at Washington's D.C. Stadium. Thereafter the pitching was to be in the hands of left hander Don Rudolph (3-10) of the Senators and Steve Barber (9-6) of the Orioles. Some 47,000 spectators were expected for the game.

Another capacity crowd, some 30,000 fans, was assured for the Cincinnati - Pittsburgh tilt for right-hander Barry Latman.

Herb Score Quits Baseball

INDIANAPOLIS (AP)—Southpaw Herb Score of Chicago White Sox has quit professional baseball after a frustrating six-year comeback attempt.

Score announced Sunday night his decision when he was told by the White Sox that he was going to be optioned to Indianapolis.

Score broke into the major leagues with Cleveland Indians in 1955 when he compiled a 16-10 record and was named American League Rookie of the Year. He hit the 20-game jump on the other clubs with games today. Baltimore Orioles were the Senators' rivals while Pittsburgh Pirates were the Reds' opponents at Crosley Field.

"Sonny" Belch Special Convener

OASA Elects Davidson

KINGSTON (Staff) — Andy Davidson, of Stratford, was named President of the Ontario Secondary School Association at that body's 41st annual convention held here this past weekend.

Harold Dormer of Peterborough, was elected 1st vice-president, Clare Butler of Willowdale, was named 2nd vice-president and Stan Reeve of Sarnia took the 3rd vice's position on the third ballot.

Returning to office, without opposition, were Secretary L. C. Pickard of St. Catharines, and Treasurer W. I. Alguire, also of St. Catharines.

Belleville's Don Lee stepped down from the presidency only after a successful two-year term. The secretary's and treasurer's posts also showed artificial acres the province on the upsweep with new records being set each year.

Eighteen men from all parts of the province stood for the executive committee, with six elected. They were: D. H. Flynn of Hamilton, Hazell W. Langseder of Kingston, host for the convention, Max Sheff of Toronto, A. Vasli Aggour of Newboro of Toronto, D. K. Prescott of Capreol and Charlie Russell of Oshawa.

There were approximately 165 delegates and wives at the convention, including 128 voting delegates. They were introduced a civic dinner, dance, etc.

Among the appointments made by the new executive was that of Belleville's Clifford "Sonny" Belch, as a special convener. Belch, running for the executives for the first time, was among the 13 defeated earlier.

At Saturday's annual meeting the last full week in June was named "Minor Softball Week in Ontario". This will be an annual affair, with all local leagues holding special games and activities.

The 1964 convention will be held in Ottawa from April 2 and 4, while an invitation from Peterborough to hold the 1965 meet in that city was also accepted.

A special school for umpires, managers, coaches and any other interested persons, proved popular on Sunday morning. Convener Max Sheff said the well-known officials conducted the session. Members of the Belleville Umpires' Association attended, along with the three local delegates already in attendance.

Hull Ottawa Ousted By Wolves

OTTAWA (CP)—In the four-year history of the Eastern Professional Hockey League, the powerful Hull - Ottawa Canadiens have won the Tom Foley Memorial Trophy twice.

And twice they have been eliminated in the semi-finals—both times by Sudbury Wolves.

The upstart Wolves, who finished in third place this season, upset the Canadiens 3-2 Sunday to sweep their best-of-five semi-final in three games.

The young men most responsible for ousting the second-place Canadiens are Jerry Adams, an ambitious goaltender who hopes some day to play in the National League with Toronto Maple Leafs.

The Leafs loaned the sophomore netter to the Wolves this season and Cheevers, a former St. Michael's College junior star, has been a key performer in the playoffs.

The Wolves won the first two games 3-2 and 1-0—thanks to Cheevers—and Jerry was the star again Sunday.

Sudbury coach Murph Chamberlain is hoping his goaltender will start hot for the best-of-seven finals against the Kingston Frontenacs which opens Wednesday at Kingston.

Eastern Canada Finals

Moncton Nips Bulldogs

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP)—Moncton Hawks will go into tonight's second game of the Eastern Canada Allan Cup finals with their fingers crossed in the hope that their tiny goalkeeper, Jean Guy Morissette, stays hot.

Morisette was the whole story here Sunday as the Maritime champion Hawks blanked Windsor Bulldogs 3-2, in overtime to capture the opening game of the best-of-seven series.

With some incredible work the 150-pound Morissette whipped out 56 of 58 shots fired at him by the OHA champion Bulldogs and won the approval of the 3,336 partisan fans.

Left winger Doug Howatt shared the hero's laurels with Morissette. He stole the puck from Windsor defenceman Jacques Begin with his team shorthanded 63 seconds, from the end of a 10-minute overtime period and scored the winning goal while failing on his face.

Orrage Gaudry, 21-year-old winger recently signed to a Chicago tryout form, also starred. His two goals early in the third period gave Moncton the lead for the first time.

Jack Costello and Bill Mitchell were the Windsor marksmen.

Windsor coach Harry Watson shook his head in disbelief at Morisette's performance.

"We've seen some good goaltending but this year but this performance today topped them all," he said.

In contrast to Morissette, Windsor's Wayne Rutledge was credited with only 18 saves.

Boxer Dies After Knockout

CARBONDALE, Pa. (AP)—A 19-year-old amateur boxer from Puerto Rico died Saturday night after being knocked out in the second round of a scheduled three-round bout during a benefit boxing show at the Carbondale Catholic Centre.

The victim, Francesco Velasquez, never regained consciousness after being knocked out by Earl Johnson.

Boxing officials said probable major brain damage occurred when Velasquez fell backwards and his head hit the ring.

Velasquez' death brought the total to five this year in rings around the world.

Also killed Saturday, in a professional bout in the Queensland, Australia town of Gympie was Norman Smith, 26.

Orliz Ko's Vaillant

'... And Still Champion'

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP) — Lightweight boxing champion Carlos Ortiz turned back the challenge of Cuban Doug Vaillant with ease Sunday night. Then he looked to his next world title defence and he looked over, around and right past No. 1 contender, Kenny Lane.

Ortiz barely worked up a sweat before 18,000 hometown fans as he disposed of Vaillant, who fights out of Miami, Fla., on a technical knockout in 49 seconds of the 13th round.

It was his second defence of the 135-pound crown. Ortiz was guaranteed $30,000, Vaillant $6,500. The crowd paid about $110,000.

Bill Daly, adviser to Ortiz, flew into a rage when reminded after the fight that the World Boxing Association has given the champion until June 2 to defend against Lane, a southpaw from Muskegon, Mich.

Lane has long accused Ortiz of ducking him, as he did Joe Brown, who lost the crown to Ortiz last April in Las Vegas. We will fight the best fighter at the best price at the best time," Daly said. He made it clear that was almost certainly not going to be Tane.

We want no part of the WBA," Daly said. It is a self-appointed body."

Vaillant was ranked No. 4 by the WBA.

Canadian Press Staff Writer

What are the chances of a team winning the Stanley Cup while being outscored in the finals?

They're pretty slender judging from records dating back to 1927 when the National Hockey League inserted exclusion in rights to the venerable trophy.

It's happened only once in 1928, when Montreal Maroons outscored New York Rangers 6-5 and still lost the best-of-five final three games to two.

And in the 31 final series the Stanley Cup was first put up in 1893 there have been only two other occasions when it happened. In 1918 Vancouver outscored Toronto Arenas 21-18 but lost three games to two. And in 1905 Kenora Thistles had a 15-12 edge over Ottawa Silver Seven but dropped the best-of-three series two games to one. Kenora winning the opener 9-3 and losing the next two 4-2 and 5-4.

A string of unusual incidents marked the 1928 final between Rangers and Maroons, including the celebrated feat of New York manager Lester Patrick who took an emergency turn in goal for his club in the second game.

Rangers had finished second in the American Division out of six NHL and had defeated Pittsburgh and Boston in the divisional playoffs. Maroons were runners-up in the Canadian division, eliminating Ottawa and Montreal Canadiens.

The final was a battle between two relatively new clubs in the NHL. New York having joined in 1926 and Maroons in 1924. Montreal was regarded as a cinch to win because, as one newspaper report said, it was faster, had more class, was gentlemore rugged and better balanced.

A crowd of 11,000 turned up at the Montreal Forum for the first game expecting to see a slaughter. Maroons had a wide territorial edge but managed only a 2-0 win on goals by defenceman Red Dutton and Bill Phillips as Lorne Chabot was brilliant in the New York goal.

The late Lester Patrick was forced into action in the second game after Chabot was struck in the left eye by a Nels Stewart shot and Maroons refused to allow Rangers to use a substitute goalie from the stands.

There was no score when Patrick donned the goaltender's equipment early in the second period. Rangers won 2-1, Frank Boucher scoring the winner at 7:05 of overtime.

Patrick had 18 shots fired at him, Stewart scoring the only Montreal goal late in the third period off a rebound of Hooley Smith's shot. Bill Cook had put Rangers ahead 1-0 just 30 seconds after the start of the third.

New York had Lou Miller, a former New York Americans and Niagara Falls goaltender, in goal for the rest of the series.

Rangers' cause appeared hopeless after the third game, which Maroons won 2-0 on goals by Stewart and Babe Siebert.

The incident that marked that game was a fight between New York's Paul Thompson and Montreal's Joe Lamb early in the third period, resulting in automatic match penalties and forcing each club to play shorthanded for the remaining 15 minutes. The two players also were barred from the fourth game.

With Miller turning in a fantastic display Rangers evened the series by winning the fourth game 1-0 on Frank Boucher's goal early in the second period. Boucher whacked Bill Cook's rebound past Montreal goaltender Clint Benedict who had fallen making the save on Cook.

Boucher scored the only New York goals as Rangers won the deciding game 2-1 despite being badly outplayed. Miller, who during the season had been regarded as spare material at best, shared the hero's role, playing with badly swollen eyes after failing on a Maroon player's stick.

Phillips scored a goal for Maroons but there was confusion that was disallowed by referee Mike Rodden because of an offside. That angered the crowd of 12,000 in the Forum where all games were played because ice was unavailable in Madison Square Garden.

A sullen mob crowded around the front entrance of the Forum waiting for the referee to emerge. Rodden, however, left by the back door.

Writers of TV Plays Seem Fascinated by Mental Illness

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP)—Writers of television plays this season seem particularly fascinated by mental illness.

The Shark, on NBC's Show of the Week Sunday night, was still another variation of the now familiar homicidal-maniac-in-the-house plot. This time it was combined with another well-explored theme, about the man who feels eternally indebted to another.

The show opened with a violent scene of a man strangling a girl. Then the man, Fred (played by Anthony Franciosa) turns up at another house, 3,000 miles away.

The threat and sense of impending danger mounted all through the program, but it was predictable, too, for no one would have subjected his wife and child to danger at the hands of an obvious madman.

It was another morbid and unpleasant show. It didn't prove much except that a really good television script is a rare commodity these days.

Producers of CBS' Route 66 made a happy choice with Glenn Corbett as Martin Miller's future co-star—he's already gotten severe reactions from the younger viewers.

Wilson's Eliminate Woodstock

Trenton Wilson Concrete advanced into the Ontario Intermediate "C" basketball finals Saturday night, despite a 77-58 setback suffered in Woodstock.

Wilson's took the opening game in Trenton one week ago and won the total-points series 142-128.

The winner between Sudbury and Elliot Lake will clash with Wilson's for the provincial championship, the dates have been set for the finals.

Woodstock had a big first period Saturday, leading 24-25 at the half. They reduced the Trenton total lead to nine points at one time but Trenton matched them point for point in the second half, with Moore and Laws controlling the rebounds, to preserve the series victory.

Bob Burleigh turned in a powerful two-way performance to spark the Trenton club. He led the club in scoring with 18 points followed by Ted Batchelor with ten, Bob Moore with nine and John Nikiforuk with eight.

Five Woodstock players hit double figures, paced by ace Dick MacKenzie with 18. Bill Gillispie hooped 16, Jim Hoffman and Chuck Davies 12 apiece and Doug Murray ten.

Trenton Wilson (58)—B. Burleigh 19, C. Crews 6, G. Bambers 4, J. Nikiforuk 2, I. Theriault, P. Newsome, B. Moore 9, M. Eagen 2, D. Burke, T. Batchelor 16.

Woodstock (77) — D. MacKenzie 19, B. Goddard 8, B. Gillispie 16, J. Hoffman 12, D. Murray 10, L. Jenkins, C. Davies 12, H. McColl, W. Purchase.

RETAINS UBER CUP

WILMINGTON, Del. (AP)—The United States retained the Uber Cup women's badminton title Saturday night, defeating an English challenger four matches to three. The United States won the cup in 1957, and defended it successfully in 1960. The challenge is made every three years.

Peter O'Toole Looks Like Winner in the Oscar Awards

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Will this be the year of Lawrence or will Oscar listen to the Mockingbird?

That appears to be the major issue as post time approaches for tonight's Motion Picture Academy Awards, the 35th to be given in Hollywood.

Last-minute speculation centred around the possible sweep of awards. The annual pageant has taken on the aspect of a landslide in recent years, with films like West Side Story, Ben-Hur and Gigi taking a major share of the gilded statuettes.

If the same voting trend prevails this year, experts see Lawrence of Arabia as the front-runner. But To Kill a Mockingbird has attracted a lot of support as a piece of Americana and as a movie produced without a huge budget. Less likely candidates for best-picture honors are The Longest Day, Music Man and Mutiny on the Bounty.

The award-giving will start at 7 p.m. PST (10 p.m. EST).

PECK, LEMMON, PRESENT

Only Gregory Peck (To Kill a Mockingbird) and Jack Lemmon (Days of Wine and Roses) will be present of the starring actor nominees. Peter O'Toole (Lawrence) could not get away from his London play, Marcello Mastroianni (Divorce — Italian Style), at last word, was in Italy. Burt Lancaster is in bed with hepatitis.

Bette Davis (What Ever Happened to Baby Jane?) and Lee Remick (Days of Wine and Roses) are the only actress stars slated to attend.

Frank Sinatra is handling the host duties this year, Bob Hope having cancelled out because of a conflict in toothpaste sponsors.

The show is expected to last two hours.

support the coalition government, the objectives of the Geneva agreements cannot be fully realized."

Rusk said the Manila pact which set up SEATO in 1954 was collective security applied to the world-wide scope of the Communist threat.

Turning to South Viet Nam, Rusk said that although the struggle had intensified since the 1961 SEATO meeting, the Communist Viet Cong drive had been blunted, and there were some grounds for further encouragement.

"We believe that Viet Nam has now found the right strategy for meeting the Viet Cong terrorism, and is applying it with increasing vigor and success. The struggle may be protracted and bitter, but we have no doubt of ultimate victory."

Rusk said that since the 1961 SEATO meeting Communist subversion and terrorism in Thailand had become a real and present danger.

"The government of Thailand has moved with vigor and imagination to deal with it, and we are glad to lend our support to Thailand's counter - subversion program, together with other members of this alliance."

Main object of the conference was a full-scale review of developments in Southeast Asia during the last two years.

All the SEATO members are the U.S., Britain, France, Australia, New Zealand, Pakistan, the Philippines and Thailand.

fever pitch in the six weeks of stormy campaigning, highlighted by three of the biggest political rallies ever held in the nation.

Mr. Pearson drew a traffic-stopping 20,000 in Toronto Friday night, filling Maple Leaf Gardens and Massey Hall before additional thousands were turned away. The previous Friday night, New Democratic Leader Douglas spoke to nearly 18,000 in Maple Leaf Gardens with an overflow lining the street outside locked doors.

Real Caouette, the gutsy Social Credit leader who turned Quebec at a furious pace, capped his drive Friday night in the Montreal Forum before 15,000.

Elsewhere across the land standing - room - only crowds greeted the leaders in arenas, halls and school auditoriums.

AVOID TWO BIG CITIES

Mr. Diefenbaker avoided the country's two major cities. So, for the most part, did Social Credit Leader Thompson. The prime minister attracted heavy turnouts nonetheless.

Both Mr. Diefenbaker and Mr. Pearson ran into heavy heckling and noisy demonstrations.

At several stops anti-nuclear groups, showing a high degree of organization, tried to shout the Liberal leader down.

Although the question of nuclear arms for Canada was the most explosive issue, the four leaders seized on other main issues.

Mr. Diefenbaker built his campaign around a charge that opposition parties obstructed his government's program in Parliament.

Mr. Pearson hammered hard on the theme that a majority government was essential if the economic problems facing Canada were to be solved, saying only the Liberals stood a chance of forming one.

Mr. Thompson argued that the country needed new responsible leadership and a change in the monetary system to cure the country's ills.

Mr. Douglas put unemployment and the lack of economic growth at the top of his list and offered Canadians plain-speaking.

WARN IT'S CRUCIAL

All the leaders agreed on one point. Again and again they referred to the crucial decision of April 8 and warned that the future destiny of Canada might hinge on the election result.

The huge crowd turnouts and heavy heckling were taken as indications of a massive vote, possibly topping the previous record turnout of 79.8 per cent of eligible voters in 1958. Chief Electoral Officer Nelson Castonguay predicted the turnout would reach at least 80 per cent.

The Conservatives and Liberals fielded candidates in each of the 265 ridings. The New Democrats ran in 232 seats and Social Credit in 234. There were 12 Communists and 36 Independent candidates. The total was seven more than the previous record of 1,016 candidates in last year's election.

Although most voters made their decision today, the election was actually already over for more than 200,000 eligibles.

About 100,000 marked ballots in the advance polls held March 30 and April 1. Another 141,216 were eligible to vote in the special armed forces polls held between April 1 and last Saturday.

The vote by servicemen could be vital if tonight's election is a close one. Results of the service voting, by ridings, won't be announced until next weekend when they will be formally added to the civilian vote.

Last year the service vote ran 63.5 - per - cent Liberal and switched two seats from the Conservative to Liberal ranks.

Pro-Red

in February and with last Monday's assassination of the Laotian foreign minister, Quinim Pholsena, generally regarded as leader of the dissident pro-Red faction. Thousands lined the streets of Vientiane today for Pholsena's funeral.

Maj. Kham Meung, who took over as Kong Le's righthand man after the killing of Phassana, was shot last Tuesday and died in hospital later, according to a high police officer.

Neutralist Premier Prince Souvanna Phouma, who acknowledged that neutralist troops had withdrawn from Nam Khoung, 110 miles east of Vientiane, appealed to the International Control Commission to intervene in the deteriorating situation.

Prince Souvanna asked the commission, which in addition to the Indian chairman is made up of Canadian and Polish members, to station a truce team in the Plain of Jars. But the appeal was doomed by his half-brother, Prince Souphanouvong, the Pathet Lao leader who opposed it. Such a request must be backed by all three factions in the government—neutralists, pro-communists and rightists.

Prince Souvanna has announced he will visit the Plain of Jars this week with his half - brother to appeal for peace.

But high government sources said Prince Souvanna might have to postpone his visit. Southeasterly winds are reported unwilling to go.

Informed sources said Prince Souvanna met with British and Soviet ambassadors Donald Hopson and Sergei Afanasyev.

Britain and Russia were co-chairmen of the Geneva conference which drew up last year's agreement to make and keep Laos neutral and unified. Informed sources said the neutralists retreated 25 miles in the Plain of Jars under heavy attack. There were no further details on casualties but in previous skirmishes at least 22 neutralist soldiers and 12 Pathet Lao men were killed.

Publicity, Advertising Work for Ringling Bros. Circus Handled by Woman

By JIM PEACOCK

NEW YORK (CP) — When Mae Lyons was growing up in Regina, she thought about learning languages and becoming a welfare worker.

The circus was a far-away thing. She'd read about it—a little. But she'd never seen one and she'd never had the urge, not even secretly, to run away with one.

Miss Lyons, born in Pembroke, Ont. raised in Regina and employed for a time in Ottawa, is publicity and advertising director for Ringling Bros. Barnum and Bailey circus, the world's largest.

NOT GLAMOROUS

She says it is a time- and interest - consuming task, but one which gives her great enjoyment.

"I don't have the glamorous side of the circus," she said. "But I find talking about the circus is no much fun. It gives people a lot of pleasure and that gives me pleasure."

The job is demanding was obvious during an interview at Madison Square Garden, where the circus soon was to open a 40-day run. In the crowded circus office, telephones constantly interrupted the conversation as callers sought story possibilities, tickets, information about performers and advertising.

One caller asked permission for residents of a home for the aged, who had little money, to attend a free performance given for underprivileged children. Miss Lyons was sympathetic. Ringling arrangements to have children bring these "underprivileged" callers to the show thus giving them a chance to see the circus and, perhaps, providing an "angle" for a news story.

Finally, to get out of phone range, the interviewer moved to the empty caverns inside the Garden where later 300 performers and 200 animals who stage the three-ring show would romp.

WORKED IN OTTAWA

Miss Lyons recalled leaving Regina when she was about 18, going to work at the Governor-General's office in Ottawa shortly before the Second World War, then working there with the Services Auxiliary which provided entertainment for the army, navy and air force.

There she met author Robert Sherwood, then a writer on the staff of U.S. President Roosevelt, and Bill Fields, leading Broadway press agent then employed by the auxiliary. Both were members of a Broadway writing - producing group called the Playwrights Company and both had great influence on her eventual career.

In 1945, when she came to New York to study the Chinese language at Columbia University, Sherwood put pressure on her—"he finally made the salary so good I couldn't resist it," she said—to join the Playwrights' press - agent staff headed by Fields.

In 1946, she and Fields were married. She continued her career with Playwrights with time out to bear two sons, now 10 and 15, until 1961 when the company disbanded. Her husband, meanwhile, had the circus publicity account.

STARTED IN CUBA

"The first time I ever saw a circus," she recalled, "was in Havana in 1949. I went to Cuba four times to help my husband with publicity there."

Fields died of cancer in April, 1961, and a month later because of her familiarity with the circus publicity chores, Mae became general press representative for Ringling Bros. In March, 1962, she moved up to her present post.

Her tasks bear only a little similarity to those of the old-time circus "advance man," who visited ahead of the show, giving away tickets to merchants who put posters in windows and to newspaper men who wrote circus stories.

In fact, she said, distribution of free tickets is limited now, partly because the circus plays in arenas and not in tents.

"In the tent days" she said, "they could always stick in extra chairs to cover the free tickets. Now, the arena management has a lot to say about it."

The circus still has advance men—but these jobs are carried out by men on Mae's staff.

LITTLE TRAVELLING

Except for a month in Florida during rehearsals boning up on personalities for story ideas she can feed to her aides, and for a few trips to larger centres to help local promoters, Miss Lyons spends most of her time in New York, where she is a familiar figure to those in various news and advertising media.

Her days are filled with planning advertising material, supervising its production and overseeing its distribution, along with publicity information to the 55 cities where the circus plays during the 11-month season.

"I wasn't really interested in entertainment work," she recalled of younger days. ("Just say I'm over 35" she said when asked her age.)

"I was more interested in languages and had it in mind to be a welfare worker.

"But this is a tremendous experience and I wouldn't change it for anything now."

Tommy Douglas Predicts 20 PC Of Popular Vote

By TOM CLARIDGE

BURNABY, B.C. (CP) — An ebullient T. C. Douglas said Saturday night the New Democratic Party's election campaign "has far exceeded our fondest expectations."

The national NDP leader told an enthusiastic dinner rally in this Vancouver suburb that in his 25 years in politics had he seen "such a groundswell of enthusiasm from people in all walks of life."

He said that eight weeks ago the party decided not to run any more than 20 candidates in Quebec. But following the Liberal party's decision to favor nuclear weapons for Canada there had been a "spontaneous outburst" in French Canada for the NDP.

Mr. Douglas predicted his party would receive 18 to 20 per cent of the popular vote in today's general election. "And unless something unusual happens I don't think we'll see a majority government."

Another minority government wouldn't by any means necessarily be a bad thing. "If you get a poor government with a big majority," he said, "you're stuck with it for five years.

"But if a poor government hasn't a majority it can be pushed into doing what it ought to do."

RESTATES POSITION

The NDP leader restated his position against forming a coalition with any other party—"our philosophy is fundamentally different from that of the old-line parties." But the NDP would support a government pledged to undertake certain measures, among them an immediate increase in old-age pensions to $75 a month.

Mr. Douglas said the Liberals, who for years had posed as the friend of the working class, "have done a complete about-face in the current campaign."

He said Liberal leader Pearson, in engineering the change, had become "the darling of Bay Street."

"The Liberal party has now become the Tory party of Canada."

Turning to the nuclear arms question, he said the campaign has convinced him "that the great mass of the Canadian people do not want Canada to join the nuclear club."

"Whatever the outcome is Monday . . . I will not support any government or vote any money toward acquiring nuclear arms for Canada. I will not and I cannot. My conscience cannot permit it. Canada would only be aggravating the already-perilous world situation.

HELPS HANDICAPPED

MONTREAL (CP)—A Montreal lodge of handicapped teenagers was formed Saturday as part of a national organization seeking legislation at the federal and provincial levels to enable handicapped to become self-sufficient. The organization is the National Family Association for the Physically Handicapped, with headquarters in Ottawa.

Socreds Will Oppose Lesage Next Election

ROUYN, Que. (CP)— Real Caouette, Social Credit deputy leader, wound up his campaign Sunday night by serving notice that his group will campaign against the Liberal government of Premier Lesage in the next Quebec provincial election.

Mr. Caouette told a hometown crowd of 1,400 in a church basement that Premier Lesage made a mistake when he intervened in the federal election campaign and that he will regret it.

"We will meet again in the next provincial election."

Mr. Caouette predicted that the Quebec sales tax will be increased to eight per cent from six within a couple of months to cover the provincial deficit of $146,000,000 forecast for 1963-64.

It was Mr. Caouette's third meeting in the last six weeks. Earlier Sunday he addressed meetings of 600 in Malartic and 1,200 in Val d'Or.

Service Vote To Decide S. Hastings

Grills' Lead 45; D. Alkenbrack; Webb Returned

Lead Keeps Changing In Temple-Grills Race

Traditionally Tory Hastings South yesterday tossed its federal election result literally into the hands of the armed services.

A record constituency vote of 85 per cent gave Lee Grills, Progressive Conservative, seeking a fourth term at Ottawa, 14,886 votes with Liberal Robert Temple receiving 14,941; a Grills' whisker margin of 55 votes.

Les Digby, New Democratic Party candidate and George Mallory, Social Credit aspirant, were never in the running. Digby polled 1422 votes with Mallory getting 257.

While naturally disappointed at the constituency result, the Liberal camp last night was quietly confident the situation would be changed next Monday when the results of the armed services votes are announced.

Mr. Temple and the Liberals base their confidence in success on the fact that in the 1963 election the Grills plurality was cut from 2215 to 1646 after the military votes were tabulated.

The remainder of this Eastern-Central Ontario bloc retained its hoary Conservative traditions.

In Hastings-Frontenac, Rod Webb was returned to office over Liberal William Shannon by a substantial majority. Mr. Webb polled 17,841 votes to 14,863 against Shannon's 5,978. The Rev. Russell Thomas, Social Credit received 715 votes while James Elliott, NDP balloted 941.

After an early close fight Douglas Alkenbrack was given another term in Prince Edward-Lennox defeating Liberal Lloyd Woolsey by a majority of 1,-949 votes.

Howard Wesse, NDP, was hopelessly out of the running with 693 votes as was Lawrence Omarra, Social Credit who polled 194.

In Northumberland, to the west the story was different. On her second Dr. Pauline Jewett won the riding for the Liberals.

RECORD VOTE HERE

The vote polled in the Hastings South constituency is a record one, 31,406 voters going to the polls under almost ideal weather conditions. This figure, roughly 83 per cent of the voting potential, exceeded that of 1958 when the Progressive Conservative won 50 seats and the Liberals 25.

The Liberals, who lost Rimouski and Labelle to Social Credit, gained six seats from the Progressive Conservatives and seven from the Social Crediters who surprised everyone last year by taking 26 ridings.

The Liberals knocked out one Conservative minister—Defence Production Minister Raymond O'Hurley who blamed his defeat in Lotbinière on "very bad support from the press."

ASSELIN DEFEATED

Another cabinet minister, Forests Minister Martial Asselin, nanowed to the cabinet in the midst of the campaign, failed to regain Charlevoix where Social Crediter Antoine Belanger was re-elected.

Three other cabinet ministers, however, were re-elected: Transport Minister Balcer in Trois-Rivieres; Mines Minis-

LIBERAL PARTY GETS MAJORITY QUEBEC SEATS

Socreds and PCs Lose Ground

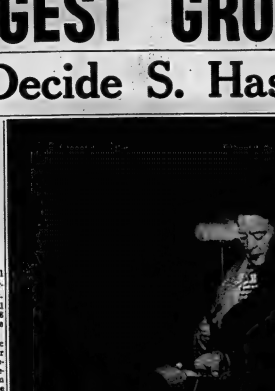
QUEBEC (CP)—The Liberal party once again has the majority support of Quebec voters.

With Saguenay riding still in doubtful, the Liberals hold 46 of the province's 75 seats in the House of Commons.

While this result in Quebec does not approach the four decades of Liberal sweeps between 1911 and 1867, it represents a gain of 11 seats from the Progressive Conservative and Social Credit parties.

It was the 19th time in 26 federal elections since Confederation that Liberals held a majority of Quebec seats, and restored some of the prestige lost in 1958 when the Progressive Conservative won 50 seats and the Liberals 25.

The Liberals, who lost Rimouski and Labelle to Social Credit, gained six seats from the Progressive Conservatives and seven from the Social Crediters who surprised everyone last year by taking 26 ridings.



The Liberals knocked out one Conservative minister—Defence Production Minister Raymond O'Hurley who blamed his defeat in Lotbinière on "very bad support from the press."

Greg Peck, Anne Bancroft Best Actor and Actress

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — Gregory Peck, the peace-making country lawyer of To Kill a Mockingbird, and Anne Bancroft, the heroic teacher of young Helen Keller in The Miracle Worker, have been hailed the best actor and actress of 1962 at the 35th annual Academy Awards.

Lawrence of Arabia, the $13,000,000 desert epic, scored Monday night as the best-picture of the year, and won six other awards, including direction by David Lean.

In a night that was marked by surprises, Academy voters gave supporting awards to youth and maturity—16-year-old Patty Duke, the helpless Helen Keller of The Miracle Worker, and character actor Ed Begley, the growling, ruthless southern political boss of Sweet Bird of Youth.

For Peck, 47, it was the climax of a 20-year career in films. He had been nominated five times for Hollywood's highest honor, but not for 13 years.

The choice of Peck was obviously a popular one and the audience of 2,500 at Santa Monica's Civic Auditorium erupted in waves of applause.

Peck thanked all those associated with him in the making of To Kill a Mockingbird and his close friends for the moral support.

Miss Bancroft, 31, is appearing in Mother Courage on the New York stage. Joan Crawford, who starred in Miss Bancroft's film, Whatever Happened to Baby Jane?, was not present.

Miss Majority By Seven Seats; Four In Doubt

Liberals 126, PC's 94, Socreds 24 and NDP 17

By DAVE McINTOSH
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The Liberals led by Lester B. Pearson won Monday's election with the biggest bloc of seats —probably 30 more than for the Conservatives— but missed by six or seven the 133 needed for a majority in the 265-member Commons.

Prime Minister Diefenbaker gave no indication he would resign.

No decision on what party governs Canada is likely at least until the armed forces vote is announced this weekend. And the decision may await convening of the 26th Parliament, probably in May.

The standings:

| | 1963 | 1962 | 1958 | 1957 |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| Lib | 126 | 100 | 49 | 107 |
| PC | 94 | 116 | 208 | 112 |
| SC | 24 | 30 | 0 | 19 |
| NDP (CCF) | 17 | 19 | 8 | 25 |
| Ind. | 0 | 0 | 0 | 2 |
| Total | 265 | 265 | 265 | 265 |

Three of the seats left doubtful overnight were in Nova Scotia where a storm played hob with communications. They were Digby - Annapolis - Kings, where Finance Minister Nowlan held a thin lead over his Liberal opponent Malcolm Colwell; Hants and one of the two Halifax seats. The fourth doubtful riding was Saguenay.

RECORD VOTE POLLED

The civilian vote was a record, probably exceeding 7,800,000. The voter turnout rivalled the previous record of 79.8 per cent set in 1958.

With 97 per cent of the returns in, the Liberal share of the popular vote increased to 41 per cent from 37.3 last year and the Conservative share dropped to 33 per cent from 37.2. Other two parties showed little change, with Social Credit at 12 per cent compared with 11.6 and the NDP at 14 per cent compared with 13.5.

Though the Liberals had some 30 more seats than the Conservatives, Mr. Diefenbaker hinted he might remain as prime minister. To do this, he would need the support of both the Social Credit and New Democratic parties. They have ruled out any coalition.

He told reporters at Prince Albert, Sask., that the situation appeared much the same as in 1925 when the Liberals won 101 seats to 116 for the Conservatives, 24 for the Progressives plus four others in the then 245-seat Commons. Conservative Prime Minister Mackenzie King had stayed in office with the support of the Progressives.

Mr. Diefenbaker declined comment on the statement by his former colleague, Minister Douglas Harkness, that he (Mr.

PRIME MINISTER DETERMINED TO FACE SESSION

Cabinet Meeting Next Week

PRINCE ALBERT, Sask. (CP)—A determination to face the 26th Canadian Parliament as prime minister was indicated strongly Monday night by John Diefenbaker.

The 67-year-old lawyer, who had watched his minority government position eroded to a point where the Liberals held a 4-2-1-1 advantage in unofficial returns, declined comment on events in 1925 when a Liberal government continued in office under similar circumstances.

The Liberal's captured 126 seats Monday, the Conservatives 94, Social Credit 24 and New Democratic Party 17.

Four seats still were in doubt early Tuesday.

He told reporters he was deciding today when to return to Ottawa and when the next cabinet meeting would be held.

NEEDS ARMY VOTE

But nothing else would be decided, Mr. Diefenbaker emphasized, until the final vote had been counted — including the service vote which takes about a week.

He used Liberal Leader Pearson's post-election statement as a basis for his decision.

"He (Mr. Pearson) said that no decision will be made at this time and there would not be any determination as to whether there was or was not any minority government until all the votes have been counted and tabulated." He made the latter told a press conference

SERVICE VOTE MAY DECIDE SIX RIDINGS

Liberals Challenge In Four of Them

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Six constituencies — possibly more—with photo finishes in Monday's federal election could be affected by the armed services vote and by likely recounts.

The armed services vote might decide whether Lester B. Pearson's federal party obtains a majority of the 265 Commons seats.

Five seats were won by fewer than 100 votes and a sixth—one of the four seats still undecided when vote-counting ended Monday night—was also close as paint.

Of the six seats, Liberals were

Mr. Harkness, who resigned from the cabinet Feb. 3 over the nuclear warheads issue, was reelected in Calgary North while External Affairs Minister Green who holds anti-nuclear views, was one of six cabinet ministers defeated.

Mr. Pearson said at Ottawa that the armed forces vote, which was 63.5-per-cent Liberal last year, could give his party a clear majority.

He indicated that he expects to be asked to form a government. He told his party workers: "My pledge is not to put

Warheads Soon If Liberals Form Govt.

-- Hellyer

TORONTO (CP) — Canada's Bomarc-ground-to-air guided missiles will have nuclear warheads within two weeks if the Liberals form the federal government, Liberal defence critic Paul Hellyer said Monday night after regaining his seat in Toronto Trinity.

Returning Mr. Hellyer declined to say whether he expected to be the Liberal defence minister should the Liberals form the government.

"That would depend on Mr. Pearson," he said. "If he is called upon to form a government, he would have to decide who would be in the cabinet and what positions they would have."

Grit Steam-Roller Slows On Reaching Rural Areas

TORONTO (CP) — The Liberals steam - rollered through the major Ontario cities in Monday's federal election, flattening traditional citadels of Conservative strength. But resistance in rural areas halted them short of the gains which would have supplied the springboard to a national majority.

Liberals won 51 of the province's 85 ridings, a net gain of seven from the 44 they won last June 18. Progressive Conservatives captured 26, down seven from last year, and the New Democrats were unchanged at six.

Before the election Liberal organizers said they were counting on 60 victories in Ontario, which has the biggest provincial group of Commons seats. The three Ontario cabinet ministers in the province were toppled by the avalanche of Liberal urban votes which swept Toronto, Ottawa and Hamilton entirely clear of Conservative MPs.

Postmaster - General Ellen Fairclough lost Jin Hamilton West where she had posted five previous wins. Immigration Minister Richard A. Bell was rejected in Carleton the riding in Ottawa's west end which had votedConservative in every federal election since Confederation in 1867. Frank McGee, minister without portfolio, went

NDP Price for Backing Liberals Will Be Fixed by Party Caucus

BURNABY, B.C. (CP)—T. C. Douglas has left no doubt that for a price the New Democratic Party will promise support for a Liberal minority government. But just what the price will be is up to the NDP's new Ottawa caucus produced in Monday's federal election.

The national NDP leader told reporters Monday night his party will adhere to a pledge to support the largest group in parliament should no party win a majority—provided the minority government commits itself to a program of economic measures drawn up by the party during "many years."

One of the measures would be an increase in the old-age pension to $75 a month.

Mr. Douglas has suggested on other occasions another condition might be immediate rene-

He refused to be drawn out further on NDP policy to meet the wishes of the party's Ottawa caucus has met on the question.

Mr. Douglas won personal victory in Burnaby-Coquitlam, taking the suburban Vancouver seat by a 5,000-vote margin over Liberal Tom Kent, economic adviser to Liberal Leader Pearson.

The NDP chief said he had "no complaints" and was "neither disappointed nor pleased" at the overall outcome of the election.

But he was disturbed at the loss of a number of NDP members in the last hour, among them Deputy-Leader David Lewis. He was gratified at the party's showing in Quebec where the NDP doubled its popular vote without winning any seats.

He said whether Liberal defence policy might prevent the NDP from supporting the Liberals in a minority would depend.

"I don't know what their policy is and I don't think they do either."

But he said the next move would be up to Prime Minister Diefenbaker, constitutionally privileged to decide between an immediate resignation and facing Parliament.

Youth Arrested In Tampa Hotel On Theft Charge

TAMPA, Fla. (AP)—A young Canadian has been arrested by the FBI in a Tampa hotel on a charge of stealing $5,000 from a bank in Hamilton, Ont., while filling in for his father as a guard.

FBI Agent Joseph F. Santolana Jr. identified the youth Monday as Gary Jack Peters, 19, of Hamilton. He said more than $5,000 in Canadian currency was recovered.

The FBI agent quoted authorities in Hamilton as saying that Peters' parents were both employed on the janitor staff of the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce.

47 Africans Drown in Bus

NAIROBI, Kenya (Reuters)—Forty-seven Africans were drowned when their bus plunged off a bridge into the River Tiva some 60 miles east of Nairobi Sunday night, police announced here Monday.

The announcement revised an earlier police figure of 72 dead. The victims were 31 women, nine men and seven children—all members of a religious sect on their way to a religious ceremony.

Will Diefenbaker Pattern Action On King's Minority Govt. in 1925?

OTTAWA (CP)—Echoes of a Canadian political drama of 38 years ago are being heard again on Parliament Hill as a result of Monday's federal election voting.

Will—Prime Minister John Diefenbaker, with his minority support in the Commons cut severely, pattern his decisions in the next few days on the record of the late Mackenzie King in 1925?

Mr. Diefenbaker hinted Monday night in Prince Albert that he might remain in office to face the expected 26th Parliament this spring and try to win a vote of confidence by wooing support of the two smaller parties.

In 1925, the Liberals under late Mr. King won only 101 seats in a 245-member Commons against 116 Conservatives. There were also 24 Progressives, on whom Mr. King counted for support, and four others.

Mr. King managed to remain in office for almost a year.

The votes of 141,210 eligible Canadian servicemen and their dependents are expected to be announced next weekend. A few days later, local returning officers will make their official counts. The candidates then have four days to request recounts.

Liberal party strategists Monday night began quick calculations to determine whether the service vote results and recounts might provide sufficient gains to give the party a bare majority—that is, the 265-seat Commons.

Mr. Diefenbaker hinted that, if the Diefenbaker government chooses to face the 26th Parliament the new Parliament's first compliations appear to be more formidable than those confronting Mr. King in 1925.

Mr. King had only to win the support of the 24 Progressives. Mr. Diefenbaker would have to get help from both Social Credit and New Democratic members. Generally, they stare at opposite ends of the political spectrum.

In the short-lived 25th Parliament elected last June 18, Mr. Diefenbaker had the largest group, 116, and needed only the support of either the 30-member Social Credit group or the 19 New Democratic Party MPs to outvote the 100 Liberals.

90 Per Cent of Vote Counted Within Hour of Closing Polls But Results Slow Coming In

Some deputy returning officers just never seem to learn!

Although possibly 90 per cent of the vote in South Hastings was counted within an hour of the closing of the polls at seven o'clock, the final result of the vote was not known at the returning office in Belleville until nearly eleven o'clock.

The reason — about 15 of the deputy returning officers failed to phone in the results.

They did, however, phone the results in to their candidates' committee rooms and felt that was all that was required.

"It is the same old story," lamented Returning Officer William A. VanTassel as he and his office crew waited patiently for the count from the missing polls.

HAPPENS EVERY TIME

"It was impressed on all deputy returning officers to phone in the results to the returning office in Belleville, but this is what happens every time," Mr. VanTassel said.

The polls hadn't been closed for more than ten minutes when the first poll reported from the Tweed district.

Within the next few minutes another three or four reported.

Then came the deluge, and for the next half hour or so a battery of three telephones was continuously in use as results from all parts of the riding were received.

FORM WAS BLANK

One deputy returning officer brought in her ballot box and handed over the election form.

But when the envelope was opened, the space opposite the candidates' names was blank and the deputy returning officer didn't remember the vote.

But she had phoned the results to the candidate's committee room and Mr. VanTassel had to call there to get the results.

Purchasing Agents Hold Spring Seminar

There was almost an unlimited supply of pertinent information on methods and procedures of value to purchasing agents and related professions at Queen's University's Ellis Hall on Saturday. The occasion was the Spring Educational seminar sponsored by the Purchasing Agents' Association of Eastern Ontario.

"Cost Aspects of Inventory Management" was the first subject discussed and generated lengthy and lively discussion periods. Dr. C. W. Kay of the School of Business Administration, Western University, was the lecturer and moderator for this subject.

Dr. May, after listing some two dozen essential points of inventory management, likened the job to "a juggler with several balls in the air at the same time. To keep them there he must look at them all." The minute he concentrates on only one or two, his set comes crashing down."

He stressed the importance of carefully assessing all aspects of inventory management, making certain they are economical and efficient. Good methods of controlling inventory, or lack of them, can make or break any business regardless of size or type.

The purchasing agents' responsibilities under The Combines Investigation Act was the subject dealt with by Dr. R. F. Crane of Queen's Faculty of Law. He stressed the portions of Part V of the Act which relate in part to purchasing practices.

Dr. Crane pointed out several pitfalls that an uninformed or unsuspecting purchasing agent could encounter in the course of his duties. "The purchaser becomes liable if and when he enters into an agreement on special prices or concessions that aid the creation of a monopoly". He also touched on price fixing and the use of "loss leaders" as a means of increasing sales volume.

LUNCHEON HELD

Association president W. K. Templeton of Trenton presided over the luncheon served in the Students Union of the University. Among the guests introduced were Alderman Hunter; who welcomed the group to Kingston and Mr. W. A. Small, secretary treasurer of the Canadian Association of Purchasing Agents, Toronto.

Mr. J. E. Laurie of London, educational chairman of C.A.P.A. was the luncheon speaker. He chose as his subject "Why Educate?" and directed his remarks at its relation to the purchasing group.

Mr. Laurie pointed out the many advantages to be derived from the course in purchasing. "Not only do the better educated receive more money and gain more prestige, they have trained minds capable of coping with all the problems of business".

He told his listeners that C.A.P.A. has hired a professional educator to direct a new educational program in the association.

Belleville and district firms represented were: International Hardware Co. of Canada, H. M. Burley; Head Johnson of Canada, Ltd., L.G. McBrien; Northern Electric Co. Ltd., F. W. Sheffield and E.E. Palmer; Wilson Concrete Ltd., D. Laundry and W. Sinerie; Belleville General Hospital, N. H. Roeske; Avon Jewellery Ltd., J. H. Maurer; H. Corby Distillery Ltd., J. N. Hunter.

Herman told police he had attempted to smash locks on the machine with a file. There was $35 in the machine but before he could open it "he got frightened away," a police officer told Magistrate T. V. Wills.

The magistrate remanded the youth a week.

City People Not Satisfied Says President

MONTREAL (CP) — Egan Chambers, national president of the Progressive Conservative Association, said Monday night his party's losses showed the "city people were not satisfied with the policies of the government."

He was the defeated candidate in Montreal St. Laurence St. George.

"We had very little editorial opinion on our side in the big cities and that's where we were really hurt," he said.

The open differences of opinion on the matter of taxes within the Progressive Conservative party "may have had some effect on the outcome.

"We were more honest by bringing our differences of opinion before the party out in the open," he said.

Grills

eral voters giving Temple 3447 to Grills' 3310 at the 43 poll mark.

With 84 polls in Temple appeared to be headed for a great lead, carrying at that time a margin of 325 votes.

The contestants were "breathing down each other's necks" when the result of 134 polls was announced, with the lead changed and Grills credited with 11,963 votes as against 11,979 for his opponent.

From here in the lead changed hands several times until with nine polls to go, eight from Trenton, Grills held a margin of 185 votes. The Trenton results swung the pendulum towards Temple but not enough to carry the day. It did however cut the Grills' margin to the final figure of 45 votes.

CUT PC MAJORITIES

The Liberal reprise cut sharply into the Conservatives majorities of last June throughout the entire constituency. However Mr. Temple failed to capture any more than two of the eleven polling divisions.

These were Trenton and the Royal Canadian Air Station, which upped their previous majorities by substantial amounts.

The town of Trenton swung sharply to the Liberal side, giving Temple a majority of 699 votes as compared to 291 in the last election. Temple polled 2,704 and Grills 2,005.

The RCAF ran true to its 1962 form giving Temple 558 votes to Grills 310 or a majority of 448, an increase of 102 over the last election.

CLOSE IN CITY

However, it remained for city voters to gouge deeply into previous Conservative majorities and nearly swing the tide of victory to the Liberal side.

The net city opinion swung sharply to Temple giving him 6,789 votes of the 13,934 ballots cast. This netted 7,056 for an urban majority of 288.

In the 1962 election Conservatives voters gave their representative 7,232 votes as against 4,909 for Mr. Temple or a majority of 2,531.

This nine bite of 2,234 votes into the 1963 Grills' majority was the main factor in the upsurge of Temple although as was mentioned he cut deeply into the Grills' majorities outside the city.

MAJORITIES CUT

Rural and outlying communities' loyalty to the Conservative party was unchanged but Liberals took heart from the fact the Grills' majorities were cut sharply from last year with the exception of three which noted a minor gain.

Mr. Grills upped his 1962 majorities in Frankford where he polled 582 votes to Temple's 417 for a margin of 165, a 17-vote gain over 1962.

The village of Tweed gave Grills 693 votes and Temple 633 for a Conservative majority of seven and an increase of five over the last election.

Hungerford gave Grills the largest margin polling 606 Conservative votes as against 506 for Temple, a majority of 100 and an increase of 42 over the June, 1962 election.

Sidney showed a swing toward the Liberal side polling 1660 votes for Grills and 1290 for Temple, a Grills' majority of 370 as compared to 270 in the last election.

Thurlow is traditionally Conservative but here again the 1962 Grills' majority was lowered. He polled 1329 as against his opponent's 758, a majority of 570. In June last year Grills had a 528 majority.

TYENDINAGA CLOSE

The race was a close one in Tyendinaga, Grills taking the township by the slim margin of seven votes. Last election he enjoyed a 45 majority. The poll: Grills 692, Temple 685.

Deseronto staged a nip-and-tuck fight giving Grills 396 and Temple 387 for a Grills' majority of 12. This was a 32 decrease from last year's Conservative margin.

Stirling clipped 34 votes from the Grills' majority of last year, giving him 562 votes and Temple 417 for a Conservative margin of 145.

The trend toward Liberalism in this traditionally Tory constituency has been marked since the 1958 elections.

In that year the Liberals polled 10,119 votes; in 1962 12,978 votes and yesterday 14,941, or an increase of 4,722 ballots.

The Conservative vote has dropped sharply since 1958 when it was 17,072. In 1962 the vote was 15,293 and yesterday 14,896.

Mr. Digby the NDP candidate, noted a decrease in his support over the previous election. In 1962 he polled an official 1,737 votes, including the armed services vote as against 1,422 unofficial ballots yesterday.

Social Credit failed to get a toe-hold, polling only 237 votes. THREE EARLY FIGHT

In Prince Edward - Lennox it was an early close fight between Mr. Allenbrack and Mr. Woolsey with the Lennox voters swinging slightly to the Liberal.

The Stirling - Frontenac election was never in doubt. Mr. Webb took a big lead after early returns came in and was never headed. Mr. Shannon conceded the election shortly after 8:30 last night.

The day of the street parade and noisy demonstration is apparently over. There were no outward demonstrations last night, due perhaps to the uncertainty of the constituency election.

However there was a quiet confidence in Liberal headquarters after the final returns were submitted, a confidence arising out of the possibilities of ultimate victory through the military vote.

MAKE STATEMENTS

This was borne out in a post-election statement by Mr. Temple, who admitted "I am quite optimistic of the outcome as the electors await the result of the service vote.

"It was a real cliff-hanger; a horse-race," Mr. Temple said, expressing his appreciation of his followers and supporters.

The election is not over," he said, "but I want to express my compliments to Mr. Grills, Les Digby and Mr. Mallory."

Mr. Grills said: "I am still slightly confused over what has happened but I want to say that what I said was the truth.

"I bear no ill will or ill feeling toward anybody and am looking forward confidently to the future."

Regardless of what happens in Hastings South I still think it is the best place in the world to live and I hope to stay here the rest of my life," said Mr. Grills.

The Ontario Intelligencer-sponsored radio broadcast here kept the public well informed on returns from all parts of the area reported returns at periodic intervals.

The returning officer's headquarters was a hive of activity with officials and line jobs collecting returns and relaying them to news outlets.

In the newspaper's news room an augmented editorial staff manned a battery of telephones and was kept busy despite the radio and television media.

Reporters stationed at strategic spots relayed news from other ridings and aided greatly in keeping the public informed to the minute.

Liberal supporters from all corners of the Hastings South riding flocked to the Club Canara at Belleville last night while the final election results were still coming in. Liberal candidate, Robert Temple told them he was 45 votes behind his opponent P. C. Lee Grills, but had reason to feel he would be the ultimate winner when the results of the servicemen's balloting were announced next Monday. With his wife he headed a motor cavalcade visiting waiting crowds at Trenton, Middleton Park, Stirling, Tweed, Shannonville and Deseronto.

Progressive Conservatives in South Hastings are now awaiting the result of the armed services' vote, after the civilian vote counted last night gave Lee Grills, M.P. since 1957 and the Progressive Conservative candidate, a narrow 45-vote edge over his Liberal rival, Robert Temple. Above, from left to right, are Mr. Grills, his daughter Betty and Mrs. Grills, who shared with him in his campaign activities.

Rt. Rev. K. C. Evans Dedicates Memorials at St. Thomas' Ch.

The official visit of the Bishop of the Diocese, the Right Rev. K. C. Evans, M.A., D.D., to St. Thomas' Church on Sunday brought together many of the families of the parish and made Palm Sunday a day that will always be remembered in the life and history of this old historic parish. At the 11.00 a.m. service, attended by a capacity congregation, the Rector, the Venerable A. S. McConnell, M.B.E., L.Th., presented a class of 46 candidates for Confirmation. The Rev. D. W. Sinclair, B.A., B.Th., acted as Bishop's Chaplain. The musical portion of the service was under the direction of Mr. D. W. Davenport, organist, and the choir sang the anthem "Lo, Round the Throne" by H. G. Ley.

Preaching on the text, "I beseech you, therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God, that you present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God which is your reasonable service," the Bishop pointed out the fact that the Christian life was reasonable but that all of us must make sacrifices if we are to live fully to the glory of God. He referred to the tragic death of the late Robert A. Pringle, Q.C. and his loss to the parish and the Diocese—where he acted as Chancellor. He told the large congregation that he was most happy to be able to appoint their Rector as Archdeacon of Ontario, and thanked the parish for their continued support and loyalty both to him and the Diocese.

MEMORIALS DEDICATED

Following the Confirmation, the Bishop dedicated the following memorials: The altar rail—a gift from the Altar Guild; the Sanctuary panelling, by Mr. E. Ingram; the sanctuary chair—by parents; two clergy Prie Dieux, by Mrs. A. J. Brians, in memory of her father; family pew for clergy seats and choir seating, by Mrs. Lee Osborne, in memory of her father; two choir frontals, by the Ketcheson family, in memory of their parents; choir seating, placed through the St. Thomas' Church Memorial Fund in memory of Mrs. Margaret Blakslee and Mr. Robert A. Pringle, Q.C., Chancellor of the Diocese of Ontario.

At 3.00 p.m. the official opening and dedication of the new parish house addition took place in the presence of a large crowd of interested people. The visitors were received by the Lord Bishop, the Venerable A. S. and Mrs. McConnell, Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Fort and Dr. and Mrs. P. G. Loder, church wardens and their wives.

REV. K. C. EVANS

Following the reception those present were called to order by Mr. Mac Smith, a former church warden and member of the building committee, who acted as chairman.

He thanked all those who assisted in any way in the erection of the new building and called on the warden, Mr. R. J. Murray, of the Hugh Murray Construction Company, who passed the keys to the building to Mr. L. A. Kells, chairman of the Building Committee, who, in turn, handed them to the two Church Wardens, Mr. A. J. Forte and Dr. P. G. Loder.

BUILDING DEDICATED

After this official act, the Rector called upon the Bishop to dedicate the building, following which greetings were brought by His Worship, Mayor A. McLean Haig, O.B.E., on behalf of the City of Belleville and the Rev. C. W. Coleman, on behalf of the Belleville Ministerial Association, and by the Rev. Canon R. B. Wright, of Picton, on behalf of the clergy of the Deanery.

A nice gesture on the part of the members of the Col. Percy Wills, Branch 387 of the Canadian Legion, was the presentation of a chrome to Archdeacon McConnell by their president, Mrs. "Billie" Kirby for the Building Fund.

A group of young ladies of the junior choir, under the direction of Mr. D. W. Davenport, sang "My Eyes Are Beauty Blind," by Herbert Howells.

After the formalities were concluded, refreshments were served by the ladies of the parish under the direction of Mrs. M. F. L. Jones, and Mrs. W. M. Page.

Those pouring at the well appointed tables were: Mrs. Harry Smith, president of the Afternoon W.A.; Mrs. J. A. Pringle, president of the Women's Church Year; Mrs. A. S. F. Geen, president of the Evening W.A., and Mrs. F. Clarke of the Altar Guild.

WORK DISPLAYS

Different parish organizations had displays of the work done by them. The attractive building in all its colors of pastel green with drapes in a slightly darker green material was greatly enriched by an abundance of beautiful flowers among them being an exquisite table centre piece arrangement sent Mrs. Russell Weese, and a beautiful basket of cut flowers, the gift of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Murray.

challengers in four and Social Credit candidates in the other seven.

Closest was Saguenay riding in Quebec an undecided seat which went to the polls still to report Monday night, Liberal Alphonse Bissonnette ahead of Social Creditor Laurent Maltais who held the seat by 1,000 votes last June.

ONTARIO RACES CLOSE

Two other extra-close races were in Ontario, with Liberals ahead in the early stages of Progressive Conservatives in both.

In Hastings South, Conservative Lieutenant Lee Grills edged Liberal Robert Temple by 45 votes and in Lambton-Kent Conservative M. T. McCutcheon ousted Liberal John Burgess by 69 votes.

The armed forces vote in last year's election went Liberal by majorities of 1,000 in Hastings South and 79 votes in Lambton-Kent.

In the Chase, Social Creditor Bertrand Dumond was unseated by Liberal Herman Laverdiere by 65 votes.

The service vote, taken all last week, by the bulk of the civilian count next weekend. It has reversed election - day results in the past. In the 1962 election, Liberals received 63.5 per cent of the service vote, Conservatives 28.5 per cent and 6.5 and the New Democratic Party 1.5.

LEAD WIDE MARGINS

There were two ridings where the winning margin was between 100 and 200. Progressive Conservative Miss Mines Minister Paul Martineau led Liberal Paul Gouin by 137 votes, and Rimouski where Social Creditor Gerard Ouellett defeated Liberal Jean Lesage by 143 votes.

Other narrow victory margins in the standing on the basis of complete or nearly-complete unofficial returns:

Kings, P.E.I., Liberal John Mullally over Conservative Mrs. Margaret Macdonald by 330 votes.

Prince, P.E.I., Liberal J. Watson MacDonald over Conservative Lorne Monkley by 301 votes.

Labelle, Que., Social Creditor Gerard Girouard over Liberal Gaston Clermont by 389 votes.

Levis, Que., Liberal Raynald Guay over Social Creditor Aurelien Roy by 394 votes.

Richmond-Wolfe, Que., Liberal Patrick Asselin over Social Creditor Andre Bernier by 306 votes.

EDGES LIBERAL

Shefford, Que., Social Creditor Gilbert Rondeau over Liberal Gerard Lavallie by 227 votes.

Kent, Ont., Conservative Harold Danforth over Liberal Sidney Clanis by 328 votes.

Northumberland, Ont., Liberal Pauline Jewett over Conservative Harry Bradley by 268 votes.

Toronto Danforth, New Democrat Reid Scott over Liberal John Whitehead by 390 votes.

Medicine Hat, Alta., Social Creditor H. A. Olson over Conservative Ted Brunsden by 186 votes.

Kamloops, B.C., Conservative C. J. M. Willoughby over Liberal Jari Whist by 279 votes.

PCsLEAD

In three Nova Scotia ridings undecided at the end of vote-counting last night with Conservatives leading in each, last year's service vote gave a majority to the Liberals in each case.

In a battle for the second of the two Halifax seats—the first went Liberal—Conservative incumbent Robert McCleave held a 211-vote lead over Liberal Gerald A. Regan with a 105 of 261 polls still to be heard from Monday night.

Last year's service vote favored the two Liberal candidates in Halifax by majorities of 1,818 and 1,877 over the leading Conservative.

Premier Minister George Nowlan, seeking re-election in Dipby-Annapolis Kings, held a 738-vote lead over Liberal John Shaffner with 43 of 194 polls still to report. Last year Mr. Nowlan trailed in the service vote by 175 votes.

In Colchester-Hants, Conservative Cyril F. Kennedy was 314 votes ahead of Liberal Hector Hill with 36 of 177 polls to report. Last year Mr. Kennedy trailed in the service vote by 196.

Rodney Webb Was Easy Hastings-Frontenac Victor

BANCROFT — Prog. Conservative Rod Webb was a shoo-in in Hastings - Frontenac as returns from all polls in Hastings has voted Conservative for nearly twenty years. The electrical appliance dealer from Norwood took a lead with the first ten polls, and by the final count last night he had polled nearly twice as many votes as Liberal Bill Shannon, reeve of Marmora. Social Credit candidate, H. James, and N.D.P. candidate, J. Elliott, polled less than 1,000 votes each to Shannon's 6,000 plus and Webb's 12,000 plus.

Webb's lead was so obvious from the first stages, "that Bill Shannon conceded the election at 9.25 p.m. after 143 polls had been tallied. He had won only by 11 p.m.

Progressive Conservative candidate Rodney Webb, re-elected by a wide margin in Hastings-Frontenac yesterday, is congratulated in Madoc by an unidentified well wisher. Liberal William Shannon, second in the race, conceded the election at 9.25 p.m.

As expected, the percentage of voters who went to the polls was unusually high — preliminary estimates showed that more than 85 per cent voted in Hastings - Frontenac.

The weather might have had something to do with this. Temperatures throughout the riding were in the fifties and higher, and the sun shone for all voters, without party prejudice.

The returns came faster than before too, perhaps because returning officer Bill Tryon of Bancroft had spent the past year contacting his deputies. Results from the eight advance polls and 170 regular polls in the riding had been reported and totalled been tallied. He had won only by 11 p.m.

Labor Minister Says Police Watching Home

OSHAWA (CP)—Labor Minister Michael Starr said Monday night police have been watching his Oshawa home since bricks were thrown through the windows last week and telephone threats received by his party campaign workers on the week-end.

Mr. Starr, who said he kept silent about the threats until after his re-election in Ontario riding, said he found a brick on his living room floor and two others on his front lawn after two windows were broken last Wednesday.

The Mixture as Before

What many Canadians feared has happened

Canada is doomed to another period of minority government or, what is as bad, to rule by a government whose majority is the slimmest possible.

With four seats doubtful and five seats, including Hastings South, in which the election night results could be changed by the service vote, the Liberals could obtain a bare majority. But it would not be a working majority.

In these circumstances, the nation would be at the mercy of the minority parties. The leaders of both of these, Robert Thompson of the Social Credit and T. C. Douglas of the New Democrats, have pledged support to the party with the largest number of members in furthering the passing of necessary legislation. But the nature of Mr. Thompson's party, with its Quebec wing under Real Caouette, makes one wonder whether he can deliver what he promises. As for the New Democrats, it is difficult to see how they can reconcile their outright rejection of nuclear weapons with the Liberals' policy of acceptance. Fortunately this is an issue on which the Liberals, if they form a government, could reasonably expect support from a handful of Progressive Conservatives, including Douglas Harkness, who resigned as Conservative defence minister over this issue.

It was only natural, with results so close, that all the party leaders should be non-committal in election-night statements. No reasonable person would expect them to be otherwise. Prime Minister Diefenbaker is right in waiting until the service vote is counted, and the final results known, before announcing his decision. But when this count is made, his decision surely ought to be to resign and to turn the reins of government over to Liberal Leader Pearson. If Mr. Diefenbaker's position was difficult in the last House, when he needed the support of one of the splinter parties, it would be impossible in the new House, in which he would need the backing of both the Socreds and NDP to carry the day against the Liberals.

The Prime Minister could recommend another election. But this would be folly. A feature of Monday's voting was the manner in which member after member of the last House was re-elected. Though the positions of the Conservatives and Liberals have been reversed, there were fewer changes in this House than at most elections. Forty seats changed political allegiance on the basis of election night returns.

Though the situation is improved in one sense, in that the Liberals are closer to an overall majority than were the Conservatives, and might be able to rule with the support of dissident individuals if party lines were broken on some votes; the next House would appear poorer than the last in personnel. Prime Minister Diefenbaker is left with only the tattered remains of his Cabinet. Besides Hon. Donald Fleming and Hon. George Hees, who did not seek re-election, he has lost such stalwarts of Hon. Howard Green, Hon. Ellen Fairclough, Hon. Richard Bell and Hon. Frank McGee. One of the shining lights of the NDP, David Lewis, went down to defeat in Toronto. Even the Liberals, though they gained some new members of promising potential, notably Mitchell Sharp in Toronto Eglinton, lost a possible Cabinet minister in Hazen Argue, the former House leader of the CCF.

The real surprise of the election was the manner in which the Conservatives managed to do better, while the Socreds fared much worse, than had been expected, in Quebec.

Locally, congratulations are in order for Douglas Alkenbrack and Rod Webb, Conservatives re-elected in Prince Edward-Lennox and Hastings-Frontenac, respectively, and to Miss Pauline Jewett, who won Northumberland for the Liberals. Here in Hastings South, all the candidates deserve commendation for a clean, hard-fought campaign. But to whom the congratulations for victory should be tendered, whether to Lee E. Grills, the Progressive Conservative who has served this riding so faithfully and efficiently since 1957, or to the young and able representative of the Liberals, Robert Temple, is not yet certain.

There are three things you can do to fight cancer, according to the Canadian Cancer Society: be alert to the symptoms of cancer, inform on which is available from your local Society unit; report any new and unusual symptoms to your doctor—only he can determine if you have cancer and prescribe the proper treatment; and contribute to the appeal of the Canadian Cancer Society to finance its three-pronged attack on cancer by means of research, public education and assistance to cancer patients.

Ottawa's Pre-Election Hibernation Reaches End

By RICHARD JACKSON
(from The Ontario Intelligencer's Ottawa Bureau)

OTTAWA — With a sudden lurch, the machinery of government — idling quietly these past seven weeks — today roared back into high gear.

The National Capital and Parliament Hill, after the strange, almost eerie silence of the "holiday" that an election always enforces, was back in business.

This last month and a half has been a time of waiting — alike for spring and the election at the polls.

Where Washington and London seethe and boil with political activity in the weeks ahead of election day, Ottawa almost sleeps.

About the only loud noise in the Capital has been the thumping of the mimeographs spilling out party leaders' statements, itineraries and the texts of speeches, and the pitiful cries of newspaper managing editors and news bureau chiefs over the expense accounts of their itinerant reporters loose on the campaign trail.

In the Centre Block on the Hill, rare have been the footsteps echoing lonely through the marbled halls. The Protective Staff — Parliament's own police, who serve as guides for visitors — have welcomed the early tourists with open arms, like men marooned on a desert island embracing a rescue expedition.

NOBODY HOME

Even the Parliamentary Press Gallery, normally as grossly overcrowded as a fifth-class slum and littered almost beyond imagination, has been all but deserted, and the murder of wonders, neat and tidy.

Everybody has been out on the hustings, or on an inquiry through the Capital with the Pearson or Diefenbaker safaris, has been greeted like a pilgrim returning from Mecca by the few unfortunate home-bound newsmen.

"What is it like on the 'outside,' and what are the taxpayers out there saying?" they have asked, and sat enthralled as they heard the travelling scribes tell what was happening out where the "real people" live.

For, in these seven weeks of silence, there's been a rumble-like atmosphere in the Capital when everything quietly geared down.

The machinery did keep turning over, but very quietly and slowly, but only on the junior level where tax receipts are mailed out, quotation changes prepared, and the run-of-the-routine-mill correspondence dispatched.

But at the senior levels of the Federal apparatus, where policy is made or born, it was quiet.

The Departmental Deputy Ministers, the men who really run the government, sat tight, waiting for the election storm to blow itself out across the land and the political dust to settle.

With the Ministers, the men of ultimate decision, all out on the trail, "everything postponable," as one deputy deftly put it, "is postponed."

QUIET, PLEASE!

The idea is to keep the machinery idling there, quietly, just enough to keep it from stalling dead.

And tick over it has been, very, very slowly.

Inconspicuously as possible, junior officials, clerks, stenographers and secretaries have been stretching out their coffee breaks in the cafeteria and in scores or more of canteens in the dozens of Government buildings scattered around the city.

Senior staff has been harder to get on the phone around 9 a.m. and 2.30 p.m. They are busy, their secretaries have been saying, for they are in conference. But conference with whom? There's been nobody home on the Hill to confer with.

Time is the problem, in upper as well as the lower echelons of the bureaucracy in these "weeks of waiting," and it must be killed, alike in a coffee break stretch-out or a lunch hour that ate deep into the afternoon.

Of necessity, while the party leaders, their captains and rank and file observers have been scouring it out on the hustings, the technicians of Government, the people who man the machine of the Federal administration, have taken it easy.

But today, the time of waiting was done.

The place exploded back into a fever of activity. All the "postponables" were no longer being postponed, but got ready, in a rush, with everything else for government attention and action.

Ottawa has come alive again.

Something To Censor In Every Book

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

The other evening I heard a man arguing that a certain book should be suppressed because it contained statements that could be "dangerous" and "harmful" if it fell into the wrong hands.

His attitude is very common and so-wrong-headed — reminded me of what Jacques Maritain, the great Catholic scholar, had to say on the same subject: "If books were judged by the bad uses man can put them to, what book has been more misused than the Bible?"

In the 1500 years since it was codified and made canonical, the Bible has been used by innumerable sects and rulers to justify (and indeed to exalt) the torture of witches, the torture of heretics, the practice of slavery, the extermination of peoples, the subordination of women, the custom of polygamy, and every sort of cruelties, follies and bigotries of the most odious nature.

Almost anybody can use almost any book for almost any purpose. I have been recently going through a collection of Nietzche's works. All most people know about him was that he spouted the "Superman" and that the Nazi movement seemed to take much of its philosophical impulse from Nietzsche's writings.

But a careful reading of his work shows quite the contrary. He was violently anti-German, and considered himself a "good European." Some of his finest passages indict nationalism and war; he opposed anti-Semites as vulgar and brutish. His "superman" was the diametrical opposite of Hitler's Blond Beast. And he anticipated many of French Gaullist insights into the irrational character of prejudice and hate.

The Founding Fathers of the early American colonies provide a similar example. We can find in the pages of Thomas Jefferson and Jefferson and Madison and Franklin enough to provide us with ammunition for nearly any cause. I could easily compile a selection of Jefferson that would make him sound like a revolutionary Marxist; and a selection of Franklin that would make him sound like a pacifist and a toady to King George.

To express a book because it contains "dangerous" or "harmful" material would be to extinguish 90 percent of the world's great literature - - for the greater a work of art is, the more universal, and thus dangerous, the more it can be misused for every perverted cause.

The only book that cannot be dangerous or harmful is the blank book, the unwritten book, the insipid and character-less book that discourages thought, feeling and reaction. And it is such books that proliferate when control over works are suppressed; censorship, whether in Russia or America, always leads to the tyranny of the commonplace.

20 YEARS AGO

April 9th, 1943.

Following robberies at Kingston and Napanee police at Belleville and Madoc fired shots into the rear of a fleeing bandit automobile that carried three men. The first attempt to halt the robber-car was made at the intersection of Bridge and Front Streets shortly before six o'clock in the morning in an attempt to halt a Quebec licensed car that was reported to have been involved in robberies. P. C. Carruthers managed to gain a hold on the door handle but the door was locked, and as the driver swerved sharply to evade apprehension the officer was hurled backwards.

The Bell Telephone Company of Canada has purchased from the Incorporated Synod of the Diocese of Ontario and the Parish of St. Thomas' Church of Belleville, the vacant land, being part of the rectory grounds at the south-east corner of Bridge and Church Streets, and it is understood that in due time that company will erect a building upon the property. Sufficient land was retained by the parish for the protection of the rectory building. A private bill authorizing the sale was presented in the Ontario Legislature by Mr. R. D. Arnott, K.C., M.P., and approval obtained. The purchase price is to be paid to the Incorporated Synod of the Diocese of Ontario to be held in trust and invested until such time as it is required.

The Belleville Parks Board has been granted the sum of $1,000 for this season's work by the city council.

50 YEARS AGO

April 9th, 1913.

At a meeting of the Coleman Flats Baseball Club which was held at the International Hotel, the following officers were elected: Hon. President, ex-mayor Marsh; president, James Roy; first vice-president G. Williams; second vice-president, John Hart; secretary, Robert Gillespie; treasurer, Walter Thomas, manager, Robert Burke; captain, Les Gerrow.

Belleville teamsters and laborers went on strike this morning when work was about to commence taking away the mud which had been scraped off Front Street and piled in heaps here and there along the street. The teamsters demanded an increase from 2.50 per day to $4 per day for themselves and their teams, and the laborers demanded $3 per day instead of $1.75. The city engineer and Ald. White could not act, and at a civic committee meeting this morning the matter will be dealt with.

Times were hard away back in 1873 as is shown from the following news item in our issue of April 10 in that year. "Tomorrow will be a bank holiday and persons having notes due at that time will have another day's grace which is a consideration in these hard times."

Cigarette, Drink Ad Curbs Urged

Editor
Ontario Intelligencer:

It is generally known that cigarette smoking causes or contributes to lung-cancer and to other diseases, indirectly it causes fire hazards.

Alcohol causes sickness and drunken drivers cause accidents. High pressure propaganda and advertisements on the radio, T.V. and newspapers and in the magazines constantly urge people into accepting positions in the governments are not willing to stir this problem with curb undue pressure on young people who are not strong enough to withstand the continuous encroachment of temptation.

Ashamed of Condition Of Streets in City

Editor
Ontario Intelligencer:

We have always been proud of Belleville and indeed have often defended it against the criticism of residents of other communities. However in the past few weeks I have been more ashamed of the filly condition of our city's streets and sidewalks.

A visitor from Michigan remarked that he had never before encountered so much dirt on city thoroughfares. This was countered by the claim that the snow had just nicely disappeared and that city work crews would soon remedy the situation. Upon investigation Kingston today, however, I note that we still have the sand piles on our streets and sidewalks. This is both unsightly and dangerous, particularly to anyone who has to walk through it.

What are we waiting for? Let's clear up this mess. If left long enough the wind might blow the dirt on to our lawns; or the rain might wash it into the sewers thereby plugging them; or our city government might awaken to the fact that something should be done now. Surely with all the unemployed persons in this area looking for work, a crash program could be instituted which would result in clearing up this unsightly and deplorable condition in a matter of a few days instead of waiting for nature to take its course in a matter of weeks.

If City Hall deems this impossible I think that the least that could be done is that they provide us all with a packet of flower seeds to be sown in the soil deposited on our streets in order that we could retain the claim of "Belleville the Beautiful" for our fair city.

Rodney E. Follwell.

Dieters Should Remember Alcohol Has Food Value

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: A friend claims alcohol has food value, whereas I say that it has no vitamins or minerals — only calories or units of heat.

He argues that people live on alcohol for a week or more. I maintain that they do not live on alcohol but are merely fasting; that is, they could live for a week or more without food or alcohol. I have read of people who have gone for a month without food, so the argument that they derive nourishment from alcohol simply because they drink it for a week doesn't convince me. What is your answer? — V. L. T.

I hope you didn't make any bets with your friend, because if you did, you have lost.

Yes, alcohol has food value. You are right that it has no vitamins, and no minerals but does have calories. However, calories represent food value.

Oh, how they represent food value! Too many calories make you fat. And frequently as fat if you consume more than you use up as heat or energy. A drink of straight whiskey has mean 100 or more calories. Cocktails and highballs can be higher and some of the mixed drinks with sweet mixes can be even more.

That's why some people keep gaining on "reducing diets." They forget to keep track of their drinks.

The heavy drinker who goes on a week-long bender doesn't eat because he gets enough or enough calories — food value or nourishment — to destroy the alcohol.

True, he ought to eat while he is drinking. So far as that goes, there is a lot of nonsense in such drunks. For health, we need vitamins, minerals, and other substances that alcohol is present in alcohol. But that does not mean that alcohol has no food value.

The same would be true if you ate nothing but sugar: No vitamins, no protein, no minerals. A week-long candy binge would be very harmful to one's health too. Not as bad as an alcoholic binge, because alcohol, in addition to containing food value is also a drug (a depressant) an intoxicant and destroyer of inhibitions, judgment and co-ordination, and, in sufficient concentration, a poison.

Sheer calories are food. Athletes at times have eaten lumps of sugar for the quick energy they give.

But we need more than calories because we need more than sheer energy. We need protein to build our tissues, minerals to keep our bones strong, vitamins and traces of minerals which are important, despite their small quantities, because they are the chemical "regulators" which keep our bodies functioning correctly.

Trying to live on alcohol alone (or sugar alone, or some other single food items) would be like trying to run a car by adding coolant but no gasoline. You could do it for a time, but presently the car would begin to fall apart for lack of oil, grease, water, air in the tires and so on.

Dear Dr. Molner: I am a girl of 13 and frequently get pains in my ankles, knees and wrist. My doctor says these pains are due to growing pains. Is he right? — L. T.

Growing youngsters can have such pains because of too much activity and not enough rest. (They aren't "growing pains.") A possibility is arthritis — it can occur at a young age. Rheumatic fever is another. I trust you'll get checked by your family physician. The first thing I listed is early-time detection of by most of these. The other two are serious and need attention without delay.

To Mrs. W. M.J.: Yes, surgery is the only solution for a rectal fistula.

Of all the problems that pediatricians encounter in children, bitewetting is the commonest. To learn the newest methods of treatment for this pest, write for the booklet, "The Commonest Fell Pin Worm," to Dr. Molner, care Newspaper Syndicate, P.O. Box 158, Dundee, Ill., enclosing a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 25 cents in coin to cover handling.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

"That government is best," said Thomas Jefferson, "which governs least."

If that is true, governments all over creation have been depriving us of a great deal in the recent years. The newer forms of government like Communism and Nazism put all the activities of their subjects but also their thoughts. Even the pharaohs of Egypt 5,000 years ago didn't have the gall to build a wall to protect ourselves. And in the process of erecting brick upon brick and stone upon stone, we have forgotten the purpose and find we have walled ourselves in.

Pythagoras, the great Greek mathematician of the 6th Century-B.C., has long been credited with discovery of the theorem that bears his name.

Now Iraq archaeologists have uncovered at Tell al Dhubai, an ancient city called Sippar-Rabdi's city-limits, a clay tablet that explains and diagrams in detail the claim of Pythagoras' theorem. Date of the tablet? The 19th Century, B.C.

Action by Charles DeLong To Unseat Mayor Haig Opens Today in Court Here

The action of Belleville resident Charles DeLong to unseat Mayor W. McLean Haig for alleged conflict of interest, got underway this morning at the Hastings County Court House before Prince Edward County Judge Wilfred S. Lane.

Approximately eight witnesses were called during the morning session, including officials of Weaver Coal Company and its subsidiary Moira Schuster Ltd., and municipal, high school board, and hospital officials.

Witnesses stated that Moira Schuster had business dealings with both the Bay of Quinte District High School Board and Belleville General Hospital.

Mayor A. M. Haig is president of Moira Schuster and the claim of the applicant to unseat him is that this disqualifies him from sitting on Belleville council.

Belleville lawyer Ben Hurley is appearing for Mr. DeLong, while city barrister Ralph Graham is representing Mayor Haig.

FORTY PRESENT

Approximately 40 persons, many of them to be called later as witnesses, were present in the court house as proceedings got underway at 10 o'clock. Most members of Belleville city council were also on hand to hear the proceedings.

Mr. Hurley claimed that under the provisions of a 1962 amendment to the municipal act, shareholders, directors or officers of a company doing business with the municipality are not entitled to sit on council.

He said he would prove that Moira Schuster had a contract with the Bay of Quinte District High School Board of which the city of Belleville was a member municipality, and also would prove that from time to time the company had sold various types of goods to Belleville hospital.

First witness called was Herbert Gordon Nunn, comptroller of Weaver Coal Company of Montreal, who until one week last year had acted as secretary of Moira Schuster Company Ltd., when he said it became a wholly owned subsidiary of Weaver Coal Company.

HAIG FIRM'S PRESIDENT

Mr. Nunn said A. McLean Haig (Belleville's Mayor) was a director and president of Moira Schuster, Inc.

As president and director of the Company Mayor Haig received an annual salary of $12,000. Mr. Nunn said Mayor Haig had one qualified share in the company, which was endorsed and turned back to Weaver Coal.

Mr. Nunn said that Alfred D. Loder, a Burlington chartered accountant, was named secretary-treasurer of Moira Schuster Ltd. last October.

Mr. Loder told the court that there had been meetings of the company directors since October 1962 and that Mr. Haig had attended.

He did not know if there was any connection between Moira Schuster and Empire Hannah Coal Company.

NOT BY LAW

City Clerk Adam S. Stalker told of swearing Mayor Haig in as mayor for the 1963 term, while City Manager J. G. Rogers said that when amendments to the Municipal Act came out last year he had prepared a memoranda of the changes and sent it to all members of council.

Roy O. Dulmage, secretary treasurer of the Bay of Quinte District High School Board, told the board entered into a contract with Moira Schuster in May of 1962 for the supply of fuel for the 1962-63 heating season.

He said delivery of fuel oil had been made since January last, although the main winter supply of fuel for the three high schools had been delivered before the end of March.

As a member municipality of the high school board, the city of Belleville contributed heavily to its support, Mr. Dulmage said.

CONTRACT WITH HOSPITAL

Mr. Arthur J. Horning, secretary treasurer of Empire-Hannah Coal Company, said his firm had a coal contract with Belleville General Hospital with 2,500 tons of coal covered for the 1962-63 heating season.

He said that Moira Schuster made delivery against the hospital and was paid a handling charge.

Asked if Empire Hannah and Moira Schuster were owned by the same group of people, the witness replied "not."

Under cross examination by Mr. Graham the witness said the coal delivery agreements between his firm and Moira Schuster was not a long standing. Empire Hannah had been the hospital directly for the coal delivered, he said.

"And Moira Schuster had no part in the contract."

"I don't think so," replied the witness.

Mr. Werner Daeschel, administrator at Belleville General Hospital, said the hospital had this year purchased fuel oil and was from Moira Schuster. He had photostatic copies of records with him but was directed to bring originals.

SUPPLIES SALT

Gordon Wm. Kerman, sales manager for Sifto Salt, said he had made deliveries of salt to Belleville to be used in winter snow control.

He said the salt was stocked at the Moira Schuster warehouse in Belleville with actual delivery being made by that firm.

He said his company billed the city directly for the salt delivered.

Under cross examination, Mr. Kerman said Moira Schuster had no control over what is sold, although the storage and delivery arrangement with the Belleville firm had extended over a number of years.

Both hospital administrator Werner Daeschel and Mr. Horning, secretary of Empire Hannah Coal, will be recalled to the stand. Mr. Daeschel to produce originals of records concerning shipping of coal and Mr. Horning to more detailed information regarding his firm's business dealings with the hospital. Mr. Horning came to Belleville without his records and was directed to get the information.

Prairie Provinces Remain Solidly With Conservatives

EDMONTON (CP)—The three Prairie provinces remained solidly in the Conservative fold in Monday's federal general election despite Liberal inroads in other parts of Canada.

Prime Minister Diefenbaker, who won in a walk in Prince Albert, saw his party sweep 41 of 49 Prairie seats, a loss of one from last June's general election but almost half the Conservative's total strength across the country.

British Columbia experienced a mild swing toward the Liberal party but the New Democratic Party came out on top.

Western observers viewed the Conservative strength in the agricultural West as a successful test of the government's farm policies.

Biggest upset in the West was the defeat of External Affairs Minister Howard Green by Liberal Grant Deachman in Vancouver Quadra.

Mr. Green, who had represented the area in Parliament for 27 years, was the government's main campaigner against nuclear weapons for Canada.

HARKNESS WINS

At the same time, Douglas Harkness retained Calgary North for the Conservatives by campaigning on the policy of obtaining nuclear weapons.

Mr. Harkness, who resigned as defence minister over the nuclear weapons issue, said after his re-election that the Conservative party should hold a leadership convention.

Liberal strength in Manitoba increased to two with the capture of one Conservative seat. The New Democratic Party retained its two seats while the Conservative held 10.

A.N.A.F. Weekly News

Today, Tues., 9th April is the 46th anniversary of one of the most outstanding actions of the Canadian Army. After six months of intensive training and raising enemy lines for information and with one of the most intensive artillery barrages up to that time, the four Canadian Divisions attacked the Vimy Ridge positions in their first concerted action as an army. For over two years armies of other nations had tried to capture the ridge with little success. The Canadians went over the top at 5 a.m. on this Easter Monday. By Wednesday the Fourth Division finally captured the Pimple, which was a very strong position and by Saturday the Canadians dominated the ridge and the whole allied world acclaimed the Canadian fighting men for this glorious achievement. A grand monument inscribed with the names of all the Canadians who were killed in this action was erected on the Ridge and the French Government handed the land to Canada in appreciation of their victory.

The ANAF Club has a Vimy Day display in their window and sincere thanks are due to the drawing committee for loaning the various articles used in the display, Angus Duffy, E. W. Howard, Mrs. Hunter, Mrs. Neil Denike, Don Denike, Don Lee and Sonny Williams. Bob Hobbs, the club caretaker, and Arthur and Grandfather were both in action on the Ridge, designed and made the Vimy Ridge Plaque, featuring the four divisional patches. Many thanks, again for the loan of the articles used in the display.

The rhythmic music of the Modernaires, the Entertainment Chairman had another very successful night. Bingo players organized that was well attended with prizes being given for spot dances and a draw prize of $25.00 Cdn. Don is to be complimented for the good work he is doing. A tentative date has been set for the next big dance, April 19th, but more about that next week in this column.

Next Thursday, April 11th, is the regular monthly meeting and there has been a change in the start time. The executive would like the members to be on hand so the meeting can start shortly after 7.30 p.m. It is hoped that the club business can be completed before the bingo commences so that all are able to visit the canteen but understands that all are slowly recovering. Sick at home are Mrs. J. McGuire, Mrs. Smith and F. Knowlton while Bob Cook is in the County Home hospital. It is hoped that the ever ladies will soon be fully recovered and able to get around again.

The Sports Chairman hasn't too much to report. He would like the team names for the table tennis tournament so he can draw up a schedule for play. He also wishes to remind the comrades that the 48th Anniversary dinner will soon be here and hopes that those who intend to participate are in training for the various events. There will be very strong opposition and the 48th are going all out to make good their boast that they will make a clean sweep of all the trophies. Don't let this happen. It's up to you.

The Unit Pipe Band are looking forward to their trip on the 25th of May to Cape Vincent, N.Y., and are determined to make a good showing on the pipe band competition. They hope for a good representative from the members to make the trip with them so think about it. It will be a nice trip to start out the summer.

So, until next week, the best of luck to all.

Leaving Scene Cost Tweed Man $100

Leaving the scene of an accident cost a Tweed man $100 in Belleville magistrate's court today.

Cecil James Nesbitt pleaded guilty to the charge, laid March 23 on his arrest in Tweed after the accident on Pinnacle Street in Belleville.

Police were on the lookout for his car after a constable watched it going the wrong way on the city's Campbell Street. At the Pinnacle Street intersection it struck a car owned by Ray Lang. Thurlow township, causing $350 total property damage to both vehicles.

Earlier in the evening he had paid a fine at Belleville police station for having liquor.

"He ran into a car and got panicky," said defence counsel Leo O'Flynn of Wellington, who works in Brampton and stays weekends at Tweed.

Police also charged him with having no driver's licence, when he failed to produce it after his car was stopped. A third charge was withdrawn after Nesbitt's father later found the licence on the floor of the automobile.

He stated that at one time 100,000 bushels of apples had been grown on his property and that they were now making their own shipping containers. The guest speaker was thanked by Bob Gill.

Monday's meeting was conducted entirely by the new members of the club, with Bill Holway as acting chairman. The new members were seated at the head table.

Four members joining the club within the past year include A. Pollock, Phil Huddleston, Norman Moore, Bill Holway, Bill Riley, Bob Gill, Bob Fife and Dave Duffy.

A directors' meeting will be held Wednesday evening at the residence of club president Dr. Harry Burns.

Two BCIVS Girls Begin Kingston Trek

Two girls attending BCIVS set out for Kingston at four o'clock Saturday morning. The girls, Sharon Rashotte, of 60 Bridge Street West, and Carol Powell, 310 Bleecker Ave., did not quite make it to Kingston but managed to travel 43 miles to Odessa. They reached Napanee at 1 o'clock, but after that slowed down and reached Odessa at 15 to 7.

The girls enjoyed the trip thoroughly even though they were quite tired when they returned back home. They feel with the past experience they have had now that they will be able to reach Kingston at a later date.

Just past Shannonville, the girls met up with a boy they learned to be Jerry Irwin from Quinte Secondary School. Jerry at a vigorous pace managed to reach Kingston.

The girls met friendly, helpful people all the way to Odessa, including a Provincial policeman who stopped at various points along the way to see how they were getting along and to offer assistance in any way, and a department of highways man who bought them a much welcomed coffee at Odessa.

"The Walking Pilgimage" Address to Academy Students

Last Friday morning the grade nine and ten students of St. Michael's Academy had an opportunity of learning about a topic of unusual interest, "The Walking Pilgrimage". The guest speaker was Mr. Christopher Wilson of Hamilton, a world traveller and a gifted scholar of Cambridge University, in England and of Toronto University and St. Francis Xavier University in Canada. With the authority of experience and a skilful use of humor, Mr. Wilson maintained the interest of his youthful audience in a theme which might ordinarily be considered only in a serious light.

Following the introduction by Michael Howe, head boy, Mr. Wilson gave a resume of the history of pilgrimages: those made centuries before the dawn of Christianity; pilgrimages made by Christ's contemporaries after His crucifixion; later ones such as the Crusades; and those now developing in Canada.

COLORED SLIDES

During the remainder of his talk, which dealt particularly with the 95-mile pilgrimages made from Toronto to the Martyrs' Shrine at Midland, Ontario, he used colored slides that illustrated almost every phase of the journey.

The elements of contemplation, prayer, penance and self-sacrifice which such a pilgrimage involves enables the pilgrim to understood better the lives of the Canadian Martyrs and what sustained them in their sufferings. Walking through the country of the Martyrs, the pilgrim senses the peace and beauty of creation not disordered by man's frenzy, which may inspire him towards an un-trained re-ordering of his own life before God.

The teen-age students appreciated the proportion Mr. Wilson maintained between the spiritual and the human elements as emphasized in the comment that, "There is still room for a sense of humor, a light-hearted song and a swim at the end of a dusty day."

QUESTION PERIOD

The questions asked by the students at the end of the lecture and their later comments testified to their keen appreciation of Mr. Wilson's talk. Points of great interest were: the time of pilgrimages (usually early September); the usual age range (from the late teens up); the educational background (usually university students — at least, people mature in their thinking). With these considerations in mind, the young listeners indicated their conviction that a walking pilgrimage would be a desirable experience to which they may look forward.

Linda Langabeer, head girl, thanked Mr. Wilson for his enlightening and entertaining lecture.

Canadian Fashion & Fad by pegg. rogers

SAUVE, ELEGANT AND COMFORTABLE!

The adjective, "comfortable", is usually synonymous with the word, "practical". This season however, comfortable always means sauve and elegant, at least so far as fashion is concerned. This is an interesting trend, which should be explored.

Just where did this new idea come from? Was it born in the highly, civilized mind of some designer? Or, have we, the consumers of fashion, finally forced the manufacturer of fashion to accept the fact that an uncomfortable woman is not a beautiful woman?

There are some inconvenient aspects of fashion, which must be endured. Time and money must be spent on the care of the skin, hair and nails. The ever-all result — an improved appearance and a feeling of well - being — is certainly worth the expenditure. Good grooming is, after all, only a part of the fashion look. Although there are items which do everything in their power to make a session as relaxing and enjoyable as possible, there still exists the discomfort of hot, hair dryers and rollers, those with bristles resting on tender scalps.

The general area of discomfort in fashion lies in the silhouette and fabrics of that silhouette, with which we choose to confine our bodies. Starting from the skin out, consider today's foundation garments, comparing them with those in the medium - price ranges, of only five years ago. The average brassiere, then, was a sophisticated garment, available in a staggering variation of cup sizes and lengths. The "bra" as we know it, is still being improved and made even more comfortable.

But consider the pantie girdle of five years ago. This hideously uncomfortable object had obviously been designed by a sadist, of the torture chamber. But the pantie girdle of today is a miracle of corset engineering. It comes in a variety of length and width to fit all sizes from seven to the substantial size 20. The introduction of miracle fabrics allows more elasticity and prolongs the life of the garment.

The sheer comfort of today's pantie girdles, almost but not quite, compensates for the extra 5 to 10 pounds, by which the average woman is over-weight. (It's true — the latest statistics have just arrived.) The really determined woman can eliminate all suggestion of unwanted bulges by buying a girdle, which covers her from the top of her knees to well above the waistline. She can then top this with a well-constructed, longer "bra". She will give the impression of having lost at least five pounds, while she will retain the ease of movement, which the best - designed corselette denies her. Although the prices of good pantie girdles are still too high, we can see that increased production will eventually bring these prices down in line with the miracle "bras".

In the meantime, it's nice to know that, if you can afford it, you, too, can loose 5 pounds in a fitting room and still be beautifully comfortable.

200 Children Attend Bible Club Rally

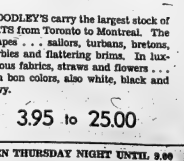
Approximately 200 children gathered in the Holloway Street United Church Sunday School rooms for the annual "Good News Bible Club" rally, on April 6th with Mr. F. Cumming as chairman.



The children were led in chorus singing by Mr. Cumming with Mr. W. Leonard at the piano.

Several clubs presented special group singing as well as recited many verses of Scripture that they had learned during the club period; these verses expressing how much the Lord Jesus meant to them in their young lives as Saviour and Guide.

Mr. C. Corner and Mr. Vardy played several numbers on their accordion and trumpet, and the children joined in singing during some of the numbers.

Mr. J. Langman gave an interesting and practical story, taking his theme from Philippians 3:21, "Who shall change our vile body, that it may be fashioned like unto His glorious body, according to the working whereby He is able even to subdue all things unto himself" emphasizing that some day each child or adult who accepts the Lord Jesus as Saviour can look forward to the time when he will be just like Him.

Mr. Cumming closed the meeting in prayer.

'Thanks for the Memory' Says Ellen in Defeat

HAMILTON (CP) — Mrs. Ellen Fairclough, Canada's first woman cabinet minister, was defeated in Hamilton West Monday. Her successful opponent said "she put up one hell of a fight."

Liberal Joe Macaluso, on his first attempt at federal politics, scored a comparatively easy win over Mrs. Fairclough.

Mrs. Fairclough, who conceded to Macaluso one hour, three minutes and 30 seconds after the polls closed, tossed her head and remarked: "Thanks for the memory."

She started her political career in 1946 as a member of Hamilton city council and was elected to the House of Commons in 1950. She was a member of the Canadian delegation to the United Nations and in 1955 was a member of the Canadian delegation to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization in Paris.

Mrs. Fairclough made history in 1957 when she became secretary of state and first woman cabinet minister in Canadian politics.

In 1958 she was appointed minister of citizenship and immigration.

Mrs. Fairclough told reporters she has no plans for the future.

As a five-piece Italian band helped turn Hamilton's King Street into an outdoor dance hall, Macaluso said he hopes he doesn't have to face Mrs. Fairclough again.

"I'm sort of underestimate her," he said. "I know I've been in an election battle. We didn't expect to win this big."

SPEAKING of MANNERS

PATRICIA LEWIS

MINOR POINTS OF SPECIAL INTEREST

Readers of this column ask all kinds of questions concerning manners. I use them in this blog proper behavior and practice. When they are of general interest, I devote space along with my answers.

For the most part, the problems presented are fairly important. Yet many a minor point that readers don't feel are significant enough to write about make a big impression — and it isn't always the best.

So here's the first of a series of occasional columns in which I shall answer questions that no one has asked.

Spoons and Lemons: The warm season will soon be upon us and we'll be drinking more of that exhilarating beverage, iced tea. What do you do with the long-handled spoon after you've stirred the sugar into the brew?

The considerate hostess usually solves this dilemma by putting the glass on a saucer. That's where she puts the spoon and, most often, the lemon (sometimes this is perched on the edge of the glass), and there, too, is where you put them after stirring and squeezing.

Incidentally, I think the best way to serve lemon with iced tea is in a wedge. Cutting lengthwise first, slice the lemon in half, then each half into thirds or quarters.

The lemon is easier to handle and the guest can squeeze out as much juice as she wishes.

Tiny slices often are served can present a terrible problem to one who wants to flavor the drink and still keep dainty intact and fingers dry.

They're waiting: RSVP on an invitation means — in its English connotation — that the hostess wants to know as soon as possible if she may expect you. She also wants to know if you can't make it.

Frequently, the recipient of an invitation who cannot accept it waits until the last minute to phone or write regrets. It's more polite to do it immediately.

If there's a possibility of a conflicting date, or a trip into town, don't send an RSVP even though you've set your social file. Phone the hostess right away and explain your problem so she can mark you "tentative" on her guest list. Obviously, when you know what your plans are, let the hostess be the next to know.

Boarding-House Reach: Still another question that may puzzle readers has to do with the concoction served in a casserole at a restaurant.

The waiter doles out the first portion, covers the casserole and its steaming contents, and walks off, leaving a hungry diner already thinking of "seconds."

Who spoons out the next portion — you or the waiter?

Properly, the waiter should and will, if you catch his eye before you die of hunger. After serving the last of the dish, he will return the empty casserole to the kitchen.

But if he's busy and if you're in a restaurant that isn't too echo-chic, you may help yourself and no one will look darkly at you.

Whatever you do, though, don't eat out of the casserole.

Planning Your Easter Dinner

by Mary Moore

This is no day for indecisiveness.

When this column sees daylight we will know who our new Prime Minister is.

I was caught between decisions: What meat should I select for our Easter dinner? Should I conform and suggest ham? or should I rebel and suggest lamb?

Suggested accompaniments: lobster or shrimp cocktail, spinach with shredded almonds, baked sweet potatoes, cherry or strawberry cheesecake, coffee.

HOW TO ROAST A LEG OF LAMB (room temperature):

On rack, fat side up, 325 deg. Fahr. 20 to 35 minutes per lb. Very young lamb will be done in the 20-minutes-per-lb. ratio but average sized legs require 30 to 35 minutes. Suggested accompaniments: Tomato bouillon with yellow chrysanthemum petal garnish (colorful and delicious — be sure to eat the petals); caper sauce, green peas, pan-roasted potatoes, watercress, endive, lettuce and radish salad with French dressing, lemon meringue pie, coffee.

HOW TO ROAST TURKEY (room temperature):

Rub skin all over with butter. Roast at 325 deg. Fahr. 3 to 3½ hours for 8 to 10 lb. bird; 4 to 4½ hours up to 14 lbs.; 5 to 6½ hours 20 lb. bird. Roast in open pan on rack, no water. Baste occasionally. If bird begins to brown too soon, cover with "tent" of foil. When meat is tender joint is easily moveable. Suggested accompaniments: Herb and celery stuffing, giblet gravy, cranberry orange relish, white onions with cheese sauce; broccoli with Bearnaise or Hollandaise sauce; green - cheese - stuffed celery, orange chiffon cake with bitter chocolate drizzled over orange frosting, coffee.

HOW TO ROAST PRIME RIBS OF BEEF:

Sprinkle with salt, pepper and paprika. Method 1 (minimum shrinkage — maximum tenderness): Roast at 300 deg. Fahr. allowing 1 hour per lb. for rare at centre and well done outside: Method 2: Roast uncovered on rack, no water at 325 deg. Fahr. 18 to 20 minutes to the lb. for rare; 20 to 25 minutes per lb. for medium; 35 minutes per lb. for well done. Suggested accompaniments: Brown gravy, horseradish sauce, Yorkshire pudding, creamed asparagus, tomato aspic with sliced celery and stuffed olives on shredded lettuce with herb mayonnaise, creme brulee with chilled canned mandarin oranges and figs and chopped almonds, coffee.

Number of Women in House Dropped One in Election

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The number of women in the Commons dropped by one and the balance swung from Progressive Conservative to Liberal in Monday's general election.

The four women in the new House will consist of three Liberals and one Conservative. In the last Parliament, there were five women: Three Comervatives and two Liberals.

Outstanding casualty of her sex was Postmaster-General Ellen Fairclough, Canada's first federal minister, who lost to a Liberal in Hamilton West, which she had represented since 1950.

Mrs. Jean Casselman of Ontario's Grenville-Dundas constituency was the only Progressive Conservative survivor as Mrs. Fairclough was joined on the defeated list by Mrs. Margaret Macdonald, who lost her Kings seat in Prince Edward Island to a Liberal.

JOHN MISS LA MARSH

Mrs. Isabel Hardie, a Liberal, lost her Northwest Territories seat to a Progressive. But two new Liberal women joined Miss Judy La Marsh, head of the party's "truth squad" during the election campaign, who retained Niagara Falls.

The new women MPs are Mrs. Margaret Konantz, who unseated Gordon Chown, deputy Speaker of the last Commons, in Winnipeg South, and Miss Pauline Jewett, who won back Northumberland (Ont.) from the Conservatives for the first time since 1953.

In all, 43 women were in the field—14 Progressive Conservatives, 14 New Democrats, six Liberals, six Social Creditors, two independents and one Communist.

Father Spanks Baby - - 6 Months

DORIS CLARK

DEAR DORIS—My husband is mean to our six-month-old daughter. From the time I brought the baby home he has been short-tempered, and I am afraid of what he will do.

Our baby is actually to the point where she is afraid of her father. He doesn't hit her anywhere but on the bottom but he hits her so hard. I don't mind if he would hit her hands when she touches something she shouldn't, but usual ly he hits her in a fit of temper.—FRANTIC.

DEAR FRANTIC—He's jealous and a brute. And stupid. No baby can understand a spanking. Her brain is not sufficiently matured to connect being physically punished with anything she has done wrong. For her this a traumatic experience and you will have to step in.

DEAR DORIS—When my mother and dad go out and my brother and I are left alone, my mother tells us not to answer the phone or the door. I am a thirteen-year-old girl and my brother is nine. If my friends call me and I do not answer, the next day at school they tell me that they called. I tell them why I couldn't answer and they tell me that when they babysit for their younger brother or sister they are allowed to answer.

Doris, I am wondering if this is right. Would you please print my letter because my mother opens my mail.—NOT ALLOWED.

DEAR NOT ALLOWED—It's questionable whether an unanswered telephone would make you more, or less, secure. And what if mother herself wants to reach you? As for the door, I'd say keep it locked and don't answer. And have a neighbor you can call on in emergency.

If your social life is suffering, that's something else again. Explain the situation to your friends. Mother may have her own reasons for cutting off the telephone

DEAR DORIS—I have a problem of hairy legs and my mother won't let me shave them. Could I bleach these hairs? If so, how is it done? If I can't bleach them, is there any other thing I can do to get rid of them?—FAN.

* * *

DEAR FAN—Good grooming does not permit legs which look hairy. If the growth is not heavy bleaching may be enough. I am sending you a leaflet on what to do about superfluous hair.

DEAR DORIS—Regarding the letter from D. H. about hickies. A "hickey" is a term used among teenagers for a mark usually on the neck which is made by one person sucking or drawing the blood to the surface of the skin on the other person. The circumstances are usually a necking or petting session.

Disgusting, isn't it? But I felt sorry for that poor girl. Actually, I was in the same shoes as that girl at one time; but in high school I learned to shut up and keep my ears open. I just thought you would like to know.—CLUED IN

DEAR CLEUD IN—Thanks. Now I'm clued in, too, by you and several others, including D. and D., A Mother, Another 14-year-old Fan, Educated Two, A Regular Reader, Two Girls Who Know, A Sometime Student, and several other helpful readers who prefer to be nameless.

Additional fact provided by correspondents is that a hickey does no harm except to one's reputation!

CONFIDENTIAL TO HURT—Yes, the boy should "help the girl stay good," but she is the one to be hurt if she doesn't keep the lid on.

down in the Toronto area's York-Scarborough, which only five years ago gave him the largest majority in Canadian history.

Liberals won 16 of the 18 Toronto and York ridings, the NDP retaining two. All four Ottawa ridings returned Liberals and Hamilton's four picked three Liberals and one NDP candidate.

LONDON STAUNCH

The only major city in the province which stayed in the Conservative camp was London where the Conservatives held firm in three seats. Windsor delivered its three Essex ridings to the Liberals again.

Rural areas stayed heavily Conservative. Kent and Lambton-Kent, both in the southwestern farm belt, ditched two Liberal winners of last June to give the Conservatives their only gains in the province.

The NDP was jolted at the loss of York South where a Liberal replaced David Lewis, NDP deputy leader in the Commons. The party held its provincial total by taking Hamilton South from a Conservative.

Liberal Leader Lester B. Pearson was re-elected in Algoma East, which he has held since a 1948 byelection, and other prominent Liberals posted easy victories.

The revolt of city voters against the Conservative government was most marked in "Tory Toronto" which gave the Conservatives all its seats in the 1958 Diefenbaker landslide and had never before blanked the party.

Mitchell Sharp, deputy trade minister in the former Liberal government, scored an overwhelming triumph in Toronto Eglinton which retiring Justice Minister Donald Fleming had represented since 1945 and did not contest this time. David G. Halin scored a big win in Toronto Broadview, held by Trade Minister Hees before he resigned from the cabinet in February and announced he would not run.

Red Kelly, Toronto Maple Leafs hockey centre, ran up a massive vote to hold York West for the Liberals; Walter Gordon, the party's financial critic, swamped his opposition in Toronto Davenport, and Paul Hellyer, associate defence minister in the former Liberal government, had no trouble holding Toronto Trinity.

STAR IN AGAIN

Labor Minister Michael Starr was re-elected in Ontario riding which surrounds Oshawa, running his string of successes there to six. Health Minister J. Waldo Monteith won a fifth term in Perth, a heavily rural riding.

Apart from Toronto, there were no sharp regional changes. Northern Ontario's 11 ridings repeated the verdict of last year with eight Liberals and three NDP members.

The Liberal total of 51 is the highest for that party since 1949 when Ontario contributed 56 seats to a country-wide landslide for Prime Minister St. Laurent.

Conservatives haven't been at so low an ebb since they were chopped to 25 seats in that same election, equalling their record low set in 1935 and 1940.

Highest Ontario count ever for the Liberals was 64 in 1874; the lowest eight in 1917 when the Conservatives posted their peak of 74.

ter Paul Martineau in Pontiac-Temiscamingue; and Theogene Ricard, named minister without portfolio during the campaign, in St. Hyacinthe-Bagot.

In addition to Lotbiniere, the Liberals won from the Conservatives in Gaspe, Longueuil, Matapedia - Matane, Stanstead and Vaudreuil-Soulanges.

Longueuil was held by Pierre Sevigny, former associate defence minister, who resigned from the cabinet Feb. 9 because he disagreed with the government's nuclear weapons policy. He lost to an unknown Liberal, Jean-Pierre Cote.

Mr. Sevigny said he did not think his resignation had affected his chances, adding "there is very little you can do to buck a trend."

GAIN FROM SC

Liberal gains from Social Credit were: Bellechasse, Drummond - Arthabaska, Richmond-Wolfe, Montmagny - L'Islet, Levis, Riviere-du - Loup-Temiscouata and St. Maurice-Lafleche.

Social Credit pluralities in these ridings last year varied between 99 in Riviere-du-Loup-Temiscouata and 9,213 in St. Maurice-Lafleche.

Real Caouette, deputy national leader of the Social Credit party re-elected in Villeneuve with a reduced majority over his Liberal opponent, blamed "the propaganda of American finance" for his party's losses. Mr. Caouette had forecast 80 Quebec seats for his party.

Lionel Chevrier, federal Liberal leader in Quebec who was re-elected in Montreal Laurier, described the Liberal gains as "a magnificent victory."

"We have refuted Social Credit," he said.

Gerard Picard, Quebec leader of the NDP, said it appeared his party was not "absolutely ready", for the campaign.

Mr. Picard, personally defeated his chances, adding "there is very little you can do to buck a trend."

Senator Flynn, top Progressive Conservative organizer in Quebec, said he is pleased with the result, adding:

"Under the circumstances, with all the difficulties we had and the press saying we had no chance in Quebec, we did very well."

The trend away from Social Credit was evident in Quebec Montmorency, where party whip Guy Marcoux, who had won with a 30,000-vote margin last year, slipped to a plurality of fewer than 3,000 votes.

However, Social Credit picked up support in western Quebec and in other ridings held by Liberals or Conservatives, and wound up with about the same number of votes as last year.

The New Democratic Party, which had 60 candidates in Quebec and had hopes of winning its first seats in Quebec, was shut out once more. However, it increased its share of the popular vote to more than 180,000 from about 80,000 last year.

Chief Justice Sets Bail for Twenty Men

TORONTO (CP)—Chief Justice J. C. Gibson of the Ontario High Court Monday set bail at $2,000 each for 20 men committed for stand trial on non-capital murder charges arising from the Feb. 11 shooting death of three Kapuskasing lumber workers.

The 20 men—all independent lumber workers—face trial before a Supreme Court judge and jury in October. They have been in custody near Kapuskasing since Magistrate W. S. Gardner committed them for trial last Wednesday.

The $5,000 cash or property bail is the same amount set for the men after their arrest following the deaths of the three strikers and pending their preliminary hearing.

Prime Minister

after a national election statement.

The situation was that no party had a majority and there was "much the same circumstance—indeed I think the percentage is the same—as in 1925."

"At that time, the Conservatives as I recall elected 116 and Mr. King, (former Liberal prime minister W. L. Mackenzie King) on the basis of the fact that no party had a majority, decided to meet Parliament.

NOT UNTIL FINALS

"Determination in that regard and as to the course that should be taken constitutionally will of course not be made in any way until the final votes are available."

In 1925, the Liberals held 101 seats, the Conservatives 116 and there were four others. Mr. King elected to continue as prime minister and asked Governor-General Baron Byng of Vimy for an election in mid-1926 after three House of Commons defeats—none on motions of non-confidence that spell a government's defeat.

(The request was refused. The Conservatives, asked to form a government, lasted three days and Mr. King won the subsequent election.)

Mr. Diefenbaker watched his party's decline from his special election car, leaving once at 9:30 p.m. to visit his committee rooms.

GIVES THANKS

There, he gave a strong-voiced but not emotional thanks for another smashing victory in the Prince Albert riding he first contested successfully in 1953 after being affected twice by constituency redistribution.

At the close of counting Monday Mr. Diefenbaker had 16,183 votes. His nearest competitor in a four-way fight was Harry Appe of the NDP with 8,004.

It was a bleak night from the weather aspect alone—with a heavy wet snowfall swirling around his car, making a quagmire of streets and sidewalks. It cut into the normal rural vote, although the turnout in this northern city was heavy.

"Never will I adequately be able to express my thanks," he told about 100 in his committee rooms. Then he went back to his car to watch late results from British Columbia and work on his post-election statement, given shortly after Liberal Leader Pearson had spoken.

It reflected the attitude of a man who on his last campaign day Saturday in southwestern Ontario told one audience: "I don't remove easy and I don't push easy." It also reflected a tenacity born of successive defeats before first election to the Commons in 1940 for the defunct riding of Lake Centre.

THE PEOPLE SPEAK

"It's natural I regret the outcome of the election today," he told a national audience. He added to reporters: "Well you wouldn't expect me to be entirely happy by the result but I have been long enough in public life to accept the good with the bad, the uncertainties with the indifferent, with equanimity. This is a democracy and when the people speak their mind one must listen to the voice of the people."

He added after a pause, in a voice that showed fatigue "however, in this case, they didn't speak with the finality which I'd hoped would have been the case."

He also said on his national message that "I have never exulted in victory. I have never been craven when things turned out badly."

He had given of the "best that was in me."

"I follow the course I believed right. That course was based on conscience."

Statements From Leaders

Pearson Waits For Service Vote To Be Counted

By KEN KELLY

OTTAWA (CP)—Liberal Leader Pearson is pinning his hopes of a majority of seats in Parliament on the service vote results to be announced next weekend.

After that, he said in a post-election statement early today, it will be up to Prime Minister Diefenbaker and leaders of all parties "to make a decision in the best interests of Canada."

Asked by reporters whether he thought Prime Minister Diefenbaker should resign, Mr. Pearson reiterated that the election-night count was not final.

"I will leave it to Mr. Diefenbaker to decide what his own responsibility is. I know what mine is."

Was he ready to speak as prime minister?

"I'm not prime minister and when I am prime minister I'll be quite ready to speak as prime minister," he replied sharply.

WANTS HOUSE TO MEET

He reiterated his campaign statements that Parliament should meet at the "earliest practicable" moment, amplifying that by saying he meant after the NATO council meeting here May 22 to 24.

With the largest party group in the Commons but still short of a majority, Mr. Pearson was serious-faced as he appeared before a crowd of about 250 supporters who waited the long hours for final results at Liberal election headquarters.

"The result of this election is not yet known, that is in terms of a final result," he said gravely. "It is an unfinished election at the present moment in the sense that it is not yet clear whether any party will have a clear majority.

"But the only party that can get that majority is the Liberal party and it may be that when the soldier vote is counted by the end of the week the Liberal party will have a majority in the House of Commons. . . .

"Until that is known, it would be foolish of me to make any definitive announcement at this time and I don't intend to do so."

SEES TWO RESULTS

However, he saw two results in the outcome—reinforcement of the two-party system and a second "drastic" defeat in a year for Prime Minister Diefenbaker and the Progressive Conservative party.

He expressed disappointment at the Liberal showing in the strongly - Conservative Prairie provinces and pleasure at the Liberal resurgence in Quebec.

The popular vote showed a "reinforcement of the two-party system in Canada."

"I think it is a healthy thing to have a two-party system in this country."

The same figures made it "clear that the Conservative government has suffered a second drastic defeat in one year."

GIVES PLEDGE

After delivering his post-election statement, Mr. Pearson moved into an adjoining room where he told Ottawa-area Liberal workers that "my pledge is not to put you through this kind of activity for another four years."

Mr. Pearson sweated out five hours of indecisive reports waiting for the elusive majority which he had said during the campaign could be gained only by the Liberal party.

In a hotel room with Mrs. Pearson and top advisers, he was out of touch with the wailing throng of workers but sent out statements praising the "magnificent" efforts of Liberals in the Atlantic provinces and the "common sense" and "responsibility" of Quebec voters "who were not misled by the false promises of Social Credit."

SHOW BIG GAIN

Thompson Not Ready to State His Position

By JACK BEST

RED DEER, Alta. (CP)—Social Credit Leader Robert Thompson, personally triumphant in Monday's federal election though his party suffered sharp losses, flies to Ottawa today to confer with leaders of Social Credit's Quebec wing.

Mr. Thompson will hold talks in the capital Wednesday or Thursday with Deputy Leader Real Caouette and Guy Mascoux, Social Credit whip in the last Parliament, on the outcome of the voting which left Lester Pearson's Liberal party with the largest number of parliamentary seats.

The Social Credit chieftain was guarded Monday night in commenting on the election, declining to discuss the policy of his party toward a minority government.

"We will take that decision when the time comes," he told reporters at a press conference when asked whether Social Credit would vote in Parliament to keep a minority administration in office.

He said more than once, however, that another election in the near future would not be in the best interests of the country.

In the last Parliament, Mr. Thompson 's party saved the minority Conservative government from defeat on several occasions when non-confidence motions were voted upon. It was when Social Credit finally withdrew its support, early in February, that the government toppled and a second election within one year was called.

HOLDS HIS SEAT

Mr. Thompson won personal victory in Monday's balloting, holding on to Red Deer constituency which he captured from the Progressive Conservatives last year.

He described the voting results in Quebec, where Social Credit got only a third of the seats he had predicted for it there, as disappointing and "certainly an upset."

He denied any suggestion that his position as party leader might be jeopardized by the election result in the West, where only four Social Credit members were returned.

"There has never been a threat to my leadership from inside the party," he said. "The threat has come entirely from the outside, from the Liberals, the Conservatives and the press."

MAY SWITCH ORGANS

LA JOLLA, Calif. (AP)—The day when people can get healthy organs to replace almost any of their own sick or damaged body parts is only one step away, a young surgeon said Monday. Surgeons now are able to take out and re-implant virtually every organ except the brain itself, said Dr. Richard C. Lillehei, 36, of the University of Minnesota medical school.

ford was deputized to accept the Oscar for her.

Miss Bancroft's victory was considered an upset by seasoned observers, who had (What Ever Happened to Baby Jane?) or Geraldine Page (Sweet Bird of Youth) to win.

Veteran Begley, long noted as an actor's actor, scored another surprise in the supporting actor race. Omar Sharif of Lawrence was considered the favorite.

"I've come a long way from Hartford, Conn.," said Begley.

Later he said he thought his agent was crazy in suggesting that he might win the meaty role of Boss Finley in Sweet Bird of Youth. But it happened, and the actor said Monday night was the peak of his career. He gave his age as "over 43." The record books list him as 62.

TEARFUL

Blonde Miss Duke could manage only a tearful "thank you" before the countrywide television audience.

Backstage she regained her composure and said she was "tremendously excited." What will she do with the Oscar? "Hold on to it forever," she said.

Miss Duke's victory marked the first time a juvenile has won an acting Oscar.

Writing awards went to Horton Foote for the To Kill a Mockingbird adaptation, and to Ennio de Concini, Alfredo Giannetti and Pietro Germi for their original screenplay, Divorce Italian Style.

The French Sundays and Cybele was hailed the best foreign-language film. Best song was Days of Wine and Roses by Henry Mancini, and Johnny Mercer.

Besides the best picture and direction awards, Lawrence was named for best sound, editing, music score, art direction and cinematography. The First World War adventure tale managed the closest thing to a sweep Monday night, but its seven Oscars were a considerable distance from the all-time winner, Ben Hur, which collected 11.

The Oscar cast finished 15 minutes past the estimated two-hour mark, and moved along with businesslike precision while producing no great moments of excitement. Bob Hope's wit was missed, but Frank Sinatra kept things moving and provided occasional laughs.

Ann Landers

Cigarette Addict Fools Nobody But Himself

ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANN LANDERS—Several weeks ago my husband triumphantly announced that he was giving up smoking. I was delighted, since Paul had been a heavy smoker for many years and I never believed he possessed enough will power to conquer the habit.

Paul was fine for about three days. Then he got so that he had to "go for a walk" after dinner. When he returns after 10 minutes, he always smells of cigarette smoke. At bedtime he goes to the basement "to get something" and returns—once again, smelling of cigarette smoke.

On numerous occasions I have walked into Paul's office unexpectedly and found him smoking. The rationalizations and contortions he goes through to get rid of a cigarette are comical.

I have never said one word to him about this, but if he can't stop smoking why doesn't he admit it instead of making himself look ridiculous?—S. R. L.

DEAR S. R. L.—Pyul is childish. He's trying to cover up his "naughty behavior" because he's ashamed to admit that he can't lick the habit.

Say nothing. The "walks" after dinner and the trips to the basement are probably the only exercise he gets.

DEAR ANN LANDERS—I know you are not a doctor but I couldn't talk to a man about this so please try to help me. I am 17 years old and am built like an ironing board.

I have heard of creams and oils but I'm not sure they do any good. I also heard of an operation where a surgeon can insert paraffin cups. I would even be willing to have the operation if I thought it would help me be more attractive to fellows.

I've had only four dates in my life and I'm sure this is the reason. What boy wants to take out a girl who has no shape at all?

Please tell me what to do.—DATELESS.

DEAR DATELESS—The creams and oils do a lot of good—for the companies that sell them. I have never heard of a cream or an oil that added inches to the bustline.

As for surgery, you'll have to see your doctor—but I'd strongly oppose such radical measures.

I don't know what kind of fellows you are trying to attract, but if they go looking for dates with a tape measure they aren't worth bothering with. I suspect your real problem is a flat personality.

DEAR ANN LANDERS—There is an awful lot of cheating going on in our room at school. Kids sit with books in their laps during exams. They look at each other's papers for the answers. I have seen these cheaters cribbing from prepared notes.

Our teacher has very poor eyesight and doesn't see what is going on. Shall we tell her who these chiselers are? It seems unfair that some of us should break our heads studying and see the cheaters get grades as good as ours.

Your advice is needed.—HONEST INJUN.

DEAR INJUN—Tell the teacher what is going on—but don't tell her who. If her eyesight is poor, perhaps she should invite another teacher to "assist" her during examinations.

I am opposed to informing. I firmly believe that the chiselers and cheaters do themselves in eventually.

CONFIDENTIAL TO UP TO YOU—Souvenir hunting my eye. It's stealing. If every one took a tablecloth as a "souvenir" the restaurants would be in pretty bad shape.

To learn how to keep your boy friend in line without losing him, send for Ann Landers' booklet, "Necking and Petting—How Far Is Too Far," enclosing with your request 25 cents in coin and a long, self-addressed envelope.

you to this kind of activity for another four years."

During the campaign, Social Credit Leader Robert Thompson and New Democratic Party Leader T. C. Douglas said they would support the largest group in the Commons.

They did not reassert this position officially Monday night.

Mr. Thompson, whose party lost six of its 26 Quebec seats while retaining its four in the West, said he would fly to Ottawa for a meeting with Real Caouette, deputy leader, and party whip Guy Marcoux.

Mr. Douglas, whose party lost two seats, said Mr. Diefenbaker has the constitutional right to continue in office if no party has a majority.

The election is not formally completed until return of writs May 8.

Parliament could be convened a few days after that but exactly how soon was not known.

SEES MAY MEETING

Mr. Pearson suggested the earliest practical date would be after the NATO council meeting May 22-24 in Ottawa. During the campaign he proposed May 16.

Mr. Diefenbaker said Parliament could be called in a month at the earliest.

Mr. Douglas said it would be his party's duty to work with whatever government evolves "to grapple effectively and successfully with the problems that face Canada."

Mr. Thompson said his party will use its Commons strength "for the sound government of Canada."

Mr. Diefenbaker, whose party won a record 208 seats only five years ago, said it is "natural that I regret the outcome of the voting."

His prayer was that "Canada will be God-guided in the days ahead for the benefit of Canada and her great destiny."

If 67-year-old Mr. Diefenbaker plans to stay in office he will have to reconstruct a shattered cabinet.

SIX MINISTERS LOSE

Besides Mr. Green, beaten by a Liberal in Vancouver Quadra, these other five ministers lost their seats: Immigration Minister Richard A. Bell, whose Carleton seat went Liberal for the first time since Confederation; Postmaster-General Ellen Fairclough, first woman in Canadian history to become a federal cabinet minister, beaten in Hamilton West; Minister Without Portfolio Frank McGee, defeated in York - Scarborough; Defence Production Minister Raymond O'Hurley, who lost in Lotbinière; and Forestry Minister Martial Asselin, beaten in Charlevoix. The Liberals ousted the six ministers except for Mr. Asselin, beaten by a Social Crediter.

Including defeats in the 1962 and 1963 elections, resignations over policy and departures for personal or other reasons, Mr. Diefenbaker has lost 17 ministers in the last 19 months.

The Liberals picked up scattered seats from the Conservatives in all provinces except New Brunswick and Saskatchewan and from Social Credit in Quebec.

PRAIRIES LOYAL

The Prairies remained loyal to Mr. Diefenbaker. All 17 seats in Saskatchewan, the prime minister's home province, went Conservative. The lone Liberal there, Hazen Argue, former CCF leader, lost the Assiniboia seat he had held since 1945.

Social Credit losses were confined to Quebec and Mr. Caouette blamed this on "the infamous propaganda of American high finance." He denounced the Liberals as "a bunch of hypocrites and liars."

The NDP lost its one Maritimes seat, Cape Breton South, to a Conservative and Vancouver Boarrard to a Liberal. It won Hamilton South from the Conservatives but David Lewis, deputy NDP House leader in the last Parliament, was beaten by a Liberal in York South.

The Conservatives, who swept the Toronto-area seats in 1958, lost their last foothold in the district. The Liberals grabbed 16 of the seats, the NDP the other two.

As last year, the Liberals won all but one of the 21 Montreal-area ridings.

They swept Newfoundland's seven seats for the first time since 1953 and Liberal Premier Smallwood said he regards the "coming of a Pearson government in Canada today as being the biggest thing to happen to Newfoundland since Confederation."

The Liberals gained at least two seats in Nova Scotia, winning four, and split Prince Edward Island's four seats with the Conservatives, a gain of two.

N.B. UNCHANGED

There was no change in New Brunswick—Liberals six, Conservatives four—but in Quebec the Conservatives were cut to eight seats from 14. The Liberals increased their seats in Quebec to 46 from 25 and in Ontario to 51 from 44.

Although shut out in Saskatchewan, the Liberals doubled their representation to two in Manitoba and won a seat in Alberta after being blanked in that province in 1962.

Thus the Liberals still had only three Prairie seats compared with 41 for the Conservatives and two each for Social Credit and the NDP.

The NDP remained the strongest party in British Columbia, winning nine of the province's 22 seats. The Liberals won seven, a gain of three, the Conservatives three and Social Credit two.

Diefenbaker Would Need Support of All Socreds and NDP Members to Form Govt.

In the following story a United States reporter who covered the campaign for The Associated Press assesses the result from the American point of view.

By MAX HARRELSON

TORONTO (AP)—Despite the confusion surrounding the outcome of Monday's election, it seems likely that Prime Minister John Diefenbaker can at best only delay the formation of a Liberal government.

In order to maintain his Conservative government in power, Diefenbaker would have to have the support of both the right-wing Social Credit party and the left-wing New Democrats. This does not appear probable.

If and when Liberal Leader Lester B. Pearson gets the bid to form a government, he is prepared to launch a blitz attack on a half - dozen urgent problems, including the sagging U.S.-Canadian relations.

His prospective cabinet members have been working for months on economic, financial, defence and foreign policy problems. Pearson has indicated he aims to follow the pattern of the famous 100 days of the New Deal in Washington.

'LEAVE EAGLE ALONE'

The 65-year-old Nobel Prize winner has stressed over and over that he wants to pursue a good-neighbor policy. He says he deplores anti - Americanism and what he calls "plucking the eagle's feathers."

Anti - Americanism was injected into the campaign, primarily by the Conservatives, but Diefenbaker denied it was a pro-Canadianism. The vote did not give any clear sign that the issue had influenced the decision.

Mandate or no mandate, Pearson is expected to put a priority tag on the task of patching up the tradition of friendship with the United States.

It would be a mistake, however, to conclude that the days of friction between Ottawa and Washington will end with the formation of a Liberal government. Both defence and economic differences are too wide for immediate solution.

And Canadian officials, including Pearson, are determined to avoid anything that appears like dictation from Washington. As Pearson put it recently, Canada must do its best to maintain good relations with the United States, but at the proper time it must speak up if the interests of Canada are involved.

The question of accepting nuclear warheads raises immediate difficulties. Although Pearson declared during the campaign that he favored accepting the warheads to the extent necessary to carry out Canada's commitments, he has never been enthusiastic about having nuclear weapons on Canadian soil. Up until last January he was publicly opposing such a step.

NEEDS SUPPORT

As head of a minority government he would be dependent upon one of the other parties to support any major defence policy. It is doubtful that he can win such support.

What Canada will do about arming its NATO forces in Europe with nuclear weapons is especially urgent since the NATO council meets in Ottawa May 22.

Some economic policy statements made by Mitchell Sharp, slated to be trade minister in a Liberal government, and Walter Gordon, prospective finance minister, have run counter to policies being pushed in Washington on tariffs.

Sharp has criticized Diefenbaker for not adopting a tough economic stand. He says he'll take in future tariff bargaining sessions the U.S. Trade Expansion Act.

The Liberals say they will name a Liberal-by-inclination as ambassador to Ottawa. Canada's ambassador in Washington, will have the problem of trying to keep Canada from stepping up trade exports to the United States and at the same time avoid aggravating U.S. — Canadian relations.

In foreign and defence policies, he may even have to lean over backwards at times to keep the sensitive Canadians from accusing him of being subservient to Washington unless he goes along with Washington.

Six Cabinet Ministers Met Personal Defeat in Voting

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

A dozen cabinet ministers including Prime Minister Diefenbaker retained their Commons seats in Monday's general election, but at least six met personal defeat.

External Affairs Minister Howard Green and Postmaster-General Allen Fairclough, originals of the Diefenbaker cabinet of 1957, were among those beaten.

Mr. Green, 67, member for Vancouver Quadra, had been in the House since 1935. His campaign had represented Hamilton West since 1950. Both lost to Liberals.

Another one of the 1957 cabinet—Finance Minister George Nowlan—was in a nip-and-tuck fight against a Liberal in Nova Scotia's Digby - Annapolis-Kings with the count there still incomplete.

Immigration Minister Rich ard A. Bell became the first Conservative since Confederation to lose Carleton riding, which includes part of Ottawa. He was nosed out by Liberal Lloyd C. Francis, a member of the capital city's board of control.

THEY ALSO FELL

Other cabinet members who fell were Minister Without Portfolio Frank McGee in York Scarborough, where in 1958 he had a majority of more than 35,000 in this most populous of constituencies; Defence Production Minister Raymond Halpenny in Lothinière, and Forestry Minister Martial Asselin in Charlevoix.

Mr. Asselin lost to a Social Creditor and the other two to Liberals. He and Mr. McGee had been appointed to the cabinet less than a month ago.

Four others of the 23-member cabinet were not up for re-election.

Trade Minister Wallace McCutcheon is a member of the Senate. Justice Minister Fleming is retiring before politics for personal reasons, and State Secretary Halpenny because of poor health. Agriculture Minister Pierre Sevigny lost to a Liberal in Longueuil.

FIRMER MAKES SEAT

Former trade minister George Hees, another who walked out with the cabinet of the defence split, did not run and his Toronto Broadview constituency was picked up by the Liberals.

The results provided the worst beating a cabinet had taken among its individuals since nine Liberal ministers lost when the Conservatives came up with a minority government in 1957.

In the 1963 election, five Conservative ministers lost their seats.

Apart from Mr. Nowlan, just five of the original cabinet formed June 21, 1957, survived Monday's voting — Mr. Diefenbaker, Fisheries Minister Angus MacLean, Transport Minister Leon Balcer, Labor Minister Michael Starr and Defence Minister Gordon Churchill.

The others who survived were Agriculture Minister Alvin Hamilton, Revenue Minister Fleming, Health Minister J. Waldo Monteith, Northern Affairs Minister Walter Dinsdale, Veterans Minister Marcel Lambert, Mines Minister Paul Martineau and Theogene Richard, new minister without portfolio.

Union Members Ordered to Pay $2,600 in Losses

TORONTO (CP)—An Ontario Supreme Court judge Monday ordered 10 union members to pay $2,600 in losses suffered by two Sturgeon Falls, Ont., hotels picketed during contract negotiations last fall.

Mr. Justice Wishart F. Spence said in a written judgment issued at Osgoode Hall that the picketing was without justification.

Mr. Justice Spence ruled that the Hotel and Restaurant Employees and Bartenders Union (AFL-CIO) did not bargain in good faith.

However, he held that the union, which was named as a defendant, could not be sued in its own name in this case.

The 10 union members, six of them employees of the two new hotels are: Omer Gendron, Hector Pelletier, George Lawreyer, Florian Chartrand, Guy Seguin, Roland Chartrand, Richard Chartier, Leo Jolicoeur, Walter Telford and Vice-President Archibald Johnston.

The Sturgeon Falls local of the Bartenders Union was certified Aug. 20, 1962, as bargaining agent for employees of the two hotels, operated by Nipissing Hotels Limited and Parents Company Limited.

The Supreme Court justice's judgment said a 24-hour picketing started in front of the two hotels Sept. 17 after Union Vice-President Johnston had presented a list of contract demands to company representatives a week earlier.

REJECTS CONTRACT

Picketing was suspended a day later, pending a union-company meeting, but the discussions rejected a draft contract the next day and ordered picketing resumed, charging that the two companies were not bargaining in good faith.

Mr. Justice Spence said the picketing took place before a contract agreement took place, and added there was no request by either side for Ontario Labor Relations Board conciliation services.

There was no strike and work was carried on by the pickets, the judge wrote. Although there was no violence, some prospective customers turned away from the hotels after brief talks with the union pickets.

Charge Mother With Murder

TORONTO (CP) — Mrs. Sophie Naumoff, 29, was charged with murder Monday night after her eight-year-old daughter was found strangled in their Toronto home.

The body of Christine Naumoff was discovered by her two sisters, aged 11 and 6 when they came home from school. The girl was found beaten around the face and arms and cut with a butcher knife.

Mrs. Naumoff, an outpatient from an Ontario mental hospital, also was found injured and was being treated at hospital for an overdose of sleeping tablets.

Police said the girl was strangled with a woollen scarf.

Charge Hubby After Beating

TORONTO (CP)—A 36-year-old Toronto man was charged with attempted murder Monday night after his wife was found stabbed and beaten with a hammer in the couple's home.

Mrs. Barbara Reid, 35, was in serious condition in hospital with knife wounds in her right side.

Her husband, Marshall, head of a Toronto lumber company, was in hospital with knife wounds in his stomach. His condition was described as satisfactory.

How Prominent Candidates Fared in Monday's Election

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

How prominent candidates fared in Monday's election:

Three of Ontario's five federal cabinet ministers swept aside by the avalanche of Liberal votes which hit the major cities—Frank McGee, minister without portfolio, in York-Scarborough; Postmaster - General Allen Fairclough in Hamilton West, and Immigration Minister Richard A. Bell in Carleton.

Judy La Marsh, 39-year-old woman lawyer who headed the Liberals' controversial truth squad, re-elected in Niagara Falls.

Health Minister Waldo Monteith, in the cabinet since 1957 a fifth-time winner in Perth.

Labor Minister Michael Starr re-elected for his sixth straight victory in Ontario riding.

Mrs. Margaret Macdonald, Progressive Conservative, only woman member of the last Parliament from the Atlantic provinces, defeated by Liberal John Mullally in Kings, P.E.I.

Allan J. MacEachen, former special adviser to Liberal Leader Pearson, re-elected in Inverness-Richmond.

Forestry Minister Martial Asselin defeated in Charlevoix by Social Credit candidate Gilles Belanger.

Hazen Argue, former CCF House leader, defeated as Liberal candidate in Assiniboia, a Saskatchewan constituency he had represented since 1945. Conservative Lawrence Watson won the seat.

Marcel Lambert, veterans affairs minister and Speaker in the last Parliament, re-elected in Edmonton West.

F. W. Herridge, former New Democratic Party House leader re-elected with a comfortable majority in Kootenay West.

Harold Winch, a founding member of the former CCF party, returned in Vancouver East for the 11th straight time.

MIGHT BE ONE

YKAIMA, Wash. (AP)—Canada and the United States would gain both economic and military advantage by becoming one country, an American lumber executive said Monday. Robert B. Pamplin, president of the Georgia-Pacific Corporation, suggested that the combined nation might form a common market with England, Australia and New Zealand.

Enlarged Federal Cabinet In Prospect if Pearson Asked To Form Next Government

OTTAWA (CP)—An enlarged federal cabinet is in prospect if Liberal Leader Pearson is called on to form a government. He would then face the politically-delicate task of trying to match potential cabinet talents to the traditional need for geographical representation.

A Pearson cabinet would likely be expanded beyond the 22 in the Diefenbaker ministry before the Conservative defeat in the Commons last Feb. 5.

Mr. Pearson is known to favor the British system in which portfolios are lighter and more numerous. Not all of them would carry full cabinet rank. Some departmental heads would have access to policy-making sessions only on matters that involve them directly —and perhaps even then would have a senior minister carrying the ball.

Another factor is that Mr. Pearson pledged during the election campaign to set up a new department of industry. He also promised to split the agriculture portfolio on East-West lines, with a minister for each region. Each would have full cabinet status.

NO DISCUSSION?

Sources close to the Liberal leader said last week, with only a few campaigning days left, that Mr. Pearson was not believed to have discussed possible cabinet jobs with any of the Liberal candidates.

A week ago, Walter Gordon, who is considered a most probable choice for finance minister said nothing had been discussed with him. Re-elected in Tuesday's Davenport, Mr. Gordon was chairman of the Liberal campaign committee.

Mr. Pearson's cabinet choices will be expected to be acceptable to the Liberal caucus. Some of the names most frequently mentioned during the campaign as cabinet material.

Without any attempt to predict portfolios, here is a rundown on some other top Liberal winners in the eleven provinces (constituencies bracketed):

Newfoundland — J. W. Pickersgill, former immigration minister (Bonavista-Twillingate).

Prince Edward Island — J. Watson McKnight, lawyer, MP for Prince from 1945 until his defeat in 1957.

Nova Scotia — Allan MacEachen, economist (Inverness-Richmond); John Stewart, political scientist and former special assistant to U.S. State Secretary Dean Rusk (Antigonish-Guysborough).

New Brunswick—H. J. Robichaud, former N.B. fisheries director (Gloucester).

Quebec—Lionel Chevrier, former transport minister (Montreal Laurier); Maurice Lamontagne, economic adviser to Mr. Pearson and former assistant deputy minister of northern affairs (Montreal Outremont-St. Jean); Maurice Sauvé, economist and assistant secretary of the Gordon commission (Iles-de-la-Madeleine); Paul M. (Bud) Drury, former deputy defence minister (Montreal St. Antoine-Westmount); Guy Favreau, former associate deputy minister immigration (Papineau); Alcan Macnaughton, lawyer and businessman (Montreal Mount Royal); Lucien Cardin, lawyer and mayor of Cap Rouge (Quebec South); Jean-Jacques Bertrand, son (St. Jean-Iberville-Napierville); Jean-Luc Pepin, political scientist (Richmond-Wolfe-Arthabaska).

Ontario—Judy La Marsh, lawyer and her party's copyright expert (Niagara Falls); Paul Martin, Essex East, seems likely to be external affairs minister.

Paul Hellyer has plenty of other talent to choose from, especially in Quebec and Ontario.

But the geographical problem arose with the Liberal void in Saskatchewan — the third party won only three of the 49 seats in the Prairies, where Argue had been considered a possible western agriculture minister before his defeat in Assiniboia.

Harry Hays, Calgary mayor and cattleman, has been a possible choice for that job by winning in Calgary South. Mrs. Margaret Rosanis Konantz of Winnipeg South also had been mentioned during the campaign as a possible choice.

PC Headquarters Geared For Everything So Nothing Was Surprise for Workers

OTTAWA (CP)—On the surface at least, Conservative party headquarters seemed to be about the most unexciting place in town Monday night.

Unlike the 1958 election when excitement was electric, and in last June's election when dire prediction was made of victory by a thunder storm, workers in the old grey brick building here were in a relaxed mood Monday night as the Liberal party forged ahead in the number of seats.

Like most Canadians, said one, none of them knew exactly what was going to happen. They had equal expectations for a Conservative minority, majority, nothing, nothing came as a shock.

National organizer Dalton Camp said: "This is a tribute to achievement for an organization that was flat on its back a few weeks ago — it was stunned." Prime Minister Diefenbaker fought a "magnificent campaign."

GREEN DEFEAT SADDENS

No, he wasn't downhearted, he said in matter-of-fact fashion although he shook his head sadly when he heard that External Affairs Minister Green had been defeated.

Party workers, canvassers, observers and reporters were in the two-storey building throughout the evening, with Mr. Camp spending most of the time in his office telephoning eastern results to Prince Albert where they were relayed to Mr. Diefenbaker.

Other party workers watched the results unfold on television with little comment. The tight fight in nearby Carleton between Immigration Minister Richard A. Bell and Lloyd Francis, the eventual winner, was about the hottest topic. This appeared unexpected to most in the building.

"I am, very disappointed in Dick Bell's defeat," Mr. Camp, "but this is just a pause in his career—I am sure of that.

"We're a little stunned around here. For a party that was down on its backs we put up quite a fight, didn't we?"

HITS WITH FORCE

Meanwhile, two blocks away in Social Credit headquarters, the conversation was brisk but with considerably more force. Leader Caouette had been predicting widespread gains throughout the country, especially in Quebec, and expected his Social Credit losses came as somewhat of a shock.

But Deputy Organizer Frank Jones displayed no despair. "We will still have a solid representation in Parliament," he said. Several of the workers mentioned that, even with the disappointments, things were much better than in 1958 when the party was wiped out of the House.

There was no activity at New Democratic Party headquarters. A reception was held for candidates in another part of the city.

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

I heard a venerable sports observer say during a back-room bull session: "It takes more than ability to make a great star. It takes guts, courage and desire, among other things."

Bobby Hull, in the opinion of hopflight hockey men attained greatness long ago. His playing ability since joining the Black Hawks has made him one of the most-talked-of player in the talked of players in the National League.

Some of the more rabid supporters of teams other than the Hawks grudgingly admit to Hull's greatness, albeit they disagree he is destined for super-stardom.

One of Bobby's greatest characteristics as a hockey player is his desire. He is one of the greatest team men in the major league, while none will deny his individual ability.

You can hardly describe a hockey player or any other athlete, for that matter, as a "pantywaist" if he goes out there and plays in the keyed-up atmosphere of a playoff or championship battle with a slight shoulder separation, a fractured orbital bone under his left eye and a broken nose.

In the heat of climactic hassles, the players with the offensive potential and ability are usually the "marked men" of the battle. It is a sure sign of greatness when such athletes, to name Hull and Gordie Howe in particular, can "stand the attention gaff" without lessening their production.

One of Hull's claims to greatness was evidenced in the Chicago-Detroit series. He was forced to the bench with his multiple injuries. You couldn't have blamed Bobby much if he had decided to remain on the sidelines and recuperate.

But two of his mates were injured and his Hawks were in the throes of a Stanley Cup playoff. A determined Red Wings team starring the fabulous Gordie Howe, was out for figurative blood. The Hawks could not afford a let-up.

So Hull joined his team-mates in Detroit last Tuesday for the third game of the series. He said the club doctor had given him a clearance. It turned out the doctor had done no such thing.

Dr. Wayne Slaughter, the Hawks club physician, said, "we didn't even discuss his playing. He only asked if I thought it would be all right for him to play Thursday and I said I didn't see any reason why not. He had a very bad fracture of both cheekbones and his nose, but they snapped back into place very well. I told him if he got hit in the face it could very dangerous."

"If they had asked me about playing on Tuesday, I wouldn't have allowed him to do it. I guess it was up to Hull and the team and they made the decision," said the doctor.

An eastern sports editor remarked: "Fans are often extremely unfair to injured athletes who are playing on nerve alone. Since the bandages and tape do not show on the outside, they forget that an athlete is injured and they expect him to do all the things he can do when he is 100 percent. Then when he does not play up to form, they criticize him."

That may be the rule, but no one will deny that Hull was the exception. He scored twice in the first game with his shoulder separation and once in the second game. Then came the facial injury and he sat out the third tussle. He scored singles in the fourth and fifth games and as the Hawks went down before the Wings seemingly in the sixth, his guns were blazing and he fired home three to climax a brilliant effort.

His record for the playoff series was eight goals. And had the Hawks gone on to meet the Toronto Maple Leafs in the cup final, I believe the most-goals-scored-in-the-playoffs record would have gone by the board.

The mark is an even dozen held jointly by Rocket Richard and Jean Beliveau of the Montreal Canadiens. Richard scored his twelve in nine games against Toronto and Chicago in the 1943-44 series, while Le Gros Bill got his in ten games against Rangers and Detroit in 1955-56.

Hungry Wings Again Odds Underdogs

By PAUL RIMSTEAD

TORONTO (CP)—A lot has been said about the pulse of big Gordie Howe to Detroit Red Wings, and rightly so.

But don't overlook something else the Wings have going for them—that stuff called spirit.

When the mighty Toronto Maple Leafs shats out against Detroit tonight in the opening game of the Stanley Cup finals, they'll be facing a hepped-up club studded with hungry hockey players.

The fact that Leafs are 13 to 5 favorites to win the opening game of the best-of-seven series and 14 to 5 to take the Stanley Cup for the second year in succession doesn't bother the Wings.

This is the same Detroit club that wasn't picked by anyone to make the playoffs this season. The team that finished fifth last year was said to be in need of a rebuilding job.

LED LEAGUE EARLY

Instead of living up to preseason predictions, the Wings opened with a flourish and were early leaders in the National Hockey League race.

The experts counted up by saying it wouldn't last—the Detroiters were playing over their heads and would soon settle down to a lower, more fitting position in the standings.

How, indeed, was a big factor as the Wings held on and boasted a fourth-place finish, only five points behind the champion Leafs. His play was an inspiration to his mates—especially the younger ones—and the club developed the kind of spirit which make any team tough to beat.

Chicago Black Hawks had them 2-0 in their best-of-seven semi-final but still the Wings didn't quit. They romped home winners in the next four in the series 4-2, a fact that hasn't hurt their spirit at all.

WILL NEED IT

If coach Punch Imlach of the Leafs is a prophet, however, the Wings will need all the spirit they can muster. Imlach expects Frank Mahovlich, his slumbering giant, to have a big series.

The Big M had only one assist in the Montreal series and was widely acclaimed as the big star.

There has been a lot of speculation about Imlach's plans for checking Howe. The Leaf boss says he hasn't any plans, that he'll just let his left wingers look after the fiesty Detroit right winger.

He has three of them—Mahovlich, Edward Shack and Dick Duff.

Duff, at five-foot-nine and 163 pounds, has been written off as too small to handle big Gordie. Shack, especially on New York Ranger, has spent many of his helter-skelter hours as Howe's shadow.

However, Shack's unpredictable manoeuvres on the ice are said to be among things that Imlach would rather have someone else on the Detroit great.

If the speculators are right, it could be the two big men—Mahovlich and Howe—in a duel.

Robinson, O'Toole Team For Win

Redlegs Wallop Bucs In Opener

NEW YORK (AP) — Fred Hutchinson, manager of the National League Cincinnati Reds, made some amendments in his baseball player ratings book today, straightening the question marks following the names of Frank Robinson, Gene Freese and Pete Rose into big, fat exclamation points.

Outfielder Robinson provided the power and infielders Freese and Rose the finesse as the Reds began their bid for the National League pennant with a 5-3 victory Monday over the revamped Pittsburgh Pirates in the league opener before 38,896 fans at Cincinnati.

Tonight the Reds will help Philadelphia open its schedule, after the rest of the league gets under way with an afternoon program that has Los Angeles at Chicago, San Francisco at Houston, Milwaukee at Pittsburgh and St. Louis at New York.

The Reds made their bead start a winning one as Robinson slammed a first-inning two-run homer that sent Cincinnati ahead to stay while Rose and Freese piled up the double plays in support of Jim O'Toole's six-hit pitching.

Robinson came up with a sore shoulder in spring training that limited his movements, held his batting average to .242 in exhibition games and kept him from hitting even one homer.

SLASHES LINE DRIVE

But the slugging outfielder, who wound up batting .342 with 29 homers and 136 runs batted in as the Reds finished third last year, slashed a line drive in his first at-bat, off Pittsburgh starter Earl Francis.

Freese, virtually a complete loss in the first year after he suffered a broken leg in spring training, legged out an infield hit in a two-run second inning uprising and started one double play from his third-base post.

Rose, a rookie not even on the Reds' roster, started at second base in place of veteran Don Blasingame, was involved in three smooth double plays and drew a walk before Robinson's homer to earn his spurs.

Shortstop Leo Cardenas' two-run second inning single and Gordie Coleman's homer in the sixth accounted for the Reds' other runs.

Dons Clendenon's homer in the fourth got the Pirates started. Bob Bailey scored the other run in the seventh when he singled and moved around on a balk, a walk and an error by O'Toole.

Earlier it was erroneously reported that Schmidt would meet Eddie Ridersall April 13.

Square Eastern Canada Finals 1-1

Bulldogs Defeat Hawks

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP)—Windsor Bulldogs, thwarted by Jean-Guy Morissette in the opening game Sunday, found the little Moncton hawk goalie was human after all here Monday night as they posted a 6-2 victory and tied the best-of-seven Eastern Canada Allan Cup finals at one apiece.

The third game will be played here Wednesday and the fourth is scheduled for Windsor on Saturday night.

Veteran Joe Klukay, skating like a youngster despite his 40 years, turned in an outstanding effort to score two Windsor goals. Bob Brown also scored twice while Bill Mitchell and Irwin Gross got the others. Doug Howatt and Jacques Allard clicked for Moncton.

Morissette, who kicked out 55 Windsor shots as Hawks for the first game in overtime, 3-2 was laying to do the same here Monday night before 2,727 customers. He stopped 17 before Mitchell beat him near the end of the first period.

Bulldogs clinched the verdict with three goals in the middle period and added another pair in the third.

A total of 18 minor penalties were handed out by referee Norm Warner, nine a side. Twelve came in a wild, first period.

All told, Morissette stopped 41 Bulldog shots while Wayne Rutledge kicked out 29 Moncton tries.

Kennedy Pitch Bad As Orioles Win

Early Homers Beat Senators

NEW YORK (AP)—President Kennedy, who says he has his good months and his bad ones, and the Washington Senators, who have mostly bad ones, are tied at losing in the American Baseball league race.

The active season's all over for the president, but the Senators, last a year ago, have 161 games to go.

Baltimore Orioles, on the strength of two quick home runs in the second inning and the fact most of the Washington players hit the ball squarely at somebody, tripped the Senators 3-1 in the traditional opener in the United States capital Monday.

There were 43,022 fans on hand including the president, whose first and only pitch was low and wide.

The other American League teams open the long campaign today.

OTHERS OPEN TODAY

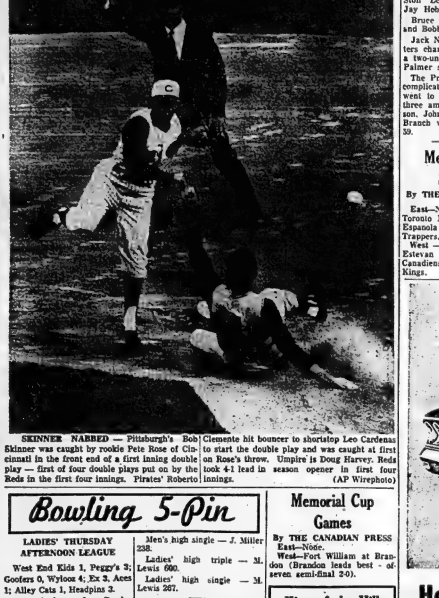
New York Yankees begin their quest for a fourth straight flag at Kansas City, Missouri for a time this spring they had an injury list almost as long as the roster, only Roger Maris, hampered by a pulled left leg muscle, and pitching ace Whitey Ford, who has a sore left shoulder, will miss the opener. Ralph Terry, 23-12 last year, will pitch for the Yankees against Diego Segui, 8-8.



Ray Herbert, 20-9, will pitch for Chicago White Sox against Jim Bunning, 19-10, at Detroit. Bill Monbouquette, 15-13, will be on the mound for Boston Red Sox against Ken McBride, 11-8, in Los Angeles, and Jim Grant, 7-10, will hurl for Cleveland Indians against Camilo Pascual, 20-11, for the home Minnesota twins, in the other openers.

The Senators and Orioles will be idle.

Lefty Steve Barber won the opener for the Orioles, but he had his troubles. The fastballer, who was in the U.S. Army much of last season and then got sick when he came back full time, was not sharp.

All the Baltimore scoring was packed into a second - inning burst. Against loser Don Rudolph, Jim Gentile led off with a homer over the fence in right field, Al Smith drew a walk, and Boog Powell homered to the same place. The Orioles collected only four more hits.

Washington, presenting an almost completely new cast, got its run in the fifth inning, when Larry Osborne singled and Don Leppert doubled him to third. He scored on an infield out.

SKINNER NABBED — Pittsburgh's Bob Skinner was caught by rookie Pete Rose of Cincinnati in the front end of a first inning double play — first of four double plays put on by the Reds in the first four innings. Clemente hit bouncer to shortstop Leo Cardenas to start the double play and was caught at first by umpire Harry Harvey. Reds took 4-1 lead in season opener in first four innings. (AP Wirephoto)

Negotiations in Progress

Bruins Hope To Land Boomer

BOSTON (AP)—The Boston Bruins are trying to land Bernie (Boom Boom) Geoffrion from Montreal.

The negotiations for the 32-year-old National Hockey League star were in progress Monday between Bruins general manager Lynn Patrick and Sam Pollock, chief scout of the Montreal club.

Leo Monahan of the Boston Record American says Geoffrion and the Montreal management "are mutually disenchanted" and that other clubs including Chicago and Toronto also are after Boom Boom.

Monahan further reported that Boston and Montreal came "within a whisker" of making a deal for Geoffrion last June.

"Of course we want Geoffrion," Patrick said. "But the Bruins can't afford to give up veterans like "Johnny Bucyk,

Gary Player Tops Pros, Amateurs

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP)—Gary Player of South Africa fired a 66 Monday for individual honors in the Ryder Cup Pro-Am golf tournament.

The 66 was the lowest score on the 6,942-yard East Lake course since it was reconstructed three years ago.

Player won top prize of $750 in the pro division, plus $450 for his team's second-place tie in the pro-am.

Following him with 68s were Stan Leonard of Vancouver, Jay Hebert and Dave Ragan.

Bruce Crampton of Australia and Bobby Nichols scored 69s.

Jack Nicklaus, the new Masters champion, wound up with a two-under-par 70 and Arnold Palmer shot a 71.

The Pro-Am honors, under a complicated handicap system, went to pro Julius Boros and three amateurs, Charlie Harrison. John Shea and William Branch with a team score of 59.

The Saskatchewan Junior Hockey League Bruins won the first game of the series 6-2 over defending champion Edmonton Oil Kings of the Central Alberta Hockey League. There was no scoring in the first period of the Monday game, played before 3,500 fans, and Bruins went ahead 1-0 in the second.

Skip Krake scored the first Estevan goal and Glen Sather scored the Oil Kings goal.

Joe Watson set up the winning goal when he carried to the Oil Kings blue line and passed to Frank Hicks on the boards. Hincks slipped the puck in front of the net and Boehm scored.

Edmonton picked up 12 of 19 penalties.

Vatican Paper Says 'Useless Massacre'

Probes Start Into Ring Fatalities Rash

NEW YORK (AP)—Another Australian boxer was stricken after a ring beating and was in a hospital with a mild concussion today, as investigations into the recent rash of boxing deaths were pushed on several fronts.

The Vatican newspaper L'Osservatore Romano also began a new attack against boxing, calling it a "means of useless massacre."

The boxer, Australian bantamweight champion Billy Males, was taken to St. George's Hospital in Sydney, where his condition was listed as not serious.

Males began vomiting after he lost a 12-round decision to Gene Aragon of the Philippines.

Two Australian boxers, pro Norman Smith and amateur Enzo Barelli, died of ring injuries last week, along with 19-year-old Francisco Velasquez, a Puerto Rican in the U.S. Army, who died after an amateur bout in Carbondale Pa.

Velasquez death was the fifth of the year, including featherweight champion Davey Moore, who died March 25, four days after he lost his featherweight championship to Sugar Ramos in Los Angeles.

SCHOOL DROPS BOXING

In the aftermath of the death in Pennsylvania, Rev. Joseph T. Conboy, moderator of athletics at St. Michael's School for Boys at Hohan Heights said the school has dropped boxing.

A 17-year-old St. Michael's boy, Earl Johnson, landed the blow that knocked out Velasquez. The New York Post quoted Father Conboy as saying that Johnson will never fight again.

"He said to me that every time he opens his eyes he has a vision of the fellow falling," Father Conboy told The Post. "He says he will never get it out of his mind."

The army said it will investigate the death.

Nevada, an active boxing state in recent years, also is investigating the sport. Governor Grant Sawyer said Monday that he will appoint a citizen's committee to investigate boxing, but said he did not intend to ask for its abolition at this time.

The governor of neighboring California, Edmund Brown, has called for an end to boxing there.

The Vatican newspaper's blast was one of a recent series. It, like the others, was signed by Raimondo Manzini, chief editor.

"A type of competition which in theory was intended to be chivalrous and legitimate," the editorial said, "continues to be a means of useless massacre."

The editorial said that defenders of boxing contend that it is possible to safeguard the lives of boxers.

"This supposition is denied by amateur boxers whose death can not be attributed to the beastility and duration of a professional bout."

Professional boxing, the newspaper added, is "intrinsically contrary to moral law."

Here are the reasons why Motor Trend Magazine chose the 1963 Rambler as the "Car of the Year"

The coveted Motor Trend magazine "Car of the Year" award was won this year by the entire line of 1963 Ramblers. The popular Classic 6—the powerful Ambassador V8 and the compact American 6. The award was given to Rambler "for outstanding design achievement and engineering leadership." The panel of automotive experts took 26 pages in the February issue of Motor Trend magazine to outline the reasons for their choice of Rambler. The following are excerpts from their remarks to show you why Rambler is "Car of the Year" for 1963.

1 Unisize Construction "... this latest design represents a real advancement and the biggest single reason we chose Rambler Car of the Year. Not only does this new construction method save approximately 150 pounds over the older design, but it results in a unit so strong it'll take punishment longer and naturally hold its resale value."

2 Handling and Driving "... pleasingly light and responsive under all cornering conditions ... a good boulevard and highway ride. There isn't any pitch or choppiness noticeable even on rough roads."

3 Styling "Progress in design is the theme of Motor Trend's Car of the Year award. American Motors' Ramblers are this year's best examples of outstanding design achievement. New styling is based on lean, clean lines that are apparent from almost any angle."

4 Interior Room and Comfort "The lengthened wheelbase has given more room inside ... and this means increased driver/passenger comfort. The interior offers plenty of leg room. Reclining bucket seats with headrests are options well worth the extra expenditure."

5 Economy "There won't be many cars of this size delivering more fuel economy than the basic-engined Classic."

6 Value and Features "Quality has always been one of American Motors' largest selling points and continues to be on the new models. In addition to the long-recognized owner appreciation features inherent in all Ramblers, the factory has doubled the new-car warranty to 24 months or 24,000 miles.

In summing up, all we can add is that it looks like the new Rambler will be an even better buy than it has been in previous years."

That's what the experts say. They are echoing what Rambler owners have been proudly claiming for years. To prove yourself Rambler's exceptional value see your Rambler dealer soon. Take a test drive in the "Car of the Year"—the 1963 Rambler.

Income Tax Explained

Income Tax Department

Many widows and widowers who are left with children to support fail to claim all the exemptions to which they are entitled. This particularly applies in the case of a widow being left to support a family. Many widows are of the opinion that as the husband claimed the children on his return up to the time of his death in the year, she would not be allowed to claim them, although she supported them from the date of her husband's death until the end of that year.

The fact that the children were her dependants at the end of the year, allows her to claim them for the full exemption. If there were two children, she should claim the equivalent to married status ($1000) on one child and the ordinary exemption for the other. If she employed a housekeeper to look after the children while she was employed, she could claim another $300 for the child on which she took the married equivalent. To do this she must show the housekeepers' name in the space provided for that purpose. The housekeeper must be employed full time. Leaving the children in a day nursery or in the care of a neighbor will not qualify the taxpayer for the additional child's exemption. The housekeeper must be employed full time in her home. The above also applies to a widower. The equivalent to married status may be claimed on one child, if the children are boarded with strangers. The basic requirement is that the children must be supported by the parent and such parent must have complete custody and control.

Any inquries will be answered if a self-addressed and stamped (5 cents) envelope is enclosed.

Question 1 — I am a widow with one son going to school in the city. I buy his clothes and school books, but he is boarded free by my brother. Can I claim him? If so, for how much?

Answer — Your son can only be claimed by you. There is no provision in the Income Tax Act, whereby your brother could claim a nephew. You are entitled to $1000 (that is the equivalent to married status) for him, plus $1000 for yourself making you a total exemption of $2000.

Question 2 — My wife and son 17 were killed in an accident in January 1962. I have no other children. What exemption can I claim?

Answer — As you supported them at the time becoming deceased, you claim them for all of 1962. Total exemption $2,500. In succeeding years you have only a single person's claim.

French Foreign Legion Has Few Prospects of Fight

By FINLAY CAMPBELL

MARSEILLES (Reuters) — For the first time since it was founded 131 years ago, the French Foreign Legion has no battles to fight—and few prospects of any in the future.

The main occupation of this fighting corps, which has distinguished itself in battlefields as far apart as Mexico, the Crimea, Indochina and northern Norway, is to set up new headquarters at Aubagne, near this French Mediterranean port.

In addition to renovating and improving the camp, the legionnaires have transferred the library, records and museum from former headquarters at Sidi-Bel-Abbes, in western Algeria, to Aubagne.

FUTURE IN DOUBT

Many rumors have since circulated here as to the future of the legion.

When King Louis - Philippe established the legion in 1831 the decree setting it up defined its mission as "to serve outside the kingdom." When Algeria, last of France's big possessions, became independent last July, it looked as though this mission no longer existed.

In addition, the first parachute regiment of the legion was implicated in the attempted "generals' putsch" in Algiers in April, 1961.

The officers were disciplined, the regiment dissolved and the men absorbed into other regiments. With at least part of its legion thus identified with the abortive "keep Algeria French" movement, rumors began to circulate that it would be disbanded.

However, Armed Forces Minister Pierre Messmar recently told Parliament: "We do not envisage dissolving the legion. The personnel of the legion will be adapted to new missions."

In addition to the units now at Aubagne, there are others in Corsica, Madagascar, French Somaliland and a few still in Algeria.

LOSSES HEAVY

During the indochinese war, the legion was at its peak strength of nearly 40,000. About 14,000 legionnaires were killed in that campaign. Their losses in the Algerian war are given at about 2,000.

Officially, the present strength of the legion is secret. But officers say that an estimate of 19,000 men is "not far from the truth."

Some 40 per cent are Germans, with a high percentage of Hungarians and Yugoslavs. The remainder are Scandinavians, Italians, Spaniards and other Europeans with a handful of English and Americans.

Although officially Frenchmen are not accepted, hundreds serve in the legion by posing as Swiss or Belgians. Once the recruit is never asked to prove his identity.

About 1,000 men a month apply to join the legion.

Explanation of Ins and Outs Of Nuclear Strategy, Arms May Take Out Confusion

By DAVE McINTOSH

OTTAWA (CP)—To the layman trying to comprehend the ins and outs of nuclear strategy and weapons, the language of military and political experts in this field may well appear jiggery-pokery designed to confuse.

The following is an attempt to provide an abbreviated nuclear lexicon and an appreciation of how the West and the Soviet Union compare in nuclear strength.

Nuclear weapons: The range in destructive power from small charges equivalent to Second World War non-nuclear bombs to a 100-megaton giant equivalent of 100,000,000 tons of TNT, plus radioactive fallout.

Strategic nuclear weapons: The big nuclear bombs for long-range attack, whether carried by bombers or missiles. Offensive nuclear weapons mean the same thing.

Defensive nuclear weapons: Small nuclear weapons designed for defence only, usually against the bomber. Examples are the Bomare anti - aircraft missile and Voodoo jet interceptor which would go into action only when the hostile bombers were overhead. Neither weapon can reach the Soviet Union or anywhere near it.

CAN'T REACH MOSCOW

Tactical nuclear weapons: These lie in a category somewhere between offensive and defensive nuclear weapons but are usually considered by the military as defensive. An example is the RCAF CF-104 low-level jet bomber in Europe. It could not reach Moscow, with a nuclear bomb but it could attack a Communist missile base 300 miles from its own station.

Conventional weapons: Armament similar to that used in the Second World War and Korean War — in short, non-nuclear. However, some experts class all weapons less than strategic nuclear weapons as conventional.

Nuclear carriers or vehicles: The means of delivering nuclear warheads, that is, a missile, a bomber or a ground launcher.

Nuclear deterrent: A military force (bombers, missiles, etc.) thought powerful enough to deter a Soviet decision to launch a nuclear strike because he would know in advance he would get a retaliatory nuclear blow. Anything that adds to the strength of the deterrent, such as a protective air defence system, is considered part of the deterrent itself.

KEPLY MATCHES ATTACK

Graduated deterrence: Employment of only sufficient forces to counter an enemy's military moves and thus prevent "escalation" — broadening—into bigger war. For example, employing a massive nuclear strike to counter an attack by a conventional army brigade would be like trying to open an egg with a steam shovel—and would invite a nuclear counter-blow.

National independent nuclear forces: A nuclear force under the political control of a single country. Such forces now are limited to the U.S., Soviet Union and Britain. France will soon join this group and possibly Communist China and Israel in a few years.

NATO nuclear force: Some members of NATO, led by the U.S., now are attempting to establish a NATO nuclear force of ships carrying strategic nuclear weapons. The main object is to give European members of NATO, especially West Germany, a larger voice in the control and use of offensive nuclear weapons and thus prevent proliferation of the nuclear club. Control of such a force, as well as other details, has not yet been worked out.

NATO AGREEMENTS

Other nuclear forces: Seven NATO countries—Canada is not one of them—have signed bilateral agreements with the U.S. These agreements provide that the forces of these countries will not develop and, no cost with nuclear weapons in a war emergency or the sole decision to employ them is U.S. prerogative. Up to that time, the nuclear warheads remain in U.S. custody and ownership. Canada cannot obtain nuclear warheads for Bomarc, Voodoo, CF-104 or Honest John Artillery rocket unless it signs such an agreement with the U.S. Example: Should Canada could obtain nuclear warheads from the U.S. is covered under an agreement signed in 1959, but so far Canada has not taken the further step of signing a specific custody-and-control agreement under which the warheads would be made available.

Conventional forces: NATO still has a goal of 30 divisions for the defence of Western Europe. It actually has some 26 divisions. The U.S. is trying to persuade its NATO allies in Europe to build up conventional strength as a way of improving graduated deterrence. Some nuclear carriers can be used for conventional carriers—the Voodoo is an example. But a conventional ship armed as a nuclear carrier is considered vastly uneconomic as a conventional carrier.

SUBMARINE EFFECTIVE

Now, how do Western—in effect, American—and Soviet nuclear forces compare?

Both the U.S. and Russia have long-range manned bombers and nuclear submarines fitted with missiles to deliver nuclear warheads. Britain and France so far have only bombers for this purpose but Britain plans to have nuclear submarines for missile launchings by 1970 and France is developing long-range missiles.

The submarine now is considered the most effective means of delivering strategic bombs because it is all but invulnerable in the earth's oceans. Fixed missile bases can be hit and bombers can be caught on the ground.

World nuclear strategy could be radically altered by one of two factors: Development of a means of accurate long-range detection of submerged submarines; or development of an anti-missile missile (or counter-missile). Russia has claimed the latter. The West believes Russia has the technology to do this but that it hasn't an actual counter-missile system.

U.S. HAS MORE ICBMs

The Institute of Statistical Studies in London, a private organization, has estimated that Russia has 75 operational intercontinental missiles compared with 450 to 500 for the U.S.

North American Air Defence Command estimates that Russia has 1,000 bombers that could reach North American targets. The main Russian types are (NATO code-names) the Badger, Bison, Bear and Blinder. The Bear has a range of 9,000 miles and the Blinder a maximum speed of nearly 1,500 miles an hour. All can be refuelled in flight.

The U.S. Air Force Strategic Air Command has some 1,600 bombers, 800 B-52 jets, 600 B-52 heavy bombers and about 100 supersonic B-58 Hustler jets. SAC also has more than 1,000 tanker planes to refuel bombers in flight.

SAC has such intercontinental missiles as the Atlas and Titan and, more important, the Minuteman, which can be fired in 32 seconds.

By the end of 1964, SAC will have 800 Minuteman missiles installed in the U.S. in buried concrete-and-steel silos which probably could survive anything but a direct hit.

BUILD SUB FLEET

The U.S. Navy now has nine nuclear submarines—each carries 16 Polaris long-four missiles—and is building a total of 41. About the highest current estimate of Soviet nuclear submarines is 20, but Russia may build 10 times as many.

Besides these, there are dozens of types of missiles, depending on their purpose, range and the like, with literally hundreds of different names. Most missiles are designed to carry nuclear warheads but a few are conventional, such as naval torpedoes. New missiles are under constant development as old ones become obsolete.

By 1966, it is anticipated, the U.S. will have 1,700 intercontinental missiles. Today, the total strategic nuclear capacity of the U.S. alone is conservatively estimated at more than 5,000 warheads.

In addition, Britain has a bomber force, though it representa only some two per cent of the total Western nuclear strategic strength.

U.S. CAUTIOUS

The U.S. does not intend to launch any nuclear blow at Russia on the strength of radar reports of any Soviet attack. It plans to "ride out" any nuclear bombardment before unleashing a nuclear counter-strike. The object is to avoid any nuclear war by miscalculation or accident.

In recent months, U.S. Defence Secretary Robert McNamara has enunciated a strategy of hitting military targets only. In other words, the U.S. would not "take out" Soviet cities unless Russia bombarded American cities.

SAC has a total of 80 bases around the world. Some are small.

Only in three countries outside the U.S. are there missiles aimed at Russia. These are intermediate-range missiles—with a reach between 1,500 and 1,700 miles—and are becoming obsolete.

In Britain are 60 such missiles and they are scheduled to be removed this year. There are 15 Jupiter missiles in Turkey and 30 in Italy. They are to be dismantled soon because they have been superseded by longer-range missiles in the U.S. The missiles in Britain, Turkey and Italy have been under joint control of the U.S. and the country concerned.

HAS NO CHOICE

Britain attempted to prolong the life of RAF Bomber Command by adopting the U.S. bomber-borne, air - to - ground missile Skybolt with a projected range of 1,000 miles. However, the U.S. cancelled the Skybolt and instead offered Britain the Polaris. Britain had no choice but to agree as long as it was determined to maintain its own independent nuclear deterrent.

In the meantime, France has embarked on establishment of its own nuclear force—"force de frappe"—on the grounds that the U.S. some day might not be willing to hit Russia with nuclear weapons as a means to defend Europe when the U.S. itself, as a consequence, might be obliterated.

However, France does have a nuclear agreement with the U.S. by which French forces in West Germany would be supplied with American nuclear warheads in an emergency.

Expect Only 28 Whoopers To Fly North

WASHINGTON (AP)—This is the migration season for the rare whooping crane and the big question is: How many will be flying north?

The U.S. Interior department said Saturday that as far as can be determined, 28 of the big birds will start from Texas for the nesting area in Wood Buffalo Park near Great Slave Lake in Canada's Northwest Territories, some 2,500 miles away. They usually leave in small groups over a period of six or seven weeks.

A total of 28 would be four less than the number counted to have made the successful southern migration last fall and 10 fewer than the record 38 counted as having started the northward migration last year.

Fish and wildlife service officials said 38 aerial surveys of the cranes were made in the area of the Aransas national wildlife refuge on the Gulf coast between Oct. 18, when the first returning whoopers were sighted, on March 25.

The build-up was gradual, until a peak number of 32 cranes was noted on Dec. 7 and again on Jan. 5.

But none of the counts since mid-February has shown more than 29 cranes and most recent checks accounted for only 28.

Cuban Girl Sees Day Of Liberation

By GEORGE ARFELD

HAVANA (AP)—"Soon all of the countries of Latin America will be free, don't you think so?" the elegantly dressed teenager asked a group of Africans and Europeans at a diplomatic reception.

Threats were diplomatically cleared.

"And it looks as if Venezuela will liberate herself soon and start building socialism . . . Things are really hot there," she added triumphantly.

In her elegant sheath gown of beige lace, with her pretty round face meticulously made up, she could have passed for an idle maiden dabbling in international affairs to break the ice.

Yet she meant every word. At 18 she is a prudent and staunch supporter of the "new, socialist Cuba."

She works eight hours a day in a government office, then often spends half the night attending rallies. Next week at the office building, a burp gun strapped over her militia uniform.

LOOKS TO RUSSIA

She is certain the Cuban revolution will be picked up by other countries of the hemisphere. She feels that everything Russia does is good and the United States is to blame for all difficulties encountered in Cuban life.

Is she typical of all pro-Castro youth? Roughly generalizing on attitudes of the thousands of her age, the answer is yes. To them, Fidel Castro, a premier in his middle 30s has opened a new field, involving them directly in the life of the country. They participate in the monolithic, slogan - filled politics, shoulder guns, drive heavy tractors and receive wide publicity in the press.

The government subsidizes all sports and encourages youngsters to join political organizations such as the Young Pioneers of the Union of Communist Youths.

Complementing these are the schools of revolutionary instruction, where the student is thoroughly exposed to the intricacies of Marxism - Leninism and its materialistic theories.

DOUBLE CLASSROOMS

Castro's government claims to have more than doubled the number of classrooms on the island in the last four years.

Government officials say more than 70,000 students of all ages are working toward different certificates and degrees under government scholarships. In the Havana area they are working in the homes of exiles and study elementary and high school courses and also languages and technology. All receive revolutionary instruction and the boys are taught how to handle rifles and drive jeeps. The government pays for uniforms, lodging, meals and books.

Thousands of other Cubans study in Communist countries.

Winter Program For Queen's Is Announced

KINGSTON — Spring may be in the air but the extension department of Queen's University is already planning its 1963-64 Winter Extension program that this year attracted a record 2,234 students.

Reasoning behind the unusually early announcement is to allow prospective summer school students an opportunity to plan courses that would mesh with their winter sales.

Each winter a limited number of tutorial classes are offered in Eastern Ontario area cities and towns. These are in addition to a large series of correspondence courses offered by Queen's. Tutorials, taught by regular professors who travel to the area centres every two weeks will be offered next winter in Oshawa, Port Hope, Belleville, Peterborough, Kingston and Brockville.

Courses in English, philosophy and psychology will be available. Classes in introductory English are planned for Belleville and Port Hope; a Shakespeare course in Oshawa and Brockville; and a course in contemporary literature in Peterborough and Belleville.

A new approach to tutorial teaching will be tried out in Kingston, where the lectures in Canadian literature will be given weekly on Monday evenings and Tuesday will be equivalent to the regular three lectures a week given intramurally at points at the University, and will require no supplementary correspondence work to complete the credit program.

All tutorials will begin the second week in September and run through until March 1964. They are open to anyone who has the prerequisite standing in the subject.

THE BARD WAS BORING — Detroit-born Martha Henry who has three roles at the 1963 Shakespearean Festival in Stratford, Ont, confesses she was once "bored with Shakespeare." She will play Cressida in Troilus and Cressida, Luciana in A Comedy of Errors and a courtesan in Timon of Athens. (CP Photo)

Schoolgirl Bored by Bard, Now She Plays Parts

MONTREAL (CP) — Actress Martha Henry confesses she was once "bored with Shakespeare."

It's a good thing she got over it. This summer the 25-year-old Detroit-born actress will get her fill of the Bard.

At the Shakespearean Festival in Stratford, Ont., she will play Cressida in Troilus and Cressida, Luciana in A Comedy of Errors and a courtesan in Timon of Athens.

And for a change of pace she will be the understudy for Roxane in Cyrano de Bergerac.

Stratford is just one more move in the nomadic life led by Martha and her actor-husband Donnelly Rhodes Henry.

Married less than a year, they have already set up light housekeeping in Montreal, Stratford and Toronto. And after Stratford they'll pack again and head west for a season with the Manitoba Theatre Centre in Winnipeg.

While playing in Leon Major's production of The Enchanted at Toronto's Crest Theatre this winter, Miss Henry lived in a hotel. But even in their Montreal apartment there's an atmosphere of impermanence. "I still haven't gotten around to putting up curtains," she says.

MUST TAKE BOOKS

This sort of uncertain existence doesn't bother Miss Henry as long as she has her collection of books with her.

"Even when I live in a hotel, I take along a few of my books. I need them to get comfortable. If I'm not comfortable I can't work."

Miss Henry's progress in the theatre is a bit unusual. While actresses are constantly looking to the United States for a stage to display their talents, she moved in the opposite direction.

She first enrolled in drama at Carnegie Institute of Technology in Pittsburgh and spent three seasons in summer stock in Leamington, Ont., before deciding to give up her American contacts for a try in Toronto theatre.

She found steady work with the Crest Theatre and CBC television in Toronto and, after studying at the National Theatre School in Montreal, where her husband is in his final year, was taken on at Stratford.

"In terms of theatre," she says, "I consider myself a Canadian."

At the Park

WONDER FILM OF YEAR OPENS HERE THURSDAY

The wonder film of the year featuring the mightiest man in the world comes Thursday to the Park Theatre for its first Belleville showing.

It's American International's "Samson and the Seven Miracles of the World," in ColorScope, starring Gordon Scott of Tarzan fame in the role created by Yoko Tani as the lovely Oriental Princess, and a cast of thousands.

"Samson and the Seven Miracles of the World" is film excitement at its best—taking best with muscleman Scott performing the most stupendous feats of strength ever seen on the screen as he single-handedly does battle with Tartar hordes and fights the evil machinations of Oriental madmen.

You'll thrill with Samson as he kills a savage tiger with his bare hands, uproots a mighty tree, halts a charging chariot, moves mountains and causes an earthquake to rock a great city in his fight to win the hand of a beautiful maiden.

Add beautiful color on a wide scope screen and the pulse-stirring music of the great Les Baxter and you have a thrilling picture. Picture entertainment treat, the wonder film of the year, "Samson and the Seven Miracles of the World."

A special matinee Good Friday starts at 1:30 p.m.

LANGUAGES HELP

Movie producer-director Anatole Litvak knows his five languages a great help when working with casts of actors from various countries.

AT THE PARK — Samson breaks from bonds — Gordon Scott Samson breaks from prison in scene from American International's ColorScope adventure spectacle, "Samson and the Seven Miracles of the World" opening Thursday at the Park Theatre for its first Belleville showing. Yoko Tani co-stars. A special matinee Good Friday at 1.30 p.m.

Astrological Forecast

FOR APRIL 10th

By SYDNEY OMARR

Aries (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19): Moderation best course. No violent statements, actions. Avoid jumping to conclusions. Steady pace necessary, in mental and physical activities. Check legal, financial details.

Taurus (Apr. 20 to May 20): Chance now to test some ideas. But don't demand immediate acceptance. Go slow with understanding that others also have pride. No one likes admitting he was wrong. Take time to plan.

Gemini (May 21 to June 21): Lending a helping hand pays dividends. You may feel you are wasting valuable time. But inconsclence be your guide. You will be well repaid in inward satisfaction. Help boost underdog!

Cancer (June 22 to July 21): You could not ask for more in proper timing than today's. Make your move! Ask for favor, opportunity. Make bid for progress. Your day. Take advantage of it!

Leo (July 22 to Aug. 21): Some conditions must, for the present, be accepted. Know this: base actions in wisdom. Avoid tendency to rush, argue, push or demand. Get thoughts in order concerning associates.

Virgo (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22): Check letters. Make sure you have everything correct. Don't mail anything in anger. Take your time during journey. Tendency is to do everything at once, but easy does it.

Libra (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): Check so-called bargains. Make sure you get what you really desire. Others are super-salesmen today. Fine if they sell you what you need. But ask questions. Don't buy until right time.

Scorpio (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): Moon in your sign, means stress on personality, inner feeling, impression you make on others. If you get down, show what you can do. Move with maturity, confidence, humor.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): Need for feeling - - - and for giving love. Your judgment about family member may apt to be correct. Strive for greater understanding. Especially where "secrets" are concerned.

Capricorn (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): Ideas can be set into motion. Friends help. But you must make decisions known. Explain clearly. Communicate: write, read, telephone. No time to bury yourself in gloom or despair. Perk up!

Announce New Healing Substance... Shrinks Piles, Checks Itch

Exclusive healing substance proven to shrink hemorrhoids ... and repair damaged tissue.

A renowned research institute has found a unique healing substance with the ability to shrink hemorrhoids and relieve pain, relieve itching and discomfort in minutes and speeds up healing of the injured, inflamed tissue.

One hemorrhoidal case history after another reported "very striking improvement." Pain was promptly and gently relieved ... actual reduction or retraction (shrinking) took place.

Among these case histories were a variety of hemorrhoidal conditions. Relief even occurred in cases of long standing, and most important of all, results were so thorough that this improvement was sustained over a period of many months.

This was accomplished with a new healing substance (Bio-Dyne) which relieves pain, helps injured cells and stimulates growth of new tissue. Bio-Dyne is made in ointment and suppository form called Preparation H.

In addition to actually shrinking hemorrhoids, Preparation H lubricates and soothes elimination is less painful. It helps prevent infection which is a principal cause of hemorrhoids.

Just ask your druggist for Preparation H Suppositories or Preparation H Ointment (with a special applicator).

Satisfaction guaranteed or your money refunded.

Heart Surgeons, Specialists Move in Against Disease Called Angina Pectoris

By W. R. WHEATLE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The football star who poses a triple-threat attack by running, kicking or passing has something of a counterpart in the attack of coronary artery disease—the disease of all three major coronary arteries. They are the two main left arteries and the single right artery.

Just as a football coach fashions a defence to meet the attack, so heart surgeons and specialists have moved in against coronary artery disease, sometimes loosely called angina pectoris, which actually is a manifestation of the disease.

Dr. Arthur Vineberg, head of cardiac surgery at Royal Victoria Hospital in Montreal, now has pioneered and developed his third major surgical procedure. It is aimed at the third major threat, the right coronary artery and the resultant insufficiency of a blood supply reaching the right ventricle or right pumping chamber of the heart. The newest surgical procedure is dealt with in technical detail by Dr. Vineberg and his co-workers—Dr. Roque Pifarre and Dr. Yutaka Kato—in the Canadian Medical Journal.

VERSATILE TISSUE

This operation utilizes the greater omentum, an apron-like tissue within the abdominal cavity. It has the happy faculty, through nature, of moving around within the abdominal cavity like a trouble-shooter and fastening itself with curative powers on trouble spots.

It was Dr. Vineberg's theory that a freed piece of omentum, graft, wrapped about the heart, would seek and obtain a blood supply and set up blood-carrying communications to the heart muscle from neighboring tissues. The theory was proved correct.

Dr. Vineberg's earliest surgical procedure, used successfully since 1950, was the internal mammary artery implant. This particular chest artery, which always carries a good blood supply, is placed within the the heart muscle in order to bypass diseased arteries and revascularize the heart, providing it with new blood vessels.

(This operation has been used in more than 125 cases with less than three per cent mortality and more than 70 per cent good results.)

IMPLANT LIMITED

But from experience, the Journal article states, it was found that when all three major arteries are diseased, the internal mammary artery implant was not sufficient to maintain the life of both left and right ventricles. It has been successful when only the left coronary arteries are diseased.

This hastened the search for methods of providing new blood vessels that would be of value to all three major arteries at the same time.

Dr. Vineberg meanwhile, had also introduced application of the Ivalon sponge, a mesh-like plastic. It is placed next to the heart as a means of directing new blood-vessel communications into the heart muscle. The Ivalon sponge has also been found particularly successful in the treatment of large ventricles. But it has been difficult to apply the sponge to the right ventricle.

Dr. Vineberg then gave thought to the omentum, deducing that if it were detached from its abdominal blood supply it might form an active bridge between aorta (main body artery), myocardium (heart muscle) and pericardium (heart covering) so that vessels from the root of the aorta and from the pericardium could reach the myocardium.

WORKED ON ANIMALS

Exhaustive experiments were carried out on animals. They showed that an effective communications bridge would be formed. Further studies showed that these vascular communications persisted.

The Journal article reports on two human cases treated by the combined internal mammary artery implant and the free omental graft. All three major coronary arteries were diseased in both patients.

(The authors in a footnote report that since the article was written, three more patients have been operated upon and appear to be doing well.)

The first case was Mr. F. O., 56, a factory supervisor, operated on Dec. 6, 1962, at Royal Victoria Hospital. He had been suffering increasing periods of anginal pain. Exercise tolerance had been reduced to 200 feet from 500 yards.

A coronary arteriogram showed the right coronary completely obstructed; the left open part of the way but narrowed at the juncture of the anterior descending and circumflex vessels. The anterior descending branch of the left artery appeared as a tiny, thread-like vessel.

WRAPPED AROUND HEART

The internal mammary artery, with an open intercostal (between-the-ribs) branch, was placed within the heart muscle. The diaphragm was opened and a large piece of abdominal omentum removed and attached to the ascending aorta.

MORE

The omental graft was insufficient to surround the heart completely. One portion was wrapped around the right ventricle; the other portion around the left ventricle. The serous (watery) layer of the pericardium was removed and a fat-pad placed across the omental graft and fixed.

The patient was discharged from the hospital Dec. 29, 1962, 23 days after the operation. He appeared quite well and a follow-up indicates he is still well, the Journal article reports.

The second case cited is that of Mr. R. P., 50, of Ottawa, operated on at Queen Mary Veterans' Hospital, Montreal, Dec. 10, 1962.

Indication of coronary artery disease came in 1955 when he had his first myocardial infarction (formation of scar tissue in the heart muscle because of the lack of blood supply). At the time of admission he had chest pains, radiating into both arms, after walking on block slowly.

OPERATION SUCCEEDED

Coronary arterial x - rays showed both the right coronary and anterior descending arteries were blocked and the patient was living on a small opening in the circumflex artery.

Surgical procedure was similar to that in the first case. Both the implant and the omental graft were carried out, and in this instance a large portion of the omentum was wrapped completely about the heart.

The Journal article states that a recent note from his wife reports he appears to be quite well.

The authors conclude:

"This is the first operative procedure by which it is possible to bring extra-cardiac blood to the right side of the heart. It is too soon to draw any conclusions from the two human cases reported.

"It can be said that no detectable harm has resulted from wrapping the entire heart in a free omental graft and that there is every hope the operation will be as successful in man as it appears to be in the animal."

One of Every 10 Home Fires Begins in Heating Unit

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP)—Things a columnist might never know if we didn't open his mail:

Household hint: With spring in sight, now is the time to plan to have your furnace checked. . . . One of every 10 home fires begins in a defective heating unit.

Havens for the stingy: Greece and Japan share one distinction . . . they are among the few countries left in the world where a cab driver doesn't expect a tip. . . .

Our question is asinine: "Man have a much better time of it than women; for one thing, they marry later; for another thing, they die earlier."—H. L. Mencken.

Perfection: In this let age it is hard to think a thing can't be made better but experts say there has been no notable improvement of the violin since Antonio Stradivarius died more than 225 years ago.

Sign on a truck: "To avoid a traffic tie-up, keep calm, please pass on the left."

Superstition: The next time you get a piece of cake with her the ancients believed that if you whispered "the secret word" to a pearl it would call forth a spirit that would make you possessor of all earthly happiness and success. . . . The wife isn't happy, it's simply because she hasn't got the word.

Those good old days: At the turn of the century bathrooms were so scarce that families that had them often rented them to residents of nearby boarding houses. . . . The going rate was 27 cents a bath, including soap and towels.

Light sleepers: We're not sure just what this proves, but phone operators at the Hotel Edison here report that it takes fewer rings to awaken women than men guests.

It was Alphonse Karr, French novelist, who observed: "Some people are always grumbling because roses have thorns; I am thankful that thorns have roses."

GIVE FERTILITY

Iraq's two great rivers—the Tigris and the Euphrates—have long made the country one of the most fertile areas of the desert-plagued Middle East.

France To Have Its Own Nuclear Force By 1964

De Gaulle Keeps Open Door to NATO Link

WASHINGTON (AP)—French President de Gaulle is reported holding the door open for continual strategic co-operation between France's projected nuclear striking force and the forces of the other NATO allies.

Qualified sources in Paris report French atomic bombs and supersonic atomic bombers will begin rolling along production lines this fall and be ready to take to the air by the end of the year.

De Gaulle's attitude on an Allied nuclear force and on other issues has emerged during the last few days in easing somewhat the crisis in NATO and has raised hopes for Kennedy administration of avoiding a worsening split.

President Kennedy has an opportunity today to survey the NATO situation in a national security council meeting with his diplomatic and military advisers.

MEETS WITH RUSK

State Secretary Rusk conferred for 70 minutes Monday with de Gaulle. It was the first such high level U.S.-French conference since de Gaulle blocked Britain's entry into the Common Market last January and rejected the President Kennedy's offer of Polaris missiles.

Rusk's meeting with de Gaulle was described in diplomatic reports to Washington as cordial. The two men covered a variety of subjects ranging from the Far East to Cuba.

De Gaulle's attitude now is interpreted here as reflecting desire on his part to avoid unnecessary irritants, despite basic policy differences in French-U.S. relationships.

The French leader is reported to stand by a statement he made at a press conference in Pakistan that France would not refuse technological or strategic co-operation with its allies when it has developed its own atomic force. But that force is not yet in being and de Gaulle reportedly has pressed time too soon to undertake any specific commitments.

TEST BOMBERS

In Paris, sources said French scientists have perfected prototypes of an operational bomb and successfully tested prototypes of Mirage IV bombers. They said France now has atomic hydrogen bombs and missiles in the operational stage by 1967.

It was understood in Washington that de Gaulle made clear to several Allied officials in recent weeks that he is not opposed to a joint European multilateral nuclear force which the United States has offered to other European allies, including Italy, and West Germany.

In addition, the de Gaulle government has recently advocated a reduction of tariffs by the European Common Market countries. This would be a step toward scaling so far as they are understood to go along with U.S. tariff-cutting policies.

Grills' Lead Over Temple Now 71 Votes

The narrow margin which Lee C. Grills, Progressive Conservative, holds over Robert Temple, Liberal, is fluctuating, as the result of rechecks.

Originally Mr. Grills' margin was reported as 45 votes. First error discovered was the result of faulty addition at the returning office. The correction increased Mr. Grills' margin to 92 votes. Today mailed returns from the rural district were received and in some instances figures differed slightly from those reported by telephone Monday night. Early corrections reduced Mr. Grills' margin from 92 to 71. Other changes were expected throughout the day. The armed services vote is now being counted in Ottawa and results for this riding are expected to be learned here Saturday. Even, after this, though, the official count of the vote will change the figures. And, if the margin remains close, there is always the possibility of a recounting requested by one or other of the candidates.

Corrected additions for Monday's figures reduce the votes of all candidates from those reported Monday evening, and give Mr. Grills a margin of 92 over Mr. Temple. These figures are: Lee C. Grills, Progressive Conservative, 14,622; Robert Temple, Liberal, 14,530; Leslie Digby, New Democratic Party, 1,307; Rev. George Mabory, Social Credit, 254.

HUGE DOLLAR SIGN HANGS OVER NEW HOUSE

Many Decisions Appear Urgent

OTTAWA (CP)—A huge dollar sign hangs ominously over the political scene in Canada as a result of Monday's federal election—whether the Conservatives remain in office or give way to the Liberals.

Problems of both national and international finance are coming to a point where decisions appear urgent. They range through such matters as determining the pay of post office workers, drafting a new national budget, charting a course for Canada in international trade and bolstering the treasury of the United Nations.

A series of international meetings starting in mid-May already sets the deadlines for some major decisions.

On May 13, Commonwealth trade and finance ministers meet in London in preparation for a May 16 meeting in Geneva of the members of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade. On May 14 a special United Nations meeting opens in a New York to save the world organization from bankruptcy. May and 22 the North Atlantic Treaty Countries meet here in

Sir Winston Made Honorary Citizen of United States

WASHINGTON (AP) — Britain's towering titan, Sir Winston Churchill, received honorary United States citizenship Tuesday—a tribute unique in U.S. history.

President Kennedy proclaimed the dauntless wartime prime minister a citizen of the United States and the champion of freedom in this anxious hour.

Churchill accepted with "solemn and heartfelt thanks" what he called this honor without parallel.

But then, in Kennedy's words, Sir Winston "is the most honored and honorable man in walk the stage of history in the time in which we live."

The president omitted this line from his brief, prepared remarks. But the white house said he stood behind it.

Churchill is 88 now. The pressures of these years, and the burdens thrust upon him during many of them, have left him weary and a bit frail. So he could not be here for the ceremony which said him unstinting tribute—a ceremony held in the White House rose garden under glowering skies that continually threatened rain.

But he did look on at home by live television broadcast across the Atlantic to London via a satellite in orbit.

His son, Randolph, was on hand to read his letter of thanks and appreciation for the latest in a multitude of honors.

"In this century of storm and tragedy," he said, "I contem-

SEATO Plans Big Power Display in Southeast Asia

PARIS (Reuters)—The eight Southeast Asia Treaty Organization nations today reiterated their support for a neutral and independent Laos under a unified national government, a communique said.

The communique, issued after a three-day meeting of the SEATO ministerial council, expressed hope that those with responsibility for Laos and those who signed last year's Geneva agreement giving Laos independence with neutrality "will succeed in ensuring the maintenance of peace, neutrality, and national unity which the people of Laos so earnestly desire."

Referring to the current troubles in South Viet Nam, the communique said: "The council hopes that Viet Nam, with the support given to it, would be in a position to maintain its advance towards internal stability and international security."

The meeting also emphasized that the development of effective measures to prevent and counter subversion "continues to be a major task facing the member countries."

Plot to Upset Togo Regime Is Uncovered

LOME (Reuters)—A plot to overthrow the Togo provisional government, set up after the assassination of Togo's President Sylvanus Olympio, has been uncovered and some of the leaders arrested, a government communique said today.

It said the attempted coup, inspired by Togolese living in Nigeria, was led by Olympio's former interior minister, Theophile Mally.

The communique said Nos Kutuklui, minister of labor in the provisional government and secretary-general of Olympio's Togo Unity Party, and other leaders of the party had been arrested.

Kutuklui was one of only two ministers of the old regime given new office by President Nicolas Grunitzky, who heads the provisional government.

The communique said the government was to be overthrown, public figures arrested or killed, and acts of sabotage committed.

"Thanks to the vigilance of the security forces and the co-operation of the people, the plot was foiled," the communique said.

Pope Urges UN Get Means To Safeguard World Peace

CP from Reuters-AP

VATICAN CITY — The Pope today appealed to "men of goodwill" all over the world for an end to the arms race and the equal and simultaneous reduction of arms stockpiles.

He urged, too, that the United Nations be given the structure and means to safeguard world peace.

The pontiff, in his important 15,000-word encyclical, "Pacem In Terris" (Peace on Earth), called for a ban on nuclear weapons and said "a general agreement should eventually be reached about progressive disarmament and an effective method of control."

The unique document — addressed to both Roman Catholics and non-Catholics—said it is the Pope's earnest wish that the United Nations should become increasingly equal to the "magnitude and nobility of its task."

The pontiff warned that the

"confiagration" of war "may be set off by some uncontrollable and unexpected chance."

He added:

"Even though the monstrous power of modern weapons acts as a deterrent, it is to be feared that the mere continuance of nuclear tests, undertaken with war in mind, will have fatal consequences for life on the earth."

The Pope called for the deterrent of arms equality to be replaced by universal acceptance of the fundamental principle "that the true and solid peace of nations consists not in equality of arms but in mutual trust alone."

He indicated he hoped the United Nations eventually might become a strong world authority. But he did not specifically mention what peace - keeping means it should have at its disposal.

MIKE PLEDGES SIXTY DAYS OF HARD WORK

Claims Legislation Ready for Action

OTTAWA (CP) — Lester Bowles Pearson told everyone who would listen during the federal election campaign that a Liberal government would move into action at once, starting with "the first 60 days of decision."

Although he wound up with the largest group in the house after Monday's election, his Liberals fell short of a majority and there is no indication as to when, or whether, he will have a chance to act on the grandiose plans he boasted he came to a campaign slogan.

Toward the end of the campaign he also was talking about "resources for reform," and the need to restore confidence.

He said seven or eight pieces of legislation were ready for parliamentary action.

Based on his campaign speeches, the following is a brief recapitulation of the things the Liberals claim they stretch drive to the election:

He would fly to London to discuss trade and economic matters with Prime Minister MacMillan. This would include an attempt to assure Canada "directly" with new international trading patterns.

Then he would arrange a meeting with President Kennedy to discuss trade and defence.

WOULD MEET IN MAY

Parliament would be convened in May. Mr. Pearson mentioned two dates as practicable—May 16, and after the NATO ministerial meeting scheduled for Ottawa May 22-24.

A budget would be brought down in June. It would include tax and financial measures to boost the economy and head it toward full employment.

A new department of industry would be created.

A national economic council would be set up.

A new Atlantic Development Board would be given a capital fund.

A new federal agency would be established to promote development of economically backward areas in Canada.

A municipal loan fund would be built up, to make low-interest loans to municipalities for projects they are unable to finance elsewhere.

"A national development corporation would be created.

Action would be taken toward provincial co-operation in setting up a system of contributory old age pensions.

An all-party Commons committee on defence would be put to work.

A national commission on biculturalism would be appointed.

Other pledges were made, of course. And all of them were made in the context of a Liberal majority government. It remains to be seen what effect a minority situation would have on a Liberal program.

Swiss Deport Alleged Aide Of Eichmann

BERN (Reuters)—Erich Rajakowitch, alleged former assistant of Nazi Adolf Eichmann, today was escorted by an undisclosed frontier after the justice ministry announced he had been found in Switzerland.

News of his deportation came as Dutch authorities in The Hague, Netherlands, made plans to take all "necessary measures" with a view to the possible trial" of Rajakovitch.

He is alleged to have participated in the wartime execution of 110,000 Dutch Jews.

Rajakovitch, who arrived here secretly last week from Milan, was previously barred from Switzerland.

He was escorted to an undisclosed frontier by plainclothes police.

An Italian interior ministry spokesman said Italian frontier posts had been ordered to refuse Rajakovitch entry as "an undesirable element."

Prime Minister Due In Ottawa To Meet Cabinet

Liberal Leader Takes Holiday to See Game

PRINCE ALBERT, Sask. (CP)—Prime Minister Diefenbaker returns to Ottawa by air today to face a second-best parliamentary position bestowed by Monday's general election.

A cabinet meeting — assembling a ministry that suffered six defeats—has been called for Thursday morning.

Tuesday he spent a "cooling off" period in his special railway car, aides said.

He took and placed calls, received visitors and drove for an hour with his brother Elmer and surveying snowflurries. Stops included the federal penitentiary and the home of the returning officer in Monday's election.

While he and his wife read personal telegrams, he also studied the election results.

WILL DECIDE FUTURE

The final picture—including the service vote which takes a week to compile—will decide the future course of action, he emphasized Monday night.

At that time he indicated he may embark on a fourth term as prime minister. He underlined constitutional events in 1926 when the Conservative party, led by W. L. Mackenzie King, wound up second best in the election but continued in office until mid-1926.

Then, the Liberals had 101 seats to 116 for the Conservatives compared with 128 for the Liberals, 96 for the Conservatives, 24 for Social Credit and 19 for the New Democratic Party from this election.

He has four apparent constitutional alternatives open—he can attempt to continue, resign and suggest Governor-General Vanier seek another to form a government, try to form a coalition with one of the other three parties or ask the governor-general to dissolve Parliament for another election which would be the fifth in six years.

Say Portuguese Planes Bombed Senegal Town

DAKAR, Senegal (AP)—President Leopold Senghor asked the UN Security Council to look into his charge that four Portuguese planes bombed Senegal, a village near this African nation's border with Portuguese Guinea.

Senghor said the alleged incident is a cabinet meeting Tuesday. He said there is no question whether anyone had been killed or injured.

Senghor told the cabinet meeting that the attack took place in the early hours of January.

In Lisbon, a foreign ministry spokesman said it had "no indication" Portuguese planes had bombed the village, but that the report would be investigated, if it had happened, "in line with the violate Senegal's sovereignty.

Cuban Exiles Refuse to Accept Resignation of Their President

MIAMI, Fla. (AP)—The Cuban revolutionary council rejected today the resignation of its president, Jose Miro Cardona, and said Miro would continue to head the anti-Castro exile organization.

A decision to refuse the resignation was reached in a 13-hour, all-night meeting.

The council then issued a statement declaring a "state of grave crisis exists, caused by the present policy of the government of this country." President Kennedy's championing anti-Castro raids prompted the resignation. Miro Cardona, in a reffirm our revocable decision to continue the fight against the Castro Soviet regime, even under the most serious circumstances," the declaration continued.

"The council has always urged and now reiterates the essential participation of Cubans in the process of liberating Cuba."

Cuban exiles were urged to close ranks to produce the necessary national unity to accelerate the fight to overthrow Castro.

Veteran of Gold Rush in Klondike, Former Yukon M.P., Geo. Black 90

VANCOUVER (CP) — George Black, former soldier, parliamentarian and adventurer, celebrated his 90th birthday today. "It's been a good life, yes, a long, happy one," he says.

Mr. Black's life has been filled with adventure. He is a veteran of the Klondike gold rush but made only enough money from mining to set up a law practice in the Yukon.

Yukon politics in those days of the late 1890s were as wild as the Yukon itself, in the words Mr. Black, a native of Woodstock, N.B., began his political life which was crowned when he became Speaker of the House of Commons in 1930.

He was first elected to the Commons in 1921 as Conservative candidate for the Yukon and was successively until 1949—except for one term owing to ill health. He was Speaker of the House from 1930 to 1935. He retired in 1949.

During Mr. Black's illness-forced absence from the Commons, from 1935 to 1940, his Yukon constituency was held by his wife, Martha. She died in 1957 at 91. The following year Mr. Black married Sadie King, a widow and sister of the late Mickey O'Rourke, VC.

Among the first greetings to arrive for his 90th birthday was one from Prime Minister Diefenbaker.

Reserve Judgment on Suit To Unseat Mayor A. M. Haig

Following a day long sitting during which nine witnesses were called, judgment was reserved here yesterday by Prince Edward County Judge Wilfred S. Lane on the application of the Belleville resident Charles De-Long to unseat Mayor A. M. Haig for alleged conflict of interest.

The decision of Judge Lane to reserve judgment came after close to two hours summation by opposing counsel. He said he would try to return judgment "very shortly".

The application of Mr. De-Long to unseat the Belleville mayor for alleged conflict of interest through business dealings between Moira Schuster Ltd. of which Mayor Haig is president, and the Bay of Quinte District High School Board; Belleville General Hospital and the city of Belleville.

Belleville lawyer Ralph Graham appeared for Mayor Haig while Ben Hurley represented the applicant, Mr. DeLong.

BOARD HAD CONTRACT

Evidence was that the Bay of Quinte District High School Board had a contract for the supply of coal for the 1962-63 heating season with delivery having been made prior to the end of last year.

Evidence also showed that the local fuel firm had sold small quantities of fuel oil and wax to the Belleville General Hospital, and that it had acted as delivery agent for coal sold to the hospital by Empire-Hannah Coal Company, and in the same capacity for salt sold to the city by Sifto Salt.

Most of yesterday's evidence was taken during the morning session with the afternoon being taken up by the recall of three witnesses to give more detail with respect to records and documents, and by summation by the two counsel.

Recalled were Roy Dulmage, secretary treasurer of the Bay of Quinte District High School Board; Werner Daechsel, superintendent of Belleville General Hospital, and Arthur Horning, secretary treasurer of Empire-Hannah Coal Company.

CLOSELY QUESTIONED

Under cross examination, Mr. Daechsel was questioned closely by Mr. Graham with regard to what were termed by counsel to be "picayune" business dealings between the hospital and Moira Schuster.

Two purchases of fuel oil and wax with bills amounting to $34.21 and $118.05, had been made by the hospital from Moira Schuster during 1963, it was shown.

Asked when he had first noticed isolated hospital purchases being made from Moira Schuster, Mr. Daechsel said he had been aware of them since shortly after he came to the hospital.

However, he had not considered three was an question of impropriety and had allowed them to continue.

Asked if his personal relationship with Mayor Haig had been strained during the spring of 1962, Mr. Daechsel replied, "not particularly, not on my part."

DENIED MAKING STATEMENT

He denied having made a statement to hospital architect Peter Wilkes, that he was "out to get Haig, even if I have to do it myself."

"Or words to that effect?" asked Mr. Graham.

"Nor words to that effect," replied Mr. Daechsel. "I never or have said I never will."

Mr. Horning outlined the procedure of deliveries of coal sold by Empire Hannah to the hospital.

He said the hospital engineer would call Moira Schuster with the coal being picked up by Haig firm from a dock stockpile and delivered to the hospital. Tickets were forwarded by Moira Schuster to his firm which in turn billed the hospital directly.

Last witness called was Charles DeLong, who made the application to unseat Mayor Haig. He said the facts sworn to in his application came to his attention on February 17th of this year.

STARTED WITH PETITION

The action to unseat Mayor Haig started with a petition signed by about 60 Belleville ratepayers, which was forwarded to the Department of Municipal Affairs asking for an enquiry into the business affairs of Moira Schuster Ltd. as they were concerned with the high school board, the hospital and the city.

The hearing was denied by Municipal Affairs Minister Hon. W. J. Spooner. Crawford's advice and action to unseat Mayor Haig would have to be taken by a private citizen before a judge.

Summing up, Mr. Hurley submitted that last's year's amendment to the Municipal Act brought an end to speculation as to the position of company shareholders sitting on council and whose firms were doing business with the municipality.

He contended that the amendment placed Mr. Haig in "the same position as he would be if he had a personal contract with the city.

"And if it had been proven that Moira Schuster had a contract with the hospital for fuel and wax, then it had an "interest" in the coal contract of Empire Hannah, in that it delivered the coal to the hospital.

Mr. Hurley contended that triviality was not the issue in such cases, "interest is the issue," he said.

HAD REAL INTEREST CLAIM

He said that Mayor Haig was not merely a "dummy" shareholder in the firm of Moira Schuster but was a man with a real interest in that he had to be a shareholder to be president of the firm.

Mr. Graham, counsel for Mayor Haig, argued that this "strict" high school boards did not come within the meaning of the Municipal Act insofar as dis qualification was concerned.

He also contended that Moira Schuster were merely "agents" of the hospital in connection with delivery of coal to the hospital and said to the city over a week had no interest in the actual contracts.

Mr. Graham maintained that the only real basis for disqualification of Mayor Haig might be in the isolated sales to Moira Schuster to the hospital.

But he submitted that Mayor Haig was not an actual shareholder in the Moira Schuster firm and therefore even these sales did not come within the meaning of disqualification.

ROBBED AGAIN

"Building Up Canada" Was PC Catchword in Campaign

OTTAWA (CP) — "Building up Canada; building for tomorrow."

Those were the catchwords of Prime Minister Diefenbaker's Conservative election campaign, and the key to the program of urban and resource development, social security improvements and extension of farm aid he promised for the next session of Parliament.

Whether he will remain as prime minister and seek to implement the program remains to be seen when the result of Monday's voting is clarified by announcement of the service vote this weekend and possible behind - the - scenes consultations among the party leaders.

Mr. Diefenbaker's campaign pledges were mainly visions of what he saw for Canada in the centennial year, 1967. He spoke of 1,000,000 new jobs, a balanced budget in five years, a national power grid and exports of surplus electric power.

He promised business—especially small business—new incentives for research, production, sales and expansion.

Federal legislation would provide a plan of nation-wide portable retirement pensions. Family allowances would be contributed for students up to 18 years of age, and old age pensions would be supplemented by a contributory plan.

PLANNED CONFERENCE

Mr. Diefenbaker planned a national conference on bicultralism, saying action is needed now and not a further inquiry as promised by Liberal Leader Pearson.

For farmers, parliamentary action was promised on a bill introduced in the closing hours of the last session to create an Eastern Feed Grain Assistance Act, guaranteeing supplies at firm costs.

The Conservative leader announced he recognized the principle of collective bargaining for civil servants, and said pay increases for the armed forces, postal and customs workers and other federal employees would be made, retroactive to last October.

The program he spelled out in general detail was for urban renewal and development. He said these were drafted in amendments to the National Housing Act the government was ready to introduce when it was defeated in the Commons Feb. 5.

The government would make loans to municipalities for their share of the cost of urban redevelopment projects at low interest rates, and would subsidize the operating losses of public housing projects. The federal government, he said, would also help in the planning of new suburban centres, assisting in the creation of town centres in advance of urban sprawl.

And to make a start on the Conservative program, Mr. Diefenbaker promised to call Parliament at "the earliest possible date" in May.

Suspend Term Given Boy, 16, For Break-in

TRENTON — In magistrate's court at Trenton yesterday, Terrence Charles Jones, 16, of R.R. 2, Trenton was placed on a two years' suspended sentence by Magistrate T. Y. Wills after he pleaded guilty to breaking and entering the Morton-Parker silverplate plant on March 31.

John Hugh MacInnes, 19, of Trenton, who also pleaded guilty to the breaking and entering charge and to a further charge of carrying a concealed weapon, (a hunting knife), was remanded for one week. The magistrate called for a pre-sentence report.

W. G. Weston, appearing for MacInnes, pleaded that entering the factory had been "more of a lark," to the youths, than an intentional criminal offence. He pointed out that nothing had been taken from the plant.

"They didn't have time," suggested Magistrate Wills. (Police were on the scene three minutes after a burglar alarm sounded as the youths entered the factory by way of window.)

Jones was represented by Gregory Butler.

New Telephone Directory Now Off Press

The 1963 telephone directory for Belleville, Trenton and vicinity is off the press.

According to Milton Sweeney, Bell Telephone company manager in Belleville, the directory which is new in many ways, will be distributed by mail and should be in the hands of customers by April 16.

For most of the customers in the area, the new directory becomes effective April 21, the day that dial service comes to Tweed. The exceptions are the customers served by the Gilmour and Maynooth exchanges.

Because of a conversion to dial from manual operation, similar to that of Tweed, the Gilmour numbers will only become effective on May 26. In Maynooth, the numbers become effective on June 2, coinciding with the opening of a new central office and the introduction of All Number Calling.

Besides the usual directory's introductory pages, customers will find, among other things, complete instructions for dialing local calls and placing long distance calls. There is also a complete list of Area Codes.

Mr. Sweeney said he particularly wished to refer customers to the first introductory page, where they will find blank spaces for their own police and fire numbers.

"I feel it is extremely important that customers have the numbers of their police and fire departments handy in case of an emergency," said Mr. Sweeney.

"I think these numbers should be marked down in the proper space as soon as possible after the directory is received."

Mr. Sweeney said more copies of the directory will be distributed this year than ever before. In fact, total circulation will total about 42,880, up 4,316 from the 38,564 that were distributed in 1962.

In Belleville, circulation will reach 16,900 representing an increase of some 750 copies from 1962. The circulation in Trenton is expected to total 8,450 copies, compared with 7,873 in 1962.

Similar increases are anticipated in smaller communities. In Picton, for example, the 1963 circulation will be about 4,992 compared with 4,738 in 1962. Brighton circulation will increase to 1,810 from 1,411; Bancroft to 1,488 from 1,215 and Tweed to 1,435 from 1,338.

Kiwanians Hear Fishery Expert

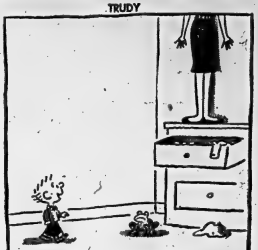
Members of the Kiwanis Club and their guests were addressed at yesterday's luncheon meeting by Peter Littkemann, fisheries technician for the Tweed Department of Lands and Forests.

Mr. Littkemann described to those present the work performed by the Department of Lands and Forests members in connection with the game-fish hatcheries and the many findings from this interesting work.



The speaker was introduced by Kiwanian Dick Lumbers and was thanked by Les May.

Vice-president Bob Freestone conducted the meeting.

Lesage Is Clever Strategist

Real Caouette, deputy leader of the Socreds, wound up his party's election campaign by declaring that Social Credit would campaign against Premier Jean Lesage and his Liberal government in the next Quebec provincial election.

Premier Lesage had virtually asked for such intervention. Not only had he broken with modern custom in the province by taking sides in the federal election, but he had done so in the rudest, bluntest language. For instance, in his budget address, he analyzed the platforms of "the three serious parties" and the Social Credit.

What, one may ask, induced Premier Lesage to invite Socred activity at the provincial level, when the party, under the leadership of Caouette, seemed doomed to futility participation in this field, on the grounds that only the federal government has the power to impiement Socred monetary policies?

Some may reply that Lesage was the victim of an old habit, or was paying an old debt—he was formerly a Federal cabinet minister in St. Laurent's Liberal regime.

Others may suggest that, while Lesage is a French-Canadian, his primary loyalty is to Canada as a whole, that like many thousands of English-speaking Canadians he deplored the instability inherent in a minority government at Ottawa and that he was doing his best to avoid its continuance, by weakening the Socred forces in Quebec.

There may be considerable truth in these explanations. But even if there is, it may well be that Lesage's chief motive was linked to the welfare of his own province.

It is no secret that many of the men behind the upsurge of Social Credit in Quebec have a long history of association with Union Nationale. If the Socreds enter the provincial scene, they are unlikely to be satisfied with the role of backing the Union Nationale. Instead they will almost certainly unfold their own banner. But Union Nationale, while it might switch its support in a federal vote from the Conservatives to the Social Credit, is still much too powerful a political organization to abdicate quietly in favor of Caouette's Socreds in the provincial field. It is certain to make a fight of it. Thus, by dragging the Socreds into the provincial picture, Lesage has in effect split the anti-Liberal vote.

Guard Against Accidental War

The Soviet Union has agreed to a U.S. proposal that a direct teletype line link Washington and the Kremlin.

The project was conceived in an effort to make certain that delays in communications between the great powers would not play a role in any accidental war.

Nobody will suggest that a direct wire between Khrushchev and Kennedy will help them to understand each other better. Nor will it ease the task of arriving at some acceptable compromise in difficult situations. Mechanical gadgets, unfortunately, cannot provide a solution to the problem of better communications at the level of understanding and trust.

No nuclear nation is going to start a war deliberately without the closest consideration of all the alternatives and their possibilities. Still, speedy communication between the leaders of the great powers might bring a last-minute reprieve from a planned war—in the event of one or the other having a last-minute change of mind or heart. But besides the war by choice, the world is also threatened with the war by accident, resulting from the misinterpretation of some action by the potential enemy, or even of some natural phenomenon. It is in the prevention of such a war that the certainty of having quick access to the highest authority in the rival nation could prove not merely a life-saver but a world-saver.

The layman, however, may be pardoned for hoping that, when the statesmen and the military have this "hot" line in working order, they devise some precise formula for its use. Otherwise it could inadvertently lead to what it will be designed to avoid. Coincidences are the very devil and the devil is doubly deadly in the atomic age. Consider, for instance, the mixup when the ICBM warning stations in Greenland erroneously reported that a flight of Russian rockets appeared to be headed for this continent. We assume such a report would have called for use of the direct line between Washington and the Kremlin, if it had been in existence. What would have happened if, through some mischance, the line had proven to be dead? One would think that this would be regarded as corroboration of what the missile warning station mistakenly showed was happening.

Strictly Personal

Public Not Aware of Its Real Wants

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

The constant theme of the hucksters in the field of entertainment — which today means mostly television — is that they are "giving the people what they want."

Those of us who deplore the moronic offerings in mass entertainment are sneered at as eggheads who are out of touch with reality. The hucksters insist that not only are they giving the public what it wants, but that the public loves it.

Both these propositions are demonstrably untrue. As a glaring example of their falsity, I cite a recent syndicated television column out of Hollywood with the headline: "40 Nighttime Shows Destined for TV Ax."

The story said: "At least 40 of network TV's current crop of weekly nighttime shows will be dropped by summer. Above half of this number were series which made their debuts last fall."

If the hucksters know what the people want, and are giving it to them, how does it happen that the majority of TV programs liked by the public are undergo so suddenly tragic a death? Why is programming in such a constant state of chaos and confusion? Why is the search so desperate for "new" material — which usually turns out to be as ghastly and unimaginative as the old material?

I submit that on the contrary, overwhelmingly evidence itself — that not only do the producers and networks not know what the public wants, but the public itself does not know until it gets it.

It is a false assumption to hold that the demand creates the supply; in the arts and entertainment, it is the supply that creates a demand. There was, for instance, no "effective demand" for off-Broadway theater, but the supply continued until the habits of theatregoers were changed, and today off-Broadway is one of the most vital and fruitful aspect in American drama.

There is never a demand for anything that is good until it comes along and takes hold of people. This it cannot do unless it is given a chance, unless time and care and money and energy and patience are expended upon it. Advertisers well know this — there is no demand for a new product, generally speaking, until repetition and exposure over a period of years and a considerable time generate such a demand.

It is nothing less than a downright lie to suggest that the TV producers are giving the people what they want — and the frantic activity in changing programs formats every few months exposes this lie. And it is equally mendacious to suggest — as the recent book does — that the viewers on the whole are "satisfied" with their TV fare. If they were, television would not be the programmatic lunatic asylum it has become.

Churchill Good Enough

Portland Oregonian

Some of the 21 U.S. representatives who voted against a joint congressional resolution to make Sir Winston Churchill an honorary citizen of the United States explained that they feared dilution of the privilege of U.S. citizenship.

It's an odd fear. It is not likely that the number of persons with Sir Winston's qualifications will be great enough to work any dilution in a society already claiming almost 200 million members of a variety of qualifications. Sir Winston is half American by birth and at least that much in spirit. Like the original American patriots, he turned down the idea of a peerage from the British crown. In fact, he turned down a prior offer of U.S. citizenship a few years ago.

If Sir Winston now figures that we are good enough for him, he is certainly good enough for us. Honorary citizenships, if limited to those of his distinction, will not number more than two or three every hundred years or so. We can find room for them.

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

April 10th, 1943

Sponsored by the Belleville Citizens' Committee of which Mr. Lorne McDougall is president, Saturday's tag day for raising funds to help finance the Service Women's Centre on Campbell Street raised $519, it was announced by officials this morning. All women's organizations in the city assisted. The money will be used to pay operating costs such as rent, light, fuel and other expenses.

Trim in their smart uniforms, officers and other personnel of the Belleville Squadron Air Cadets held their first public picture party at the McCarthy Theatre recently. The cadets presented a smart appearance as they swung along Church Street from their headquarters. The strength of the squadron now approximates seventy-five but there is still more room for eligible candidates to join them.

With the advent of four cent postage last week Postal employees at the local Post Office are experiencing considerable difficulty in that they are finding small with insufficient stamps attached. The increased postage was exactly one cent over and above the old rate per posted letter or postcard.

30 YEARS AGO

April 10th, 1933

A beautiful stained glass window, depicting the Nativity, in memory of the wife of Sir Gilbert Parker, Bart., P.C., was dedicated in St. Thomas' Church on Palm Sunday morning by the Victor, the Rev. A. Beauchamp Payne. The window was placed in the church several years ago and dedication was kept in abeyance until a time when Sir Gilbert could be present; however, his death occurred before his presence could be arranged. It was expected that the Right Bishop of the Diocese, the Rt. Rev. John Lyons, would be present, but illness prevented him coming here for the dedication, and also to administer the rite of Confirmation.

Mr. E. R. McBride has been elected president of the local Rotary club for the ensuing year. Mr. Aid Dacosty to succeed the late John Elliott.

Mayor George Bennett and members of the deputation who went to Toronto in search of aid for the proposed United Empire Loyalist celebration here were successful in their mission as the provincial treasurer, the Hon. Peter Smith, agreed to have the sum of $10,000 placed in the estimates to be used in helping to defray the necessary expenses.

Sale Price Above Usual

Stratford Beacon-Herald

A reader has brought to us the cardboard carton in which he bought a tube of toothpaste. There is a bold red-and-white sticker pasted across the carton which says: 10c Off Regular Price: Sale Price 67c. The reader paid 57 cents when he bought the toothpaste.

In a spirit of investigation, the reader and his wife spent some time prying off the sticker, from the carton. They discovered, in the process, that whatever the quality of his toothpaste, the manufacturer used a good grade of glue for the stickers.

Underneath the sticker, they found the carton had a printed price: 54 cents.

Our reader reports that he took the carton back to the Stratford store where he bought the toothpaste, and showed the 54-cent price, under the sticker. The attitude of the retailer was that this was no concern of the store; the manufacturer set the pricing policy, and the retailer had nothing to do with it.

We would be inclined to disagree with this, and to think that the Sale price on the carton is the 57 which the customer, when on the evidence, the price would have had to be 44 cents to comply with the advertised claim that it was "10c Off Regular Price."

However, it is not likely that the customer can in practice get any legal redress in such a case. The amount involved is petty, and no one is going to spend $10 consulting a lawyer to find out whether he has, or has not, been defrauded of 13 cents.

If the matter were ever brought to legal judgment, the probability could get lost in all the areas of vague uncertainty between manufacturer and wholesaler, between retailer and jobber, between jobber, and retailer.

The one thing we note, with some pleasure, is that it was not a Canadian manufacturer who was guilty of the calumny at 54 cents, subtracted 10 from 54, and got 37 as the answer.

The Sale price on the carton says: Dental Stain Remover With Mouthwash. Benefits Removes Ugly Teeth Stains And Overnight Smokers' Taste." The small print, among other things, "Made in U.S.A."

Part of that 57 cents went across the border to help inflate Canada's unfavorable balance of trade with the United States.

Bait for Suckers

Through the years, by far the most attractive bait for suckers is an offer of something for nothing.

Could Castro Want Raids?

Christian Science Monitor

It is too early to comment on the Florida incidents. There is yet no adequate way to judge the motives or likelihood of repetition. But the facts are shaking down, however, there is another and perhaps allied question to raise.

Why are the Cuban refugee raiders—whoever they are—attacking Soviet ships?

The answer may well remain a mystery.

A note from the Kremlin pins responsibility on the United States Government. Many people will believe it. There is no doubt that the United States has helped refugee groups in the past and given them weapons and ships which they may well have in their control today. There is no doubt that the United States will do what it feels it can to help the Cuban resistance movement to help itself.

But why against Soviet ships?

It is inherently improbable that the United States wants any such needling of the Soviet forces in Cuba. Moreover, the Soviet troops in that country cannot be forced out except by war or grave risk of war. No part of them have just been withdrawn voluntarily, under threat of overwhelming American pressure. The Kremlin has reasons to be at odds with Premier Castro. There is every reason to see if more withdrawals will take place. A public humiliation like that of shipping Soviet arms will only accomplish what all such humiliations do—set against the Soviet bear and make him determined to stay. The Soviet Union, in other words, would not withdraw from outposts (like Quemoy or the land bases in Italy and Turkey) under pressure. Why should the Russians do otherwise?

Again, why raids on Soviet ships?

Are desperate Cubans trying to draw the United States into armed action against Soviet forces?

Or could Mr. Castro be behind? He wants the Soviet troops to remain in spite of his reported irritation at the Kremlin. He is known to have heavily infiltrated the Cuban refugee groups.

These questions are asked not from any suspicion, from caprice or mere suspicion. They inhere in the present uncertainties. The Government seems to gumshoe secrets must analyze an important situation like this as best it can. Only so can guide his thinking only by what seems inherently probable and improbable.

In this case there is more than a mere coincidence to the official statements from Washington. The raiding does in fact hurt the interests of the United States as the President says it does.

Cartnappers Big Problem

Christian Science Monitor

Business has its problems, all right, and they are not all in the realm of big issues or government regulation. One of the persistent bothers of the supermarket trade has been with a name in the lineage of the bulbsnatcher and its show. It is called cartnapping.

No—to be confused with eatnapping. The latter is the habit of thoughtless or inconsiderate shoppers who trifidle their purchases home in one of the big stainless steel buggies that were made for navigating the aisles between the groceries.

One store chain is endeavoring to reduce its losses of these vehicles, or its acts of rounding them up, by having an employee waylay them as the customer's car and bring it back. Or for the shopper on foot, it will furnish a light, two-wheeled, folding cart for a 50-cent deposit.

Even this venture, it is reported, requires tact. For shameless as a few may be about discarding a useful piece of hardware a mile or two from the store, others are offended at the very thought they might do such a thing. Possibly the answer will be in some such device as one that magnetically locks the wheels a cart passing through the exit of the market's parking lot.

Shoppers should be cooperative for the fewer cars a market has to replace, the lower it can price its goods—or the more stamps it can give away.

To Your Good Health

Syphilis Congenital But Not Hereditary

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

I am being taken to task, quite legitimately, by technically-minded readers who protest that syphilis can be congenital, but cannot (as I incorrectly said) be hereditary.

The way the subject arose was via a letter from a man with the disease who wanted to know if it "could be hereditary," because he knew of no way, other than that, by which he could have contracted it.

What he meant boils down to this: Could he have been born with the disease? And the answer is "yes." A child can be born with syphilis.

Doubtless I should then have explained that there is a difference between congenital and hereditary.

Heredity governs our basic constitution. We tend to be tall or short because our ancestors were. Color of hair, eyes and skin is a matter of heredity. Some diseases are hereditary. For a couple of examples, hereditary strongly influences diabetes; it passes on such defects as hemophilia, or failure of the blood to clot properly.

A congenital defect, on the other hand, is one that occurs through some accident or interference during pregnancy. Consider the "thalidomide babies." They started out to be normal, but the drug intervened, and caused a deformity before the babies were born — and after they had acquired their hereditary traits.

Aside from the matter of using the correct word, all this becomes important to us, in a practical sense.

A child is never born with syphilis simply because the parent may, at some time, have had it.

A child can be born with syphilis for only one reason: the germ is present while the baby is still in the womb. Syphilis is a germ-caused disease. There is no way of getting it without transmission of the germ.

For years the proportion of babies born with syphilis has been from one to two per cent, but there is no real excuse for this except that people do not take proper precautions, or adequate treatment.

This risk alone is sufficient reason why everyone should begin getting medical care as soon as they are pregnant, rather than waiting until the time of birth is near.

If syphilis is detected, treatment with antibiotics or other drugs can protect the child and the disease can be cured. Though, in some cases the mother may not be entirely cured.

Treatment after birth can protect the child, too, and the number of infant deaths from this cause has declined to a very low figure.

If a woman does not have the disease and is not exposed to the syphilis germ throughout the time of pregnancy, her child will not have it. She may have had it and been cured. The child still cannot be born with the disease because the germ is not there. - I repeat, it is congenital, not hereditary.

Dear Dr. Molner: Can gas escaping from a faulty heater cause diarrhea? If it can cause nausea, why not diarrhea? — R. B.

Yes, it's possible, however, headache, nausea and drowsiness are the usual symptoms of monoxide from faulty heaters.

Dear Dr. Molner: What can I do for an itch all over my body? If I scratch it bleeds. It is worse at night. — C. S.

Some diseases, of which diabetes is one, can cause itching. Consult your doctor. Occurring at times, it could be sensitivity to a wool blanket. Or too many blankets making you too warm. If it turns out to be simply a skin ailment, he can tackle that, too.

Headaches! You can beat them. Write to Dr. Molner in care of The Chicago Sun-Times Syndicate, P.O. Box 158, Dundee, Ill., for a copy of the booklet "How To Tame Headaches." Please enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 25 cents in coin to cover cost of handling.

The city of Halifax was incorporated 122 years ago today—in 1841. The city was founded in 1749 and named after the Earl of Halifax, president of the British Board of Trade and Plantations. The city has one of the finest natural harbors in the world, known as Chebucto—"the great long harbor" to the Micmac Indians. The first legislative assembly in Canada met at Halifax in 1758.

1953—Japan's Crown Prince Akihito married a commoner, Michiko Shoda.

1815—The Allies destroyed 297 German aircraft.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

In a wayside restaurant last weekend adjoining tables to me were occupied by a crowd of dozen young people who were en route to a well-known summer resort hotel to prepare arrangements for their summer employment as bellhops, waitresses and caddies. They were a happy crew, all students of the same college apparently.

The older folk, who had worked last year at the hotel, were giving the newcomers some inside dope with regard to guests.

"Watch out," said one boy, "for those big tippers at the start of their visit. They hand you a two dollar bill for carrying up their bags. They shyly hand you a five dollar bill, to begin with saying they hope you will take good care of them. You can't beat the word. Big Tippers. So they get special treatment. You never notice the tips start to die off. And when they leave, they sneak off with a two dollar bill, and forget half the rest of the people who have been dancing attendance on them."

"Well" asked one of the new girls, "how can you tell a really big tipper?"

"It's kind of psychic," replied the old boy.

The evening unit of the Centre St. U.C.W. met on April 3rd at 7.30 p.m. with nine members present. This was the third meeting for this group and the following officers were chosen: president — Mrs. D. Hudgns; secretary — Mrs. B. Ryiot; treasurer — Mrs. G. Beich; program convener — Mrs. W. Jones.

The meeting opened with a short worship service led by Mrs. Hudgins reading, "The Holy Spuri and the Cross". The Scripture, Hebrew 9: 11-14 was read by Mrs. Ryiot. The group joined in the singing of "On the Green Hill Far Away," followed by The Lord's Prayer.

A story, planned by Mrs. L. Hawley, about three trees expressing their wishes was told. The first tree wished to be a baby's cradle. The second thought it would like to become a large ship. The third was quite happy to stay as it was pointing to God. They were all cut down and made into a manger, a fishing vessel and a cross and were all used by Christ during his stay on earth.

A lively discussion was held with everyone taking part. There were good suggestions and plans made to increase an interest in the group.

The meeting closed with Mrs. Hudgins and Mrs. Ryiot serving a delicious lunch.

BATAWA U.C.W.

BATAWA — The Batawa United Church Women met in the church basement on Monday evening with president, Mrs. Ivan Lockhart, presiding.

The worship hour was conducted by Mrs. A. Cranston and the guest speaker for the evening was Mrs. Jack Beach, of Frankford whose topic was on, "Programing and Lent." Mrs. Beach is the program convener of Cobourg Presbyterial.

Mrs. Lockhart, on behalf of the B.U.C.W., thanked the guest speaker.

Business was conducted. A thank you note was read from Linda Duncan who will represent this area at the Girl Guide European trip this summer for the contribution given to her by the Batawa U.C.W.

Mrs. Lockhart thanked the committees and members who contributed to the successful Fashion Show.

The project committee reported there will be a rummage sale in May.

After the meeting refreshments were served by the lunch committee.

ENGAGEMENT NOTICE

Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Roberts of 49 Crestview Avenue, Belleville, wish to announce the engagement of their youngest daughter, Marilyn, to Peter E. Beiswenger of Kingston, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. Beiswenger. Marriage to take place on Saturday, May 11th, at St. Margaret's-on-the-Hill Church, Belleville.

St. Columba's Alpha Group Plans Sale

The Alpha Group of St. Columba Presbyterian Church held their April meeting at the home of Mrs. M. J. Stonesbury. An interesting filmstrip on Formosa was presented by the program conveners Mrs. K. D. Taylor and Mrs. J. J. Burke.

The Presbyterian WMS Training Centre to be held at Albert College July 22 to 26th was announced, and after some discussion it was decided to wait until the May meeting before nominating a representative from this group.

A letter was read from the Women's Missionary Society Supply Fund, asking for donations and it was decided a cheque for $5 be forwarded; also that the balance of the funds as of December 31st, 1962, be turned over to the Women's Association of St. Columba.

DONATIONS NEEDED

The Women's Association will be holding a rummage sale at St. Andrew's Presbyterian church later in April. Conveners for this sale are Mrs. A. Dunmore and Mrs. E. McLaughlin. Members are asked for donations.

It was also announced at this meeting that the "Sod Turning" ceremony for the new church building would be held on the afternoon of April 7th. Mrs. W. Willis is social convener for this event and donations of baked goods were asked for. This brought up the point of there being a lack of teapots in the church and a motion was made that the treasurer purchase two large teapots to be given to the church in time for the "Sod Turning" ceremony.

The "Christmas Stockings" were distributed, to be returned in December.

Following adjournment, refreshments were served by the hostess.

ENGAGEMENT NOTICE

The Experts Say

Glycerine, Rose Water Still Excellent for Hands

By PATRICIA BURAK

TORONTO (CP)—Beauty experts say a woman's age, her personality and sometimes even her nationality are revealed by her hands.

But with meticulous hand care these experts can be deceived, especially in regard to age, says Angela Burke, a consultant for a beauty care institute in Montreal.

Glycerine and rose water which originated as a hand-care remedy in the early 19th century is still excellent, she says. These two ingredients form the basis of many of the modern creams and lotions.

Any hand cream should be applied both before and after putting hands in water containing soaps, detergents or harsh cleaning solvents.

"Detergent, more than ordinary soaps, eliminate natural oils from the skin of the hands, making the hands look old and wrinkled."

The hands have fewer oil cells than any other part of the body, she explained.

In addition to using hand creams regularly, a hand massage at least once a week helps maintain beautiful hands which traditionally are "long, slender and with the whiteness of snow."

Begin by spreading hand cream on one hand and massaging it from fingertips to wrist with firm, smooth movements of the free hand. "Each finger should be individually massaged."

Miss Burke described the massaging action as similar to putting on a tight-fitting leather glove.

When the hand is completely creamed, fold the fingers together clenching the fist quickly and then throwing it open, about five or six times. Then rotate each finger in as wide a circle as possible with the thumb and index finger of the other hand.

Finally, wrap the hands in steaming towels for a few minutes, dry them and re-apply a hand cream.

The drugstore shelf displaying a colorful variety of hand oils, creams and lotions has only been available to women in about the last 50 years, says Miss Burke.

"But women's hands have never gone unattended."

ANCIENT TREATMENT

In her research for the beauty institute, Miss Burke discovered that in Cleopatra's days hands were immersed in oils and ointments and nails were dipped in henna for color.

The ladies of the Roman court whitened their hands with white lead and chalk and made them pliable and soft by applying cakes of fine dough, kneaded with asses' milk.

Ovid recommended a hand beauty treatment that consisted of barley, vetches, naked narcissus bulbs and eggs ground beneath a mill stone.

In Renaissance France, creams of vanilla, cocoa and almond paste were popular and the first Queen Elizabeth preserved her elegant hands with a cosmetic lotion made of egg whites, powdered egg shell, alum, borax and white poppy seeds.

Hand analysts through the ages have categorized hands by nationalities, Miss Burke says.

"English women are said to have practical hands with palms and fingers of the same length. The French have well-proportioned palms with short fingers and Italian hands are supple with skilled fingers of mixed shapes."

Canadian hands have not yet been subjected to such close scrutiny.

But Canadian women are very hand-conscious. "They spend about $30,000,000 a year on hand creams—a third more than the per-capita spending in the U.S."

Easter Morning Breakfast

by Mary Moore

Thirty young people ranging in ages from seventeen to twenty voted unanimously to have Easter morning breakfast at church at 7.45. Six, including me, have to be there at 6.45 to get it ready.

This presents a problem for me because I will be baby-sitting for my eight-month-old granddaughter Jennifer while Pete and Margy are in New York. So the plan is to put her to bed in her pram on Saturday night. When I leave the house early on Sunday, I will push her to the church. One of my Young Peoples' Union members, Ellen, is also my depedable grandchild baby-sitter. So she will dress and feed her there. I'm chuckling inside over the sensation she will cause among those young people on Easter morning.

Our menu is not complicated but it will be attractive and substantial. When breakfast is announced and our crowd goes into the dining room, there will be daffodils in bud vases on the tables, fresh frozen orange juice in glasses and Jams and marmalades chosen for their Easter colors.

The Hot Cross Buns will be warmed in the ovens in the boxes in which they are delivered from the bakery.

There will be eggs cooked in the shell and scrambled eggs, which I will cook as late as possible before announcing breakfast. We will have coffee and milk too. We can't include bacon because the aroma would waft up to the church sanctuary.

"They must sit down at 7.45 at the latest so the servers and dishwashing crew can get done in time for all of us to go to the 9.00 a.m. service together.

I have excellent help for some of my girls are in Grade 13 and one of them, Beth, is going to be home economist.

EGGS COOKED IN THE SHELLS:

Eggs should be at room temperature. Only 25 should be cooked at a time in one utensil. Place eggs in a wire basket and lower into boiling water. (Start counting time then.) Leave over direct heat until water resumes boiling. Cover and remove from heat. Allow 3 to 4 minutes for soft-cooked; 5 to 8 minutes for medium-cooked; 15 to 20 minutes for hard-cooked. When eggs have cooked desired length of time raise wire basket and serve in bowls at once.

NOTE:

Eggs cook a little more after they are removed from water.

SCRAMBLED EGGS:

This amount will allow 25 4-oz. servings.

Forty-two eggs, 1 quart milk, 1 tablespoon salt, ½ teaspoon pepper, ½ lb. butter or margarine. Beat eggs slightly. Add milk and seasoning. Beat sufficiently to combine eggs, milk and seasoning. Melt butter in heavy pans on top of stove. Add eggs. Cook eggs slowly over low heat. As the egg cooks on the bottom, lift carefully with a spatula and allow the uncooked eggs to run under. Stir sparingly. Remove from heat while eggs are still soft. (Cooking continues for several minutes after removing from heat.) Serve immediately on hot platters.

This annual event is precious to our young folks and one of the reasons is because we invite our ministers and their wives. Everyone is dressed in their Easter best and are on their most mature behavior. It is also a great satisfaction to their counsellors.

WEDNESDAY

Dinner Menu

Ann Landers

Mean Grandma Shows Poor Judgment in Gift-Giving

ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANN LANDERS—My husband died a few years ago and I was left with two little boys. I married a fine man and we now have a son we call J. R. The problem is my husband's mother.

She showers J. R. with attention and gifts and completely ignores the other children. I can understand her feelings since J. R. is her only grandchild, but she goes out of her way to remind my two older boys that he is special. They just stand around and stare when grandma helps J. R. unwrap the lovely gifts she has bought for him.

My husband refuses to talk to his mother about this. I desperately need some advice. Can you help?—HOUSTON.

DEAR HOUSTON—Children do not attach as much importance to gifts as adults think. To them it is a monetary joy soon forgotten. It's how you treat children —day in and day out—that gives them a sense of security and well-being.

Of course, grandma's show of favoritism is thoughtless and mean, but it will have no lasting affect on the older boys (except that they are likely to despise her.)

If it will make you feel better, have some gifts wrapped and ready in the closet. When granny arrives with a present for J. R. hand the older boys a gift from you and dad.

CONFIDENTIAL TO HALF CUCKOO—I think your arithmetic is off. She sounds like a total nut to me. Since the woman refuses to get help, change your phone number and keep it out of the book.

* * *

CONFIDENTIAL TO HOG-TIED FOOL—Talk to your banker. He will explain the details. If you are on the note you are indeed responsible.

Are you going steady? Making marriage plans? If so, send for Ann Landers' booklet, "Before Your Marry—Is It Love or Sex?", enclosing with your request 25 cents in coin and a long, self-addressed envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a self-addressed envelope.

Likes Canada - - Married Farmer

DORIS CLARE

DEAR—I was glad to read the letter from Happy Stranger. In 1929 I was like the writer, but did not return for twenty-four years in 1953. It was nice seeing relatives and friends but I was quite glad to get back home to Canada.

I married a farmer 31 years ago and learned to bake bread, churn butter, harness my team and drive the hay wagon. I helped my husband in the bush. What is more, have many friends, some I met before marriage.

Sure, the first year in this community it took time to understand the people and they me. Were I left a widow I would not go back to England. It is up to ourselves whether we get along in Canada.—PURE ENGLISH.

DEAR PURE ENGLISH—So your New Land fulfilled its promise. And don't all of us have origins some place else?

DEAR DORIS—We are two 15-year-old girls who have often read articles about how to refuse dates. Usually we are told to "Just refuse politicly," but what about the guy who doesn't take "No" for an answer and asks "Why?"

We really don't know what to do in this situation since they are usually nice boys, but some just don't appeal to us and don't get the idea after four or five refusals.—C. AND J.

DEAR C. AND J.—If he doesn't appeal and you're sure he never will, it's good sense to refuse. If he persists, you will have to say you would rather not. Be firm and try not to hurt his feelings. But don't write to me later to say you've changed your mind and want to go out with him after all!

DEAR DORIS—Some girls write in to ask why a boy keeps looking at them and never speaks. It is on account of being hurt by these girls somewhere along the line. And he must be a kind guy, or he would have never felt hurt, as the average boy just doesn't give a hoot.

Now he dare not speak or make another move for fear of being hurt over again by this particular girl. So girls please look back and think when you wonder about that boy. Don't just smile when you meet, say "Hello" too. When you do get the chance to get together, he may still greet you with open arms and there will be tears in his kind eyes.—HURT.

DEAR HURT—Well, bless you for writing! I hope said girl will dry his tears.

Foxboro W.I. Lists New 1963 Officers

The annual meeting of the Foxboro Women's Institute was held at the home of Mrs. C. Bamber, who was in charge of the meeting.

It was decided to invite the district to hold the 1964 district annual in Foxboro.

Only three reports were handed in, "Agriculture and Canadian Industries," "Home Economics and Health," "Citizenship and Education," by the conveners.

The treasurer's report was given by Mrs. Bamber and was followed by the auditor's report by Mrs. B. Hollinger with some recommendations which should help future secretaries and treasurers or secretary-treasurers.

It was decided that the Foxboro Women's Institute and the United Church Women of Foxboro would combine to send flowers to Mrs. W. Simmons in Oshawa General Hospital.

EXECUTIVE REPORT

Mrs. C. H. LaRue gave a report of the executive meeting of the district annual which she had attended. Also a thought-provoking motto. "Forget the Mistakes of the Past and Prers on to Higher Achievement."

Twenty members were present and paid their dues for the coming year; also two members who were unable to be present sent their dues.

Some community singing was led by Mrs. Rombough, and a reading by Mrs. M. B. Shorey made up the short program.

Mrs. Trupp, Mrs. Rombaugh, Mrs. Bamber and Mrs. J. Reynolds are to be the delegates to the district in Tweed in May.

Mrs. W. L. Johnston was secretary for the nominations, the report of the nominating committee was accepted. Mrs. La Rue installed the new officers as follows: past president — Mrs. C. Bamber; president — Mrs. I. Trupp; 1st vice-president — Mrs. J. Reynolds; 2nd vice-president — Mrs. A. Calvert; secretary — Mrs. M. C. Jamieson; treasurer — Mrs. F. Prindle, district director — Mrs. C. Bamber; branch directors — Mrs. P. Kilpatrick, Mrs. W. Rombough and Mrs. C. Hubble; pianists — Mrs. R. Skinner, Mrs. A. Reilly; flowers — Mrs. W. Rombough; cards — Mrs. G. (Pat) Schell; auditors — Mrs. L. Carter and Mrs. R. Groh.

Conveners: home economics and health — Mrs. M. B. Shorey; agriculture and Canadian industries — Mrs. G. Gay; citizenship and education — Mrs. B. Hollinger; historical research — Mrs. E. Dafoe; resolutions — Mrs. R. Skinner; Tweedmuir history curator — Mrs. C. Hubble; County Home representatives — Mrs. P. Kilpatrick, Mrs. C. Bamber; public relations officer — Mrs. W. L. Johnston.

Following the installation of officers Mrs. Trupp took charge of the meeting and opened with prayer.

Mrs. La Rue presented Mrs. Bamber with a membership badge on behalf of the Foxboro Women's Institute, in recognition of her two years as president.

Following the usual closing a delicious lunch was served by the hostess and lunch committee, and a social time was enjoyed after a most profitable evening.

Foxboro W.I. Concludes Euchre Parties

The final euchre party of the season, sponsored by the Foxboro Women's Institute, was held in the school auditorium on Thursday evening. Only seven tables were in play but an enjoyable evening was spent by those present.

The prize winners were: ladies' high, Mrs. L. Lewis; Mrs. W. L. Johnston; low, Mrs. E. McCaughen. Men's high, Mrs. C. Hubble (playing as a man); 2nd Mr. L. Lewis; men's low, C. Bamber.

The lucky cup at lunch was used by Janice Vader.

The Foxboro Women's Institute thanks all who made the parties so successful.

SPEAKING of MANNERS

PATRICIA LEWIS

MAIL CALL

Question: Two unmarried girl friends of mine have just purchased a new home. Another friend and I would like to give them a housewarming. Here are some questions I'd like to have answered:

Should the housewarming be given at my home or at the new home of my friends?

Do I send out written invitations, or can this be done by telephone?

Is this type of party like a shower and should guests bring gifts? What sort of food should be served? May we provide sandwiches, coffee and cake? — Mrs. R. M. M., Methuen, Mass.

Answer: Once your friends are fairly well settled in their new home, the housewarming may be given there. Invitations may be extended verbally, or by printed invitation. Be sure to include the address where the party is to be held. If you want guests to answer the invitation include R.S.V.P., and note your own address and phone number underneath. Guests needn't feel obliged to bring a present, but most do when the word "housewarming" is included in the invitation.

Sandwiches, coffee, small cakes and maybe a bowl of punch would be correct to serve. Service may be buffet-style, which is easiest and most practical when entertaining a large group. If the party is held around lunch time or in the evening, you might want to add cold meats, salad and a hot casserole to the snack menu so that guests can eat as lightly or as heartily as they want, depending on when they arrive and how long they stay.

study NATO defences.

In addition to these commitments, both Prime Minister Diefenbaker and Liberal Leader Pearson promised in the campaign that Parliament would be called in May.

NEED BUDGET

It will be confronted with the massive problem of approving a new budget, authorizing a spending program, and passing legislation to meet situations needing parliamentary action soon. These include shoring up the nearly bankrupt unemployment insurance fund, redistributing Commons seats on the basis of shifts in population recorded in the 1961 census, and easing the effect of railway branch line abandonments on small communities across the country.

The size of the national budget will depend to a large extent on the defence program worked out in the NATO meeting, and government revenues may be affected by decisions taken in trade questions by GATT and the Commonwealth ministers.

The new Parliament also will have a backlog of financial work left undone before the election. Governor - General's warrants for expenditures which were not covered by appropriations must be tabled. No appropriations were passed for the fiscal year which ended last March 31, though all the money has been spent under interim supply bills and the warrants.

HAD BUDGET READY

Mr. Diefenbaker said inthe campaign that the government had its budget for 1963-64 ready to be presented to the Commons by the end of February. If he retains office, he may want to make some amendments to the budget before it is presented. If Mr. Pearson takes over, it is likely the Liberals will want to make some mire basic revisions.

Mr. Diefenbaker promised to make pay increases for the armed forces, postal workers, customs officers and similar civil servants retroactive to last Oct. 1. Mr. Pearson is likely to do the same.

Mr. Diefenbaker said a special fund would be set up to ease the impact of branch line abandonments. Mr. Pearson said a fresh study would be made of the whole question.

The unemployment insurance fund, which had $208,000,000 in 1956, has been drained away by winter unemployment and extended benefits.

Sir Winston

plate with high satisfaction the constant factor of the interwoven and upward progress of our peoples. Our comradeship and our brotherhood in war were unexampled. We stood together and because of that fact the free world now stands.

"Nor has our partnership any fairs" that the former prime exclusive basis—the Atlantic minister of a great sovereign community is a dream that can state should be received as an well be fulfilled to the detriment honorary citizen of another. of none and to the enduring benefit and honor of the great democracies."

Sir Winston called it "a remarkable comment on our affairs" that the former prime minister of a great sovereign state should be received as an honorary citizen of another. Then with an obvious fling at those who think his country may be sinking into a second-rate role on the world stage, Mr. Churchill said it was with design and emphasis that he spoke of the "great sovereign state." "For I reject the view," he said, "that Britain and the Commonwealth should now be relegated to a tame and minor role in the world. Our past is the key to our future, which I firmly trust and believe will be no less fertile and glorious. Let no man underrate our energies, our potentialities and our abiding power for good."

Kennedy signed on his office desk, with 11 ceremonial pens, the bill in which Congress directed him to proclaim that Churchill is an honorary citizen of the United States.

"In naming him an honorary citizen," Kennedy said of Churchill, "I only propose a formal recognition of the place he has long since won in the history of freedom and in the affections of my, and now his, fellow countrymen."

Pope Urges

posal, such as a police force.

Nations were "right in not easily yielding in obedience to an authority imposed by force, or to an authority in whose creation they had no part, or to which they themselves did not decide to submit by conscious and free choice."

But the Pope said a supranational world authority must be considered because national leaders in the modern world are "on a footing of equality" and are "no longer capable of facing the task of finding an adequate solution to the problems."

The encyclical—or papal circuit letter—was the first of 200 encyclicals issued since 1740 to be devoted exclusively to a systematic analysis of peace in all its aspects — political, social, theoretical, theological and practical.

It also was the first papal encyclical in history specifically addressed to non-Catholics as well as Catholics.

SEATO Plans

gram had run into serious trouble and that doubts were being expressed that France could go through with its plans for an independent nuclear force.

On the second day of the SEATO ministerial council meeting, speaker after speaker blamed the Red Chinese for instigating the latest crisis in Laos where a delicately-poised peace settlement is in peril.

On the NATO salient, there were signs that de Gaulle may be reappraising France's attitude of stand-offishness in the western alliance.

Qualified French officials said they expected that NATO foreign ministers—due to meet in Ottawa May 22 to 24—will agree to set up an inter-allied nuclear force. This would comprise self-contained national contingents carrying nuclear weapons of different kinds, from U.S. Polaris - carriers and British V-bombers to West German and Italian tactical atomic artillery units.

Comrade Elsie Donaldson, Trenton, presented a fellow Vimy veteran, Everett Liddle, with a life membership to Belleville Branch 99, Royal Canadian Legion following the Vimy banquet held in the Legion Hall last evening. The presentation was made in recognition of the many years Mr. Liddle has served on the Poppy Committee in this city.

Vimy Veterans Honored at Legion Dinner

"Young men stay in the Legion and stay united", was the closing statement of Comrade Elsie Donaldson's address, guest speaker at the Vimy Banquet held last evening in the Branch 99 Legion Hall, to honor 27 Vimy veterans.

The speaker, who served in the battle-fields of Belgium and France including the famous Vimy Ridge, is 1st vice-president of Branch 110 Trenton, vividly recalled the union of the four Canadian Divisions whose attack at Vimy turned the tide of the First Great War. "These same men" he said, "originally laid the foundation for the legion, by first meeting at a Vimy night and through several separate clubs finally combined to form the present day Legion.

In 1918, Mr. Donaldson reminded the gathering, that the soldiers returned to Canada with the problem of re-establishing themselves as civilians without the assistance of D.V.A., or any other veterans organization. These organizations were all formed by the Legion to aid those returning from the second war.

Comrade Everett Liddle who was presented with a life-membership by Mr. Donaldson on behalf of Branch 99, introduced the speaker who was thanked by Garn Dobbs and given a token of Branch 99's appreciation by Ed Smith.

Before the closing by Norman Hardwick, president of the Belleville Branch, Jack Rachette from Tweed representing the Zone presented Leslie Digby with the past president's pin and badge The Vimy veterans were then seated together at the head table and were called upon to introduce themselves by Roy Sheldon.

The remainder of the evening was spent viewing a World War Two film and a sing-song with Comrade Olive Schmidt of Branch 587, at the piano.

PCs Can't Win Canadians All the Time by Sneering At Uncle Sam Says Tribune

NEW YORK (CP) — Lester B. Pearson is congratulated by the New York Herald Tribune today for providing a "blistering reminder that the Progressive Conservatives cannot win Canadians all the time by sneering at Uncle Sam."

In two forthright editorials devoted to the federal election in Canada Monday, The Herald Tribune accuses Prime Minister Diefenbaker of "political bigotry" but says nevertheless that the United States has treated Diefenbaker and Canada shabbily.

"A calculated campaign of insult could not have been much worse than the shabby treatment the United States has been giving Canada," the newspaper says. "Whatever Mr. Diefenbaker's faults, he deserved better."

The first of the two editorials applauds Pearson's victory by saying he "took John Diefenbaker's anti-American slogans and hurled them back into the prime minister's teeth."

This editorial is headlined, "Yank, don't go home."

The second, directly below the first, carries the headline, "We have treated Canada shabbily." Blame for this is laid in turn in the lap of President Kennedy, Defence Secretary McNamara, and the state department.

SEES INSULTS

The newspaper says the first insult was President Kennedy's appeal to the Canadian Parliament, "over Prime Minister Diefenbaker's head," to join the hemisphere "in an alliance for economic progress."

The Times says in an editorial that because no party received a majority, Canada "again faces a period of weak and precarious government."

It adds, however, that the United States "can take satisfaction in the big gains made by the friendly 'Mike' Pearson and the losses sustained by John Diefenbaker, who waged such a stridently anti-American campaign."

The Daily News, which has the largest circulation of any U.S. newspaper — about 2,000,000 — says the election shows that Canadians remain friendly with the United States "despite the state department's recent strenuous effort to alienate them . . ."

The News editorial expresses delight "that so many Canadian voters refused to buy anti-Americanism in this election. But, like The Times, it concludes:

"We can't help reflecting sadly . . . that if the state department had kept it's everready yap shut about Canadian defences, Mr. Pearson might well have won far more handsomely than he did."

Minor Parties Hold Key To Future of Parliament; Emerge With Firm Grasp

OTTAWA (CP) — Although political office eluded the Social Credit and New Democratic parties in Monday's general election, they emerged with a firm grasp on political power.

Some observers in Ottawa contend that the two parties hold the key to future political developments, including Prime Minister Diefenbaker's choice between meeting the 265-seat House of Commons with his outnumbered hand of 96 Conservatives or resigning to make way for the 128 - member Liberal group headed by Lester B. Pearson.

Others, including men known to be close to the prime minister, look for him to resign after announcement of service vote results this weekend. One put it: "I know him well enough to know that he'll do the right thing—and the right thing is to avoid an alliance with those two parties."

Those who feel that the decision really rests with the two smaller groups—24 Social Credit and 17 NDP—say that there are two precedents to guide the Prime Minister in the present situation.

The first Mr. Diefenbaker himself cited at Prince Albert election night when he mentioned that the late Mackenzie King retained office after the 1925 election when his Liberals won 101 seats in the 245-seat house against 116 Conservatives, 24 Progressives and four others.

COUNTED ON SUPPORT

Mr. King acted on the grounds that he could count on the support of the Progressives and the Conservatives couldn't.

The second precedent was in 1957 when the Conservatives won 112 seats and toppled the Liberals from office after 22 years in power. The Liberals elected 105 members, the CCF 25, Social Credit 19 and others four in the 265-seat house.

One man close to the political situation stresses that Liberal Prime Minister St. Laurent did not announce his intention of resigning in favor of the Conservatives until after leaders of the two smaller groups expressed their views.

Both CCF Leader M. J. Coldwell and Social Credit Leader Solon Low called on Mr. St. Laurent to resign.

Observers don't profess to know whether those statements alone inspired the decision. But they are quick to say that Mr. St. Laurent couldn't continue in office without the support of one or the other. If either or both translated their resignation calls into firm action in the Commons, the Liberals could not have survived.

SET PRECEDENT

The 1945 election established a precedent like that of 1925. That time, Mr. King's Liberals won 118 of 245 seats against 66 Conservatives, 28 CCF, 13 Social Credit and 20 others. Again, Mr. King counted on support of enough of the others to command the house and remained in office until dissolution for an election four years later. Several of the others entered the Liberal caucus to bring the party up to majority strength.

Social Credit Leader Robert Thompson told reporters on his arrival here Tuesday night that Mr. Diefenbaker may have the constitutional authority to hold onto office until Parliament meets, but he does not have the "technical or moral right" to do so.

Mr. Thompson and T. C. Douglas of the New Democrats said during the election campaign that if the result was inconclusive, they would support the largest group in the Commons.

Girl Bravely Tried to Douse Flames

KITCHENER (CP)—A seven-year-old girl was dragged from her parents' blazing apartment by her elder brother Tuesday after she bravely tried to douse the flames with buckets of water.

Fire swept through the storetop apartment after Dolores, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Earle Kuntz, had been left alone when a baby-sitter became ill and went home.

Darrell Kuntz, 9, found Dolores fighting the flames with buckets of water when he returned home from school and dragged her from the apartment.

Fire Chief Ken Putnam said Dolores came within a "hair-breadth of death" through either suffocation or flames.

"Her brother got her in the nick of time," he said.

The apartment was destroyed, causing damage estimated by firemen at $4,000. The store was damaged.

Children Form Human Wall Around Stray

MALLORYTOWN, Ont. (CP) A dozen children formed a human wall around a stray mongrel early Tuesday to stall police efforts to shoot the dog.

Provincial police arrived in this St. Lawrence River village, 12 miles west of Brockville, under orders to kill the animal as a dangerous stray. They had been trying to capture Spike, a part-German shepherd, for 10 days.

But the children refused to let the police near enough to Spike to catch him. The children's parents have been feeding the animal.

"Spike is not a bad dog," said Roderick Kelly, one of the children, after the police had retired. "He likes us kids."

Another boy, Bruce McPherson, used his allowance to buy a license for Spike and remove him from the stray category, and storekeepers Mrs. William Judd has offered the dog a home.

Spike moved into the back yard of a resident and has carefully remained on private property since the incident.

Sport Slices...

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

They're lifting 'em in the ring; they're "mayhemming" them on hockey cushions; occasionally a golfer gets clipped by a flying gesture toe-ball and athletes in general are allegedly getting the worst of things physically.

All except baseball. The big boys of the sport tell you that baseball, like polo is a gentleman's game, sans horses of course, and that no king-size ballplayer will go beyond verbal beration of an opponent or official.

Unlike hockey where a two-man brawl that goes less than three rounds is called simply roughing, baseball regards such trivial things as an upflung spike, an elbow or a blocked base-path, as accidental.

But in the halycon days of five-cent beer, player-pianos, strawberry blondes, skimmers, the charleston, and the New York Giants, 'twas not ever thus.

The late John J. McGraw, the pudgy, capsule-formed manager of the "Jints" of those days loved a fight. He and his chip-on-the-shoulder ball players counted that day lost when they did not bop somebody or get bopped.

And history tells us, it was not infrequently that it was John J. that bopped somebody or got bopped by somebody, usually the latter. For he was young and quick on the trigger so to speak and being an indifferent marksman became an excellent target for the opposing bopper.

His belligerent spirit was catching. His players were vulnerable and they "caught on" with more or less alacrity. They never said "No Frank" when someone offered to bop them, just bopped the would-be-bopper before he could swing, dusted their hands and went for a beer.

Take Charley Herring of the McGraw College of Giants. He being of the gentlemanly school did not like public appearances so after an altercation on the diamond with one Tyrus Raymond Cobb, invited the Georgia Peach to his hotel room where with only two witnesses present fought a bare-knuckled duel that had the walls rocking and rolling in approval.

On another occasion the Giants team formed a ring on the diamond while Arthur Devlin and Al Bridwell fought a local fan one after the other. The fan was pretty good. A Giants' training trip saw fights in every town they visited. McGraw loved it. So did the Giants.

Jawn had several encounters with opposing players, not to mention umpires. One time he was fined $1,000 for calling the president of the National League names that do not appear in Mr. Webster's tome. He insulted other club owners in public and was not scared of the following "hot water."

And his Giants followed his example. They figured they owned the earth, and went rearing into towns looking for trouble, a commodity that isn't hard to find if you're seeking it. They had to leave ball parks under the protection of the law and occasionally slung husky rights to legal pusses if no other law arms were around.

McGraw led his belligerent Giants deriding the fans of hostile towns by word and gesture, barking at umpires through cupped hands from the third base line and spread ing discord over the battle field.

He was a great leader and a mighty truculent little man by nature. He ignited flaming fuses and encouraged his Giants to do that which the fans loved it. In fact the battle-seeking Gothamites used to outdraw any club in the country on the road. The fans went to see them start a fight—and the Giants seldom failed them.

McGraw was an aggressive man and thought the meaning of the word "aggressive" was to step on the other guy's foot then bust him in the beak. The Giants thought so too.

But between brawls, fights, arguments, and whatnot you should have seen the pennants they won.

Leafs Nip Wings 4-2 In Cup Opener

By BILL MacDOUGALL

TORONTO (CP) — Some extra homework apparently taught Bob Nevin a good habit, one that helped shoot Toronto Maple Leafs into a one-game lead in their Stanley Cup final against Detroit Red Wings Tuesday night.

Leafs manager-coach Punch Imlach kept Nevin after class at a practice session Monday, ordering the lean right winger to shoot pucks at the net for 15 minutes straight. Imlach was unhappy over Nevin's lack of goal production in recent games.

Tuesday night Nevin won at least an interim diploma, firing Toronto's third and fourth goals as they dumped the Red Wings 4-2 in the opener of the best-of-seven series.

Dick Duff also scored twice for Leafs.

BIG M HURT

All was not sunshine for the Leafs. Detroit defenceman Bill Gadsby checked Jeff winger Frank Mahovlich in the first period and the Leafs' big gun went to hospital with a knee injury. The extent of his injury or how long he might be out was not to be known until later today.

Talking of Nevin's extra shooting drill, Imlach said he was glad it was Nevin get the goals "because I had been giving him the blazes."

"I made him shoot for 15 minutes until he got tired of shooting. It may have helped tonight, but I don't think so. He was just due."

Nevin, quietly accepting congratulations after the game, showed no visible excitement although he didn't get a point in the Leafs' five-game semi-final series against Montreal Canadiens.

"I've been getting lots of chances, but they just haven't been going in," he said. "Tonight they just went in."

Duff who scored his goals 19 seconds apart, the first when the game was only 46 seconds old, had similar remarks.

NOT ALL SO EASY

"Heck, if a few goals had gone in for me like that earlier, I would have had 25 or 35 over the season," he said. He had 16.

Duff credited defensive minuses by Detroit for his goals. "On the first one Doug Barkley left the puck along the boards and Davey (Keon), fed it ahead to me," said Duff, who beat Detroit goaltender Terry Sawchuk with a 30-foot shot on the play.

Barkley also gafe Tim Horton for the second goal at 1:08. "He just handed it to me at their blueline and I flipped it beneath Sawchuk's glove."

Nevin made it 3-0 at 14:42 of the first period with some assistance from another Detroit defenceman, bad boy Howie Young. With Leaf gafe Tim Horton in the penalty box, Nevin stole the puck from between Young's skates, cut in on Sawchuk from the left side and beat him from close in.

CASHES OWN REBOUND

Jeffrey, who scored one goal in Detroit's semi-final against Chicago Black Hawks, got both his goals in the second period. Toronto goaltender Johnny Bower stopped a long shot by Jeffrey with his skate but the puck dropped to the ice between his legs. Before he could spot it, Jeffrey poked it into the net.

At 8:05, with Leaf defenceman Bob Baun in the penalty box, Gordie Howe put Jeffrey in the clear with a perfect pass and the winger fired a 15-foot shot into a corner.

Nevin scored his second goal at 5:08 of the third period, steering Bob Pulford's long shot under a falling Sawchuk.

Even Casey Goofed

Mets Wackier Than "Bums"

By JIM BECKER

NEW YORK (AP)—The tip off came early. The British won the battle of Bunker Hill.

Then Casey Stengel held the floral wreath upside down. And the band finished four bars ahead of the singer in the national anthem.

After that, the new Mets took the field, widely advertised as the group that would make the fans forget about 1962 when they were widely considered the worst baseball team of all time.

The Cards won 7-0.

A much larger crowd than was expected, 35,903, turned out. It appeared to be made up entirely of loser lovers, that odd new breed uncovered by the 1962 Mets who drew nearly 1,000,000 although they won only 40 games.

GIRLS DO BATTLE

Three bands entertained them before the game, including an enormous group of leggy high school girls who re-enacted the battle of Bunker Hill, perhaps with insufficient rehearsal.

At any rate the British won it in a walk.

Then Casey Stengel got a big wreath of flowers, with a good luck ribbon attached. He clutched it wrong side up, and posed for photographers with his head stuck in the middle.

When the game got underway, Curt Flood, the first batter, chopped a little squibber down the third base line on the second pitch. Charlie Neal charged it and threw it about ten yards wide of first base. Flood wound up on second, eventually scored and the Cards led 2-0 before the Mets could swing a bat.

The Mets also messed up a pickoff play at second base. They threw to the wrong base, often widely. They committed three balks. A hard smash bounced off the shins of new first baseman Tim Harkness into the hands of new second baseman Larry Burright, who threw the ball over old pitcher Roger Craig's head. It was scored a hit. Craig fell down fielding a ball. The Mets messed up foul pops and grounders.

And Marvelous Marv Throneberry struck out.

SIGN JACKSON

OTTAWA (CP) — Ottawa Rough Riders of the Eastern Football Conference announced Tuesday the signing of all-star quarterback Russ Jackson and added they are dickering for the services of centre linebacker John Conroy of Montreal Alouettes. This will be the sixth big four season for Jackson, all with Ottawa. Terms of his contract were not announced.

Cleveland Indians, with an assist from the Royal Canadian Air Force and plus 88K, are away winging, winning their opener with a four-homer salvo as the American League baseball season began to run full throttle.

Using "ballplayers nobody ever heard of," the Indians belted 20-game winner Camilo Pascual solidly Tuesday for a 5-4 opening day victory over Minnesota Twins that had new manager Birdie Tebbetts chirping.

Tebbetts borrowed the 11-minute RAF calisthenic program from the RCAF and instituted it in spring training to get the Indians prepared for a quick getaway. There is no doubt his "robedics" got away quick.

They include Jim Grant, who pitched a seven - hitter and homer hitters Leon Wagner, John Romano, rookie Max Alvis and newly acquired Fred Whitfield.

Joe Pepitone paced New York Yankees, cracking two homers and a double in support of Ralph Terry's six-hit pitching as the world champions got started with an 8-3 triumph over the Athletics at Kansas City.

In other AL openers, Chicago White Sox edged Detroit Tigers 2-1 behind Montreal native Pete Ward and Floyt Wilhelm and Los Angeles Angels defeated Boston Red Sox 6-1 behind ex McBride's four-hitter. Baltimore and Washington, who opened Monday, were not scheduled.

The Indians' first three runs came on solo homers by Rowano, Whitfield and Alvis. Then, in the seventh with the score tied 3-3, Alvis led off with a double and Held crushed a 415 - foot homer. Grant was touched for solo homers by Lenny Green and Vic Power.

Pepitone's slugging paved the way for Terry against the As, who seemed to have little going for them besides tradition-breaking green and gold uniforms. Elston Howard also homered for the Yankees. Bill Bryan and newcomer Chuck Hagan connected for the As.

Ward lined a three-run homer in the seventh inning off loser Jim Bunning, wiping out a 3-1 Detroit lead and Wilhelm came on and relired the last nine men in a row to protect Frank Bauman's victory.

The Angels wrapped it up against Red Sox starter Bill Monbouquette with a four-run fifth inning capped by Lee Thomas's three-run homer. Carl Yastrzemski's homer in the seventh ended McBride's shutout bid.

Better Than 1962 'Shell-Shocked Bunch'

Caseymen Not 'Collectively Together'

By JOE REICHLER

NEW YORK (AP) — "The trouble with this here ball club of mine was that the individual players didn't work collectively together as a team the way they did in spring training."

Who else but Casey Stengel could make such a bewildering statement and still keep his audience in rapt attention?

The 72-year-old New York manager had just sat through a three-hour National Baseball League opening game Tuesday in which his New York Mets absorbed a 7-0 licking from St. Louis Cardinals.

This inept performance by the Mets was a terrible disappointment to an opening day crowd of 25,849 which had hoped the 1963 edition would show an improvement over last year's cellar dwellers.

Stengel was keenly disappointed, too.

The old man stumped around in the little cubbyhole that passes off for his room deep in the polo grounds, looked challengingly at his interviewer and said:

"Now you may not believe this, but my club is better than it looked today. It's tremendously improved over the shell-shocked bunch I had last year when we couldn't give 'em away.

"Now we can sell at least six of them right now."

Apparently Casey did not feel he had convinced himself, because he added quickly, "This club had better be better. If not, I'll sure as heck drop-kick some of these guys off the ball club."

In truth this year's version of the Mets didn't look any better than the sad outfit that lost 120 of 160 games last year.

The Mets got only two hits off Ernie Broglio, committed two errors and their pitchers were guilty of three balks.

Bulldogs Hawks Both Confident

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — Neither coach Harry Watson of the Windsor Bulldogs, nor playing-coach Doug McPhee of the Moncton Hawks will concede the opposition an inch in the current Eastern Canada Allan Cup final series.

The best-of-seven set is tied at 1-1, and the third game is on tap tonight. To date, it has been the outstanding play of Moncton goaltender Jean-Guy Morissette and the over-all strength of the Windsor club that has produced the series deadlock.

Windsor has outshot the Maritimers 105-52, and they outscored them 8-5, but Morissette's brilliance threatened to steal both games until the Hawks went sour in the second period of Monday's second contest.

McPhee, with a number of minor injuries plaguing his charges, contends "my players have not been skating as well as they can, but it will be different tonight."

He slammed his club through an hour-long drill Tuesday morning, just 10 hours after they absorbed a 6-2 lacing at the hands of the 'dogs, and is determined to step up the tempo of his club's attack.

Watson, on the other hand, it satisfied with the performance of his Ontario championship club.

"If we keep skating and shooting the way we have been, that little guy (Morissette) can't keep us from scoring some," Watson said.

Lead Series 3-1

Quakers Whip Maroons

WINNIPEG (CP) — Saskatoon Quakers beat Winnipeg Maroons 7-5 Tuesday night to take a 3-1 game lead in the best-of-seven Western Allan Cup hockey final.

The next game is here tonight when the Quakers will be trying to clinch the series. Saskatoon took the first two games on home ice, dropping the third to Winnipeg Sunday. The sixth and seventh games, if necessary, will be played Friday and Saturday at Saskatoon.

Jackie McLeod and Jerry Toppazzini starred for the Quakers, scoring a pair each. George Senick, Herb Jeffrey and Maurice Ottebro had the Saskatoon singles.

Tom Marshall scored twice for the Maroons, with Fred Dunsmore, Reg Abbott and Gary Aldcorn getting single goals.

Western Hockey

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

San Francisco Seals, with a third - period burst, whipped Portland Buckaroos 5-2 Tuesday night to even their best-of-seven Western Hockey League Southern Division final at one game apiece.

The Seals led 1-0 after the first period and 2-1 going into the third.

Danny Belisle, who has three goals and four assists in the playoffs, scored for the winners, as did Ray Cyr, Al Nicholson, Duke Edmundson and Larry McNabb.

Tommy McVie and Gerry Coyer replied for the Buckaroos.

The Northern Division finals open tonight with Seattle Totems travelling to Vancouver to play the Canucks in the first game of a best-of-seven set.

SUNNY JIM TO QUIT

NEW YOR (AP)—James E. (Sunny Jim) Fitzsimmons, the famed trainer who saddled two triple crown champions and more than 2,000 winners, is retiring in June. The 88-year-old gentleman of racing, known affectionately as Mr. Fitz and Sunny Jim to several generations of racing followers, decided finally to call it quits because he was finding "the work increasingly burdsome."

Ford Ready, Will Start At Home

KANSAS CITY (AP)—Whitey Ford's shoulder miseries have vanished. Manager Ralph Houk heaved a sigh of relief Tuesday and named Ford as his starting pitcher for Thursday when the world champion New York Yankees open their home season at Yankee Stadium against the Baltimore Orioles.

"Whitey worked three innings Sunday and his shoulder didn't bother him when he warmed up Monday," said Houk. "I wanted to wait and see how he felt Tuesday before I made it official."

Ford, 34, had a 17-8 record last season and was 25-4 in 1961 when he won the Cy Young award as the majors' outstanding pitcher.

He pitched only a few innings in the spring exhibition games because his left shoulder tightened up after a workout in late March.

Harness Driver Suspended

TORONTO (CP) — Driver-trainer Murray Waples, 34, of Coldwater, Ont., was suspended for 60 days Tuesday night after an investigation into the doping of the trotter Mary Louise at Greenwood Raceway.

Mary Louise, owned by Denton Johnson of Peterborough, won the eighth race at Greenwood last Thursday, paying $18.20.

A subsequent urine test showed a drug of the nature of caffeine had been used, a report from provincial analyst Ralph Bull said.

Waples operates a public stable with his brother Keith, who drove Tie Silk to victory last year in the $50,000 International Trot at New York.

Waples said later he plans to appeal the penalty.

Pitching—Ernie Broglio, Cardinals, allowed only two hits, setting 20 batters down in order from the second to ninth innings in a 7-0 victory over New York Mets.

Batting—Joe Pepitone, Yankees, hit two homers and double as world champions won opener 9-2 at Kansas City.

Japanese Swimmers Set Marks

VANCOUVER (CP) — Japanese swimmers helped lower several Canadian records at a meet here Tuesday night.

At the same time, Louise Kennedy of London, Ont., broke one record and won the three events she entered.

The meet was arranged by the British Columbia Swimming Association for 12 Japanese swimmers making an international tour to get experience for next year's Olympics.

Shigeru Kuwahara led the Japanese by setting a Canadian 100-metre freestyle record in the 15-14 age group of 1:02.3.

Miss Kennedy set a 100-metre backstroke mark in the same group with 1:16.9.

Giants Corral Colts, Dodgers Win

Mays Leads Homer Parade

By JIM BECKER
Associated Press Sports Writer

The National League baseball pennant chase got under way in earnest Tuesday and these were the results on the first full day of action:

Don Drysdale, a 25-game winner last year, won for Los Angeles Dodgers 5-1 over Chicago Cubs.

Jack Sanford, who had 24 wins in 1962, got the victory for San Francisco Giants as Willie Mays, Orlando Cepeda, Felipe Alou and Willie McCovey homered for the Giants in a 9-2 romp against Houston Colts.

Art Mahaffey, with 19 wins last year, set down Cincinnati Reds 2-1 on four hits for Philadelphia Phillies.

And New York Mets, with 120 losses last year, were blanked 7-0 by St. Louis Cardinals.

Pittsburgh Pirates, who dropped the annual day-ahead opener Monday at Cincinnati to the Reds, had a 3-2 victory over Milwaukee Braves.

WILLS HURTS ANLE

The Dodger victory may have been costly. Shortstop Maury Wills, the league's most valuable player last year, left after the sixth inning with a jammed left ankle and was a doubtful starter for today's game with the Cubs.

Wills, who stole 104 bases last season, said before the game he had become worried about his legs and had gone to a hypnotist during the winter to try to get the worries off his mind. Wills apparently hurt the ankle in the third inning when he was thrown out at the plate on a double play.

Drysdale gave up 11 hits but was helped by three double plays. The Dodgers broke a 1-1 tie in the sixth when Willie Davis tripled and scored on a balk by pitcher Larry Jackson. Rookie Ken McMullen iced the game with a two-run double in the sixth.

The Giants jumped off to a 6-0 lead at Houston. Cepeda's homer in the second opened the scoring and Sanford tripled home two runs in the same inning.

Sanford departed in the sixth after giving up three straight singles. Jack Fisher pitched hitless relief.

Mahaffey, a hard-throwing right-hander, had a two-hit shutout going into the ninth. Frank Robinson opened that inning for the Reds with a single and moved to second on a groundout. Robinson scored when catcher John Edwards smashed a line double.

ENDS THE GAME

Mahaffey then struck out Gene Freese and rookie Tom Harper to end the game.

Joey Jay, 21-14 last season, gave up five hits in the seven innings he worked. Three singles, with Don Demeter's coming with two out, scored the first Phillie run in the fourth. In the sixth, John Callison doubled and scored when Cincinnati first baseman Gordie Coleman let a double-play relay throw get through him for an error.

The Mets, the worst 10th-place team in history last year, fumbled the ball in the field and were woeful at bat as Ernie Broglio set them down with two hits. Larry Burright got both, a single in the first inning and a double in the ninth Broglio retired 30 Mets in a row.

A newcomer, third baseman Bob Bailey, whose bonus has been estimated in the $175,000 area, sparkled for the Pirates. He hit a homer and a crucial single.

The Pirates won in the ninth off reliever Bob Hendley when Bill Virdon singled with two out and Bailey beat out a slow roller for a hit. Then pinch-hitter Ted Savage struck the winning blow, a single. ElRoy Face, who pitched out of a bases-loaded, none-out jam in the ninth, got the win in relief.

Ottawa Will Play For Cup

By STUART LAKE

OTTAWA (CP) — It's Memorial Cup or bust for Ottawa Montagnards, Ottawa district junior hockey champions.

Monties have turned thumbsdown on a Canadian Amateur Hockey Association decision that the Ottawa district, Maritimes and Quebec branches be declared out of the running for Dominion junior hockey honors and compete instead for a yet-unnamed Eastern Canada trophy.

As a result of their strong opposition to the decision, the CAHA now is trying to fit either Monties or Maritimes champions Charlottetown Penguins into the Memorial Cup picture.

Monties and Penguins open a best-of-five series here tonight. All games will be played in the Ottawa Auditorium.

Ottawa Manager Ross Tyrell says he understands that the Ottawa-Charlottetown winner now will have the right to challenge the winner of the series between the Ontario and Northern Ontario Hockey Association champion for the Eastern Canada title and the right to meet the Western champion.

RED PONIES ARRIVE

NEW YORK (AP)—Two Russian horses, Zadacha and Villa, entered in the $45,000 Trans-Oceanic Trot April 18 at Yonkers Raceway, arrived at Idlewild airport Tuesday on a cargo airliner from Berlin. The two six-year-old mares were taken to the quarantine station at Clifton, N.J., for a check before being sent to the race track.

During Grand Opera Season Singer Allowed One Mistake

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP)—The television documentary and public affairs show has developed into a vehicle to explore the big, serious, important issue. And although many of them are well done, the viewer wishes they could be lightened occasionally by humor or by a subject less vital than life or death.

The CBS news department promises just such a program Thursday night. Called In the Mouth of the World, it is a documentary about Parma, Italy, whose passion for knowledge about opera can be compared with Brooklyn's former feelings about the Dodgers.

During Parma's grand opera season, a performer is allowed one mistake. Groans are heard after a second and if there are three, the unhappy singer is whistled off stage. Everyone is a self-styled expert.

Jay Sheers, the CBS producer who prowled through the operamad community to make the program, is fascinated by "things that get people excited beyond all reasonable standards."

AT THE PARK — Gordon Scott leads in the title role in "Samson and the Seven Miracles of the World," American International's spectacular production opening Thursday at the Park Theatre. On the same program "Varan — The Unbelievable", a thriller. Both features are first showings. Special Matinee Good Friday starts at 1.30 p.m.

NBC plans an eight - week summer series. The Lively Ones, to replace Hazel for a half-hour on Thursday nights from the end of July to mid-September, when the Shirley Booth comedy show returns for a third year.

Last summer, The Lively Ones," a light, bright variety program, was a bright spot in the desert of reruns. Vic Damone was the star. The network wants him for the show again, but he has some conflicting nightclub engagements.

Recommended Tonight

Encyclopedia of Communism, NBC, 7:30-9 EST—last of a series on the Soviet way, with Chet Huntley narrating; In the Mouth of the Wolf, CBS, 7:30-8:30.

AT THE BELLE — That "Pillow Talk" girl is romancing Steve 'Ben Hur' Boyd in the big happiness picture starring Doris Day, America's No. 1 star in her new laugh 'n love loaded Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture "Jumbo", co-starring Jimmy Durante and Martha Raye. The big Panavision and color attraction, playing today, Friday and Saturday at the Belle Theatre, features seven Rodgers and Hart song hits.

AT THE PARK — Tsuruko Kobayashi and Myron Healy, co-stars of Crown-International's newest production, "Varan—The Unbelievable", are seen in a suspense-filled moment of terror in this action-packed thriller. The film opens Thursday at the Park Theatre. On the same program the Wonder picture of the year "Samson and the Seven Miracles of the World", starring Gordon Scott. Both features are first showings. A special matinee Good Friday starts at 1.30 p.m.

Pat Buttram Makes Top After 30 Years in Business

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Says Pat Buttram: "I" interviewed Walter Huston once, and he told me, 'Getting up to the top is a lot more fun than when you get there.' I'm beginning to see what he meant."

Pat is Hollywood's latest overnight sensation. That pleases him, especially since he has been in show business for 30 years. But it brings problems.

"I used to play any benefit that came along," he said. "Now I get so many offers I can't handle them all. And I've got to be careful. I've got to be funny every time, or else.

"I used to play a Friar's dinner and they'd put me on at the beginning of the speeches. I could tell a few jokes and get off. Now they put me next to closing, following guys like Jack Benny, George Burns, Dean Martin, Frank Sinatra and Joey Bishop. I spend the evening crossing off my jokes because they've already been used."

Pat's complaints are not to be taken too seriously. He's obviously pleased at reaching the bigtime after decades of playing third or fourth banana.

Unlike the Beverly Hills variety, he is an authentic hillbilly, hailing from rural Alabama.

He has signed with MGM for two pictures a year, the first being with Richard Chamberlain in Twilight of Honor. Ed Sullivan snapped him up for eight appearances in a year.

REAL ESTATE FOR SALE

STORY OF AN Outstanding Home

When a Montreal business man came to Belleville a few years ago to direct operations of a major company he was determined to build an outstanding home for his family.

To realize this ambition he selected a large lot in a residential area, purchased the finest skilled craftsmen and began construction by one of the soundest builders in the district.

Some of the many outstanding features are (1) PRIVACY in a lot measuring 100' x 180', enhanced by mature trees, shrubbery, and landscaping giving privacy and shade and scenic beauty from every window. (2) Spacious large dining area and kitchen with electric dishwasher overlooking a tree-shaded lawn with easy access to covered patios. (3) 27' x 12' master bedroom with wash basin, panelled wardrobe and 2 large closets. (4) Spacious kitchen with living space, 1,000 feet of floor area, with panelled dining area for four seats.

614 Victoria Avenue is conveniently the finest four-bedroom home in Belleville this fall. Inspection this fall has ever offered for sale.

WELLINGTON

111 at Scouts' Father-Son Banquet

WELLINGTON — The Wellington United Church Hall was the scene of the annual Boy Scouts and Wolf Cubs father and son banquet on Wednesday evening. This popular event was well attended with 111 on hand for a delicious meal most efficiently served by the United Church Women.

Those seated at the head table included: Mr. Everett Lavender, chairman of the group committee, his son, Paul; Bill Strachan, assistant district commissioner, and his son, David; Dave Hurray; Barton Cronk; the Rev. N. G. Truax; the Rev. J. G. Shannon; C.M.L. Snider, and Bill Gassira.

A toast by the Scouts to the fathers was proposed by Calvin Struthers, and was responded to on behalf of the fathers, by Don MacDonald.

After dinner, the group was favored by a brief but amusing and interesting talk by Mr. Strachan, who also presented crests to those of the Cubs who had learned to swim two lengths of the pool, at the swimming classes, which have been conducted so well all winter by Mr. Strachan, assisted by his son, David, Mr. Hurray and others.

With Mr. Truax tickling the ivories, a brief sing-song was indulged in with more volume than melody on the part of the singers. This was followed by an action-packed film on stock car racing and the Indianapolis 500 speed car classic. Once again this annual affair appeared to have been enjoyed by all.

U.S. Will Likely Shower New Canadian Govt. With Affection

By HAROLD MORRISON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

A government headed by Liberal Leader Pearson is likely to get a lot of attention and affection for the Kennedy administration and the U.S. Congress. It may herald the beginning of the "golden years" in Canada - U.S. relations.

This is not only because of the personal friendship between President Kennedy and the Liberal leader but because the Canadian election campaign appears finally to have driven home to the Americans the lesson that they no longer can take Canada's co-operation and acquiescence for granted.

For this achievement, many observers give Prime Minister Diefenbaker full credit. Cast in the role of stern critic of U.S. policy, he had conjured up in the minds of Americans the fear that Canada's friendship might be lost in a world where the U.S. could not count on many true friends.

U.S. political leaders said that never before had they seen so much U.S. publicity given to a Canadian election campaign. It appeared that almost every U.S. newspaper, every U.S. major magazine and every major radio and television network had given detailed attention to the campaign and its results.

MANY TROUBLES

Many Americans appeared to be troubled and perplexed by this sudden concentration of attention. Even if they did not know the facts involved, they appeared to be concerned and in this concern was felt in Congress and in the administration.

There were periods during the campaign when the Kennedy government was deeply worried. There were troubles in Cuba and in Europe, in South-east Asia and at home. An unfriendly government on the northern border could only have added to the weight of troubles on Kennedy's back.

Then, while Kennedy remained silent about Pearson's victory, there is inner relief in the White House. It is relief mixed with anxiety, for Pearson has no clear majority and this rule in Parliament, if he is able to form a government, could be subjected to the whims of a minority. And there remains to be settled the question of whether Diefenbaker will step aside.

CAUTION LIKELY

Under the circumstances, Kennedy is likely to move cautiously and quietly on issues affecting Canada. There is likely to be a great deal of cross-border diplomatic discussion before any public statement is made; a great deal of consultation before some new U.S. policy is devised.

Canadian influence in U.S. policy - making may increase suddenly, giving a new Canadian external affairs minister a great deal of diplomatic strength. Such influence as he may be able to wield in Washinton undoubtedly would be recognized by other countries, thereby adding to Canada's stature in international forums.

But the outlook for Canada is not all milk and honey. The problem for any new Canadian government will be how to keep U.S. interest in Canada alive. Too much Kennedy confidence in a Pearson administration might lead to return of the pre-election status quo; a return to wavering interest in Canadian problems as U.S. eyes swing to more exciting and dangerous areas.

Pearson promised swift action on many fronts in the first 60 days of his administration. This action could include meetings with Prime Minister Macmillan and Kennedy. It might be wise in such meetings to exact from the U.S. a firm understanding about closer consultations vigilantly observed before the U.S. could be assured of continued Canadian co-operation.

PLAN MEETING

WINNIPEG (CP)—The Catholic Women's League of Canada will hold its 43rd annual convention in Calgary Aug. 17-22, National President Mrs. Herman Stevens of Calgary announced Tuesday.

Prime Minister Meets Cabinet, No Statement

Will Await Service Vote Before Making Decision

OTTAWA (CP)—Prime Minister Diefenbaker and most of his cabinet met today for their first meeting since Monday's election defeat.

Mr. Diefenbaker told reporters: "I have nothing for you. Nothing."

If any announcements were to b. made, he said "we'll let you know in advance."

Mr. Diefenbaker and 21 ministers were present. Only absentee was Postmaster - General Fairclough, who was reported to have left her Hamilton, Ont., home for a vacation after her defeat.

Five other defeated ministers were on hand—Defence Production Minister O'Hurley, Immigration Minister Bell, Forestry Minister Hamilton, External Affairs Minister Green, and Frank McGee, minister without portfolio.

Works Minister Fulton, who earlier was elected provincial Conservative leader in British Columbia and did not run federally, Television, told reporters he expects to be back in B.C. in 10 days—"to stay."

He said he was encouraged by the election results in B.C., where he noted that Social Credit had lost ground in Premier W. A. C. Bennett's home c. n of Kelowna.

GREEN LABOR VOTES

As Mr. Green entered the cabinet c h a m b e r, reporters asked him what he thought caused his defeat by a Liberal in Vancouver-Quadra.

"I've thought it over and analyzed it very carefully," he replied, then paused and added: "You know I think the real reason was that I just didn't get enough votes."

He said he hopes "to be going home as soon as I can"—perhaps towards the end of week.

To retire in the balmy Pacific Coast climate, a reporter asked.

"I wouldn't say I will retire. I haven't made up my mind on that."

Mines Minister Martineau, looked in a close contest with Liberal candidate Paul O. Gosselin in Two-Mountains, said the last report he had was that he was still leading "but the service vote might change it."

He said he expects he will call for a recount if the service vote puts the Liberal on top "because we would be just a few votes" involved.

Mr. McGee noted that this is the first cabinet meeting in the Privy Council chamber. He attended one cabinet session at the prime minister's residence

GOV.-GENERAL SUFFERS MILD HEART ATTACK

Cancels Program For Next 6 Weeks

OTTAWA (CP)—A mild heart attack has forced Governor-General Vanier to cancel his official engagements for the next six weeks.

"Otherwise, His Excellency will be able to carry out his duties as Governor-General," an official announcement from Government House said Wednesday.

A spokesman for the 14-year old Queen's representative said Gen. Vanier suffered the attack at Government House Tuesday. He stressed that the attack "was a very mild one" and that it was the first suffered by the Governor-General.

He said Gen. Vanier still will be able to receive visitors at his official residence.

The end of the Governor-General's recovery period is around mid-May when the 26th Parliament may be convened. Normally, the Governor - General would read the speech from the throne at the opening sitting.

CAN TURN TO JUDGE

Constitutionally, the Governor-General can turn all of his powers and duties to the chief justice or a judge of the Supreme Court of Canada with the exception of the power to dissolve Parliament and call general election.

At present the chief justice's ship is vacant due to the recent death of Patrick Kerwin. Mr. Justice Robert Taschereau is the senior puisne judge.

New ministers can be sworn before a deputy to the Governor-General. The oaths of office are administered by the clerk of the Privy Council, now Robert B. Bryce, in the presence of the Governor-General or his deputy.

Gen. Vanier, who will be 75 on April 23, became Governor-General Sept. 15, 1959, the first French-Canadian ever to hold the office. Prior to that, he had a distinguished career as a lawyer, soldier, diplomat and patriot.

Two Fishermen Walk, Swim Home After Disagreement With Skipper

SIMCOE, Ont. (CP)—A disagreement with their skipper caused two young crew members of a Lake Erie fishing boat to walk ashore on the ice-swimming a 30 - foot gap through icy waters in the process—and then later to trek 20 miles to shelter.

Provincial police reported the incident Wednesday. It occurred off Goulais Long Point Peninsula.

OPP Constable Ward Edwards found Glen Jennings of Port and Lyle Niblick, 22, in the Long Point Peninsula Provincial Park—cold and tired but otherwise unaffected by their ordeal.

Norfolk County provincial police had been searching for the two since Jennings' father informed police that he had not heard from his son since Monday.

His son and Niblock had left to help run the fishing boat Beach Comber on a 70-mile trip around Long Point from Port Dover, about seven miles south of here, to Port Bruce.

Following their disagreement with Capt. Kenneth Gray, the two began walking across the ice toward shore after leaving the boat one mile west of the tip of the peninsula. When open

ATOMIC SUBMARINE THRESHER REPORTED MISSING

WAY IS CLEARED FOR NUCLEAR NATO COMMAND

Rusk Wins Backing For Proposed Force

PARIS (AP)—The Western allies have cleared the way for creation next month of a unified nuclear command with multinational air and U.S. sea strike forces.

Qualified sources said U.S. State Secretary Dean Rusk has won allied approval for a North Atlantic Treaty Organization nuclear force in which France will participate on a limited basis. The plan could take concrete shape when the NATO foreign ministers meet in Ottawa May 22-24.

Rusk outlined the plan to the NATO permanent council at a meeting here Wednesday.

The force initially will consist of the United States Polaris submarines now operating in the Mediterranean and plans of the U.S., Britain, France, West Germany, Italy, Canada, Belgium and The Netherlands. The planes will carry U.S. nuclear weapons.

The unified command for the force will be under U.S. Gen. Lyman Lemnitzer, NATO'S supreme commander in Europe.

SQUADRONS TO JOIN

French participation means only that two French air squadrons based in Germany will join the unified command. President de Gaulle has made no commitment to put his own nuclear bombers and bombs, now being developed, into the NATO pool as the British have done with their B-bomber force.

De Gaulle also is standing firm on his refusal to buy U.S. Polaris missiles, his decision to bar U.S. nuclear stockpiles from French soil and his determination to create an independent French nuclear force.

But the French leader's agreement to limited participation in the unified nuclear force was welcomed by U.S. and British authorities as a sign of a more co-operative attitude toward the allies.

Officials of other NATO nations predicted that when France's nuclear strike force is operational, de Gaulle will agree to co-ordinate it with the allied forces.

The NATO nuclear strike forces will go into action only

Placing of Nuclear Arms In Canada to Take 3 Months

OTTAWA (CP) — Placing of defensive nuclear warheads in Canada would take at least three months after the signing of a Canada - United States agreement governing their custody and control, defence officials said Wednesday.

If Liberal Leader Pearson takes over the government, signing of an agreement is not expected to be delayed because it has been ready in draft form for some time.

However, the Liberals might want to take some time to explain the agreement carefully to the public before signing.

Mr. Pearson has been saying since Jan. 12 that a Liberal government would honor Canada's nuclear commitments at least until defence policy could be reworked.

This presumably will mean, if Mr.' Pearson becomes prime minister, that Canada will accept nuclear warheads for the Bomarc anti - aircraft missile and Voodoo jet interceptor in Canada and the RCAF CF-104 low-level jet bomber and Canadian Army Honest John artillery rocket in Europe.

Officials said it would take at least three months, and possibly six, to train Canadian crews in the handling of warheads — that is, the physical transfer of the warheads from nuclear dump to nuclear carrier.

Under the draft agreement, U.S. military personnel would have custody of the nuclear warheads on the Canadian bases and the warheads could be fired only on authority of the U.S. president. Canada, however, could veto any U.S.-authorized firing.

Besides the Bomarc bases, there are five Voodoo bases in Canada: at Chatham, N.B., Bagotville, Que., Ottawa North

New Regulations Imposing Tighter Drug Controls Seen

OTTAWA (CP) — The health department's food and drug directorate has been given greater control over the manufacture and distribution of drugs to make them as safe as possible for Canadians.

The new controls are set out in amendments to the food and drug regulations of the Food and Drugs Act, which was amended at the last session of Parliament to provide for increased federal jurisdiction in the field of pharmaceuticals.

The amendments, described by Dr. G. A. Morrell, director of the food and drug directorate, as a "definite step forward in drug control," were made public in a special edition of the Canada Gazette.

Under the new regulation, the federal drug directorate has power to force manufacturers to meet manufacturing standards, hire qualified personnel, test drugs; provide for, quality controls and keep records.

One new regulation compels manufacturers and distributors to set up a system of control to permit a complete and rapid recall of any or batch of drugs from the domestic market. Another provides for the testing in Canada of imported drugs before they can be sold to the public.

Canada's prescription drug industry said in a statement here that it approves of the new regulations—the Permit and the Flunger—to limit the depth to which they may dive pending determination whether there are metal faults in the hull or other weaknesses.

The naval chief said a court of inquiry will investigate, other things, work done on the Thresher during an overhaul at the Portsmouth, N.H.,

Tax Enquiry Conclusions Affect Every Pocketbook

OTTAWA (CP) — The six members of the royal commission on taxation next week will begin into one of the most complicated investigations ever undertaken in Canada. Their conclusions, for better or worse, will affect every pocketbook in the country.

The commission, headed by Toronto chartered accountant Kenneth Carter, will be expected to dissect the entire federal taxation structure and suggest a tax reform law to eliminate faults, strengthen weak spots and produce a sound, equitable tax system.

The massive job involves a complete study of the effects of taxation on such things as industrial production, employment, living standards, savings and investment.

It will also view taxation as it affects Canada's international balance of payments and economic relations with other countries.

And because provincial and municipal taxation invariably intertwines with federal taxes, the investigation will, to some degree, fan down through every level in the country. All provinces

BOOST IN PRICE OF STEEL MAY TOUCH OFF FIGHT

Washington Awaits Kennedy's Reaction

WASHINGTON (AP)—Washington's ears were cocked today for more price boosts increases and eyes were glued on the White House for any signal of another battle to hold the price line.

Hurried, worried, late - hour conferences gave ample evidence of President Kennedy's concern, but produced no word that he was ready to roll up the government guns that flattened last year's announced price increase in 72 hours.

Some senators heard a price increase by Wheeling Steel Corporation Wednesday was linked to the possibility of a round of wage increases for the United Steelworkers of America (AFL-CIO).

An influential Democratic senator, who would not be quoted by name, said he understood that the continuing, informal talks in the industry's "human relations committee" were pointing to an upward pay adjustment.

The USW, he said he was advised, might in return yield some ground on working rules and conditions in contract talks which can be reopened after April 30 upon demand of USW President David J. McDonald.

CITES COST RISE

Wheeling's price increases affected about 25% of its sales on selected products. The 11th-ranked U.S. producer said the increases were made necessary by steady increases in the cost of materials, services and labor.

The announcement came exactly a year after U.S. Steel, the No. 1 U.S. producer, raised prices. The increases were rescinded three days later after Kennedy mounted a strong offensive against the steelmakers.

None of the other U.S. firms had any comment to make immediately on Wheeling's price increase Wednesday.

Off - the - record comments from a few other Democratic Congress members suggested they would not oppose some reasonable wage increase for the Steelworkers, who accepted only modest "fringe" improvements last year instead of higher pay rates.

Searchers Find Oil Slick Near Scene Of Dive

Thresher Best Diving, Fastest Sub in Fleet

WASHINGTON (AP) — Admiral George W. Anderson, chief of United States naval operations, announced today that "very reluctantly I have come to the conclusion that the submarine Thresher has indeed been lost."

Anderson spoke at a press conference more than 25 hours after the nuclear-powered submarine carrying 129 persons — officers and men and civilians — was lost to contact some 220 miles east of Cape Cod in 8,480 feet of water.

Anderson said two main factors influenced his judgment:

The salvage vessel Recovery followed an oil slick detected Wednesday and found bits of cork used in internal construction of submarines. Even if there had been a communications failure or the Thresher had gotten out of position in relation to its escort ship, the Skylark, "surely in the interim there would have been opportunity for the Thresher" to have re-established contact.

"I conclude with great regret and sadness that this fine ship with 129 souls aboard is lost," Anderson said.

LIMITS DEPTH OF DIVES

He disclosed at the same time that orders had gone out to two other Thresher - class subma-

What May Have Happened To Thresher

WASHINGTON (CP) — The nuclear submarine Thresher could have gone into a deep dive to the bottom of the Atlantic if her bow plates went awry.

Or, perhaps, water could have seeped into the hull if a fitting came loose—and water could have rushed into the vessel with such force as to push through her interior bulkheads.

Then, too, there could have been a fire caused by electrical malfunction.

These were some of the possibilities considered by U.S. Navy officers casting about for an explanation of the disappearance of the nuclear submarine in Atlantic waters 1½ miles deep.

These officers said a nuclear explosion in the sub's atomic reactor was impossible.

The cause may never be known.

SEAWAY WILL BE OPENED ON SCHEDULE MON.

No Major Repairs Needed for Locks

MONTREAL (CP)—The St. Lawrence Seaway is expected to be open for business as scheduled Monday.

Seaway officials set the opening date with their fingers crossed following a tough, cold winter, but officials said today ice conditions should be sufficiently under control to permit the start of another shipping season.

Normal maintenance work on the seaway's locks is progressing on schedule, officials said, and so far no major repairs have been needed.

Last year the seaway opening was delayed for a week after a crack was discovered across the bottom of the Eisenhower Lock at Massena, N.Y.

Crews have been using steam pipes and bubbling air through the locks to free lock machinery. An ice-breaker also has been sent into the system to break up thick concentrations of floes.

Generally, the 1963 seaway season is expected to be similar to last year, except slightly busier.

EXPECT INCREASE

There's been a modest increase in shipping and cargo tonnage every year since it opened and we have no reason to expect the trend to change," said one official.

"There are some factors that could affect the picture. Shipments of wheat through the system, for instance, could vary depending on sales to Communist China, and shipments of iron ore out of Labrador will be tied to demand.

"But certainly at this stage we have no indication that things will change much."

Last season the seaway carried about 25,500,000 tons of cargo, up about 5,000,000 from the previous year.

Here Is What It Is Like on Sub When Some Emergency Crops Up

What's it like cruising under the sea in a nuclear submarine such as the Thresher? Elmo C. Fay, AP military affairs writer, gives his first-hand observations during three trips in atomic subs.

By ELTON C. FAY

WASHINGTON (AP) — What is it like aboard a high-speed, deep-diving atomic submarine? Such a submarine as the Thresher, lost in the Atlantic, perhaps under hundreds of feet of ocean?

What is it like when a submarine pushes past the "red line" marking on the depth indicator, beyond which mighty pressure builds up swiftly and dangerously?

You remember rides aboard nuclear submarines. . . .

There is the calmness, the orderly way the ship is handled, the low-spoken commands and responses. Crew members in the mess, drinking coffee, men at the controls, men in the missile spaces, in the torpedo compartments. Submarines are quiet and nuclear submarines quieter.

What about reaction in emergency?

There was the morning aboard the nuclear - powered Skipjack. Breakfast was about to be served.

The collision alarm sounded suddenly, stridently, and you were alone in the washroom.

Watertight doors clanged shut, were dogged down. Dishes slid off the table with a crash, chairs thumped against the forward bulkhead as the submarine planed down at a sharp angle.

But in the control room and elsewhere there was swift and orderly haste. The sonar had picked up something that could

Municipal Roads Subsidy $1,886,000 in Two Counties

The Ontario Department of Highways through its municipal roads branch will this year pay subsidy on close to $2,000,000 worth of road work in the two counties of Hastings and Prince Edward.

The total allotment now approved for subsidy in the two counties this year is $1,886,000 and includes roads in the city of Belleville and the town of Picton.

In many cases supplementary amounts for additional road work will be approved later.

In Prince Edward county the total of "normal" by-laws passed by the county, the town of Picton and the various townships, for roads construction and maintenance is $474,000, of which $64,000 was in Picton. This is divided into $139,000 for roads construction and $335,000 in maintenance.

In Hastings the total approved is $1,412,000 of which $393,000 is for the county proper, $305,000 for Belleville and the balance divided among the townships, towns and villages.

PROGRAM OUTLINED

This again is divided into $335,000 for new roads construction and $1,086,500 for maintenance.

Under its "normal" by-law, Hastings itself will spend $100,000 in construction and $380,000 on maintenance.

These figures are contained in the Department of Highways municipal roads program for the fiscal year 1963-64.

Since the program was approved, Hon. C. S. McNaughton, Ontario Minister of Highways, has announced increased subsidies for certain municipal roads.

Cities and separated towns receive 33⅓ per cent subsidy for roads and bridges, while towns, villages and counties receive 50 per cent on roads and 80 per cent on bridges.

At the end of March the highways department announced increased subsidies for highway connecting links through cities towns and villages and a new formula for subsidies on municipal roads.

Formerly cities received 50 per cent on connecting links but this has been raised to 75 per cent. In towns and villages 75 per cent subsidy was paid on connecting links and this is now raised to 90 per cent.

YIELDS INCREASE

The development of hybrid corn has given yields an average 50 per cent higher than ordinary varieties.

Stratford Plans

Company of 52 Will Present Four Plays

STRATFORD — With the engagement of 17 more players, casting for the Stratford Festival's 11th season is now virtually completed. A company of 52, including four Stratford children still to be chosen, is required for the four plays, "Troilus and Cressida," "Cyrano de Bergerac," "The Comedy of Errors" and "Timon of Athens," which will be presented here between June 17 and September 28. Rehearsals will start on April 22 and will continue for eight weeks.

Michael Langham, artistic director of the Festival, today announced the following as the latest additions to the company:

Amelia Hall, first actress to appear on the Festival Theatre stage in 1953, and a prominent member of the company during several seasons since that time, has been signed to play Cressida in "Troilus and Cressida," the Duenna in "Cyrano de Bergerac" and Luce in "The Comedy of Errors." Miss Hall has just completed a tour with the Canadian Players in "Masterpieces of Comedy."

Christine Bennett, last seen at Stratford two summers ago, will play Mother Marguerite in "Cyrano de Bergerac" and an Abbess in "The Comedy of Errors." In private life, Miss Bennett is the wife of Mervyn Blake, who is also a leading member of the company.

Jake Dengel, remembered particularly for his performance of Puck in the 1961 production of "A Midsummer Night's Dream," returns after a year's absence to his third season to appear in "Troilus and Cressida," "Cyrano de Bergerac" and "Timon of Athens."

Rita Howell, of Hartford, Conn., and New York, who played one of the witches in last year's "Macbeth", comes back to Stratford for "Macbirds in "Timon of Athens," the Courtezan in "The Comedy of Errors" and other roles in "Cyrano de Bergerac."

NEWCOMERS

Newcomers to the Festival Theatre stage are Claire Marshall, Joel Michaels, and Nicholas Simons. Miss Marshall, who came to Canada from England a year ago, has appeared on television and on stage in Toronto with the Red Barn Players and the Village Playhouse. Michaels, a native of Buffalo who worked on television, in motion pictures and on stage in California before he came to this country last fall, has been seen here in television and in the Crest theatre's recent production of "La Bonne Soupe." Mr. Simons has received training at the Old Vic and in various repertory companies in England before arriving in Canada last May, has just completed a winter tour with the Canadian Players as Orsino in "Twelfth Night."

Fire Destroys Basswood Tree On Bonter Farm

TRENTON — Fire last night partially destroyed a huge Basswood tree on the Bonter farm in Ameliasburg. Men from the Belleville fire department answered a summons from Elmer Bonter and managed to prevent the fire spreading in the dry grass surrounding the tree.

The old tree, a landmark in the district, is older than anyone now living in the area can say. Even reports handed down from Mr. Bonter's great - grandparents, the tree was used as a guide to Indians proceeding down the Bay of Quinte in their canoes from the portage at "Carrying Place." It is not immediately known whether the tree will have to be cut down. Cause of the fire is unknown.

Club Informed .22 Rifle Ban Is Being Sought

TRENTON — A representative of the Winchester Company, Wilfred Whitmeyer, told the members of the Lower Trent Valley Fish and Game Club Wednesday night that there was a move afoot in Ontario to outlaw .22 rifles. This had been brought about, said Mr. Whitmeyer, by indiscriminate shooting around populated areas. He urged the club members to counteract the move by co-operating more fully with area farmers in the hunting season and sponsoring more junior members. The people using it at the wrong time and in the wrong places.

CHANGES ADMONISHED

Another club member, William Menzies, raised the question of ice fishermen leaving their shanties on other club members people's property once the ice had gone out. One cottage owner from Codorniche's Corner Ernest Sutton, had reported to Mr. Menzies that no less than seven shanties had been abandoned on his lawn, this year.

George Warner, with the Department of Lands and Forest at Stirling, said that "hut co-operation was considered "derelict" and said that Mr. Sutton could feel free to dispose of them in whatever manner he chose. He said that if this practice kept up, shanties would have to be licensed and a fine provided for those who leave them on other people's property.

NET COARSE FISH

An experiment, conducted this year by commercial fishermen, and aimed at clearing the upper Trent River of coarse fish, has paid off.

During the past few weeks, great quantities of carp, sunfish and suckers have been netted. Ross check is being put on nets to make sure that no game fish are removed from the river.

In early September, the club will hold a fish fry at the club farm, north of Frankford. Carl Austin, chairman of the fishery board, said that operations as casting and shooting would be kept up on a daily basis, with improvements. Good Friday—and Saturday, work parties will spend the day cleaning up the farm. Hagarty Transport bulldozer will be operated by Robert Turner and William Rondo to assist the workers. Recently, the club bought a small building from a canning factory and this will be moved to the farm and used as a store house.

Summer Homes At Little Lake Are Ransacked

Nothing was stolen from the six cottages entered but all the premises were ransacked, and in some instances malicious damage reported. It's believed by some cottage owners that the gang staged a party after the break-ins. A garbage pail was reported thrown through a picture window in one summer home.

The break-ins were discovered by one of the owners, George McDonald, of Toronto, who returned to the lake last weekend to prepare his cottage for the summer.

Is T. A. Lamothe of Ottawa.

Petty thieves smashed their way into a service station east of Belleville this morning, looting cans of oil and two vending machines.

The machines, holding small amounts of cash, were later found smashed in the bush 600 yards from the break-in—at Rosebush's service station on Highway 2.

naval yard since last July.

He noted that in the course of this overhaul and modernization, involving installation of new equipment, cuts as much as a yard wide had been made in the Thresher's hull.

He said tests were made to find out whether there were any weaknesses and the indications were there were none.

Anderson disclosed that the oil slick was sighted again today at 10.30 a.m. EST and this confirmed the position of the sub.

Anderson, asked if any occupants of the sub might be alive, said:

"In my judgment, no."

Asked how long the men in the sub might have lived, the admiral said a "very, very short time," perhaps a matter of minutes.

SHIPS EN ROUTE

At the time Anderson made his announcement ships were concentrated over the area and more were speeding to the point where the Thresher cocked its dive plans and went down for a deep dive test.

The admiral's words put all the final seal on the U.S. navy's worst peacetime submarine disaster, perhaps its worst of all time.

Anderson said the ocean research submarine Trieste, a deep-diving experimental craft, will be brought from San Diego, Calif., by rail and sent down to try to locate the wreck to determine whether the Thresher collapsed and what might have happened to it. The Trieste is expected in perhaps a bit more than a week.

Anderson said the naval court of inquiry, meeting in New London, Conn., will "certainly go into the possibility of sabotage." But he dismissed this possibility as remote.

He also said the court will consider whether there was any possible Russian action involved in the Thresher disappearance but he said "I certainly rule this out."

The area where the Thresher disappeared is one frequented by Soviet trawlers.

There was no Soviet submarine in the area "to the best of my knowledge" and no Soviet trawlers or other surface craft in the immediate area where the Thresher was test diving, the admiral said.

Aboard were 96 enlisted men, 16 officers and 17 civilians who were keeping check on the test run.

"In actual fact the traffic has increased steadily and in 1962 was 28 per cent higher than in 1959."

SEE OVERSEAS RISE

One expected increase is in the number of overseas vessels travelling to inland ports.

Canard Line has scheduled six vessels for trips between Great Lakes ports and London and Liverpool. The Nardo, Lolivia, Taurus and Sunbeam will sail from London and the Johanna and Lesbeth from Liverpool.

The vessels are described as bigger, faster and more efficient than Canard ships used previously.

Donaldson Line has scheduled two ships—the Colina and Santona — to maintain a regular three - week service between Great Lakes' ports and Glasgow.

Recreation Highlights

Bruce Jarvah Assistant Director

Some people may wonder why handcrafts are included in most summer playground programs. Although children come to the playgrounds to play, their interest and continued attendance seems to be related to the learning experiences they find there.

They enjoy learning the skills of a sport or game, the co-operative understanding in a group, the growth toward responsibility in a group, or a sense of worthwhile achievement in some phase of the program.

Summer playground programs have developed over the past years from a sit-and-watch supervisory type of operation to programs of lead-teach-and-do activities requiring trained leadership, and careful program planning. Playground leaders are selected carefully and trained in many aspects of their job responsibilities. Skill in craft leadership and teaching has become one of the major requirements.

Of course, to be effective, the craft program must be varied. Different age groups can only accomplish results within their particular capabilities. The little ones enjoy paper dolls or simple coloring projects; an older group may tackle the construction of stuffed gingham animals or bon-bon dishes made of popsicle sticks.

The materials for playground crafts are practically limitless — construction paper, wool, newsprint, colored magazine advertisements, soap, pipe cleaners, wallpaper and paper bags. Add scissors, glue, rulers, crayons, and skilled leadership to the creative instincts and imagination of the children and many and wonderful can be the results.

Summer programs must be carefully timed to fit the children's needs. Morning sessions on the playground are usually taken up with active play and games to work off the surplus charge of energy. In the heat of the afternoon, under shady trees and gathered around tables, the energy can be channeled to creative enjoyment in making and doing.

Most playground programs build toward a climax or major event and/or they may have several "special" days. The craft activities should also contribute to these special occasions with posters, banners, schedule and costume. All can be produced at a minimum of expense, particularly if most of the "ingredients" are brought from home.

The summer playground program should not, of course, develop into a "summer craft program". Few, if any recreation budgets would stand it; and few young citizens would go for it as a steady diet. Sports and games of all kinds, both active and quiet, singing games, storytelling, play on the apparatus and craft activities all have their proper times and places in the playground program.

Leaders will enjoy the satisfaction of a job well done if their young clients have enjoyed a well-balanced diet of summer fun.

Extracts, Roger Larose, president of the Canadian Pharmaceutical Manufacturers Association, regretted that drug manufacturers are not being forced to register with the federal government.

"We are sorry that there is no provision in the new regulations that will force pharmaceutical manufacturers to make themselves known to the food and drug directorate," he said. "We had strongly recommended compulsory registration of all pharmaceutical manufacturers."

Mr. Larose said, however, "we believe these new regulations will be a useful tool at the disposal of the food and drug directorate and that it is a step in the direction of making drugs still safer for Canadians."

Dr. Morrell said the new regulations put "teeth" into the law governing the manufacture and distribution of drugs.

"Under the regulations we will be able to take quart action against anyone not complying with the law," he said.

Dr. Morrell said until now the directorate could launch prosecutions only after a laborious check of drug samples to determine whether. However, he said the directorate now will be able to go into the drug plants to determine whether manufacturers are complying with the law.

Local Fair Is Granted "A" Listing

The Belleville Agricultural Society received word that Belleville Fair has been granted an "A" listing by the Canada and Ontario Departments of Agriculture.

Application was made in January. In February an official of the Canada Department of Agriculture visited the city to go over prize money expenditures of 1960-61-62. Approval was granted by the Canada Department after concurrence from the Ontario Department.

Financially the new classification may not mean a great deal since grants are paid only after work is completed and paid for. It can make a difference if the Fair Board contemplates capital expenditures. For exhibitors prize ribbons from a class "A" fair have been obtainable only at Toronto, Ottawa, London, Lindsay, Simcoe, Peterborough, Galt and Welland.

Past President Carl Thompson expressed the feeling of the Fair Board: "It makes a good all our work has been very worthwhile."

Where Is Majority Govt. Coming From?

"The plea for the election of a 'stable' government obviously worked in two different directions," says the Fort William Times-Journal in commenting on Monday's Federal election. "Citizens in Western Canada voted to give the role to the Conservatives; those in the East cast the Liberals for the part."

This is a plausible explanation of the deep cleavage in political sentiment between East and West. Unfortunately, the more closely it is examined the less certain one becomes about its accuracy.

The simple truth is that the voting pattern on the prairies was almost precisely the same as it was in 1962, when the Conservatives were appealing for re-election after having enjoyed the largest majority of any government in Canada's history and when nobody even dreamed that we had to worry about a minority government.

The appeal to the voters to make certain that one party had an overall majority probably did have some influence in Eastern Canada and perhaps also in B.C. But here, too, its effect seems to have been only limited. It perhaps accounts for the three seats lost by the New Democrats, one in Cape Breton, one in York South and one in Vancouver Burrard. But it did not prevent the NDP from winning a new seat in Hamilton South.

As for the decline of the Social Credit in Quebec, it would seem it is just as reasonable to suppose that this was the result of disillusionment with the Socreds' performance in the last House as to ascribe it to a desire to give the Liberals a clear-cut majority. Indeed, if this desire had inspired Quebec voters, how can one explain the fact that the Progressive Conservatives won eight Quebec seats, when most observers thought they would do well to take four? Nor was the stable government issue necessarily the reason why the Conservatives lost ground in Ontario. Ample reason for such a decline can be found in the Cabinet resignations over the nuclear warhead issue.

Indeed, Monday's results make one reassess the cause of the Conservative sweep in 1958. Then the complete elimination of Social Credit and the declination of the CCF were ascribed to the people's desire for a majority government. Perhaps this conclusion was a misjudgment of the voters' reasons. Perhaps they just liked the results the first Diefenbaker government had achieved, despite lack of an overall majority, and decided to give it a free rein. If the desire for stable government was such a powerful force in 1958, why was it not equally powerful last Monday?

But, no matter what the voters may think, stable government is still a necessity if Canada is to be well governed. Some accommodations between two parties are possible when their general philosophies are basically the same, but the cleavage between either of the old parties and either of today's two splinter groups would appear to be too deep to permit the type of alliance that the Liberals and the western Progressives had in the twenties.

If we are to return to majority government, how is it to be achieved? Obviously either by breaking the Conservative hold on the prairies, or by increasing the appeal of the Conservatives in the East, particularly in Ontario and Quebec. This may happen in any event without any deliberate political manoeuvring. But insofar as the rival political parties can bring this about, it would appear that a change in leadership is the best means open to them.

The Conservatives' popularity in the West, though largely due to Prime Minister Diefenbaker's genius, is firmly founded on economic facts, the ready market enjoyed in recent years for Canadian wheat. Probably this support would survive a change in Conservative leadership. It is evident that only a change can restore the fortunes of the party in the urban centres of the East.

What is true of the Conservatives is true in like measure of the Liberals. Despite his long record of service to his party and his country, Lester Pearson has failed to capture the imagination of the Canadian voter, not only in the West, where his appeal is evidently negligible, but even in the East, where his party's policies have won him greater support.

The difficulty will be for either party to discover leaders as able and at the same time with greater personal appeal to voters across the nation.

Modern Civil Service Holds Alarming Position of Power

By RICHARD JACKSON
(from The Ontario Intelligencer's Ottawa Bureau)

OTTAWA — Civil Servants, it seems clear, have become so powerful they can humble the politicians for whom, in theory, they are supposed to work.

And, overwhelming the politicians, they become, in effect, the masters and not the servants of the people.

That the Bureaucracy occupies the dizzy pinnacle of power in the democratic system of Government, was made dramatically clear when Lester Kennedy's Civil Service, with a piece of paper — a departmental press release — wrecked John Diefenbaker's administration little more than two months ago.

That government - toppling press release was conceived, written and released by senior State Department civil servants, and nobody in authority, the President, the Secretary of State, nor any of his deputies have admitted to seeing, much less approving it, before it was fired from Washington to Ottawa.

That is the serious side of the Bureaucracy.

The light side of what he called "Ottawa Bureaucratics," has been given, amusingly, by Vincent Massey, Britain's High Commissioner to Canada, in an Ottawa speech.

THE UNTOUCHABLES:

Good, bad or indifferent, there is nothing, really, that any Government can do about its Civil Servants, for, as Lord Amory put it:

"Civil Servants are the rock-et stable — they don't always work, or even work right, and when they don't, you can't fire them."

And, he added, "I am only sadly, "in a year it will be filled with hot-eyed Bureaucrats wondering how to get rid of you."

Lord Amory, a Conservative and a staunch Legalist, is against all its ways.

He told the story of two civil servants who lost their way in the country.

Coming to a farm they asked a farmer: "Where are we?"

"In your car," he told them.

"Brief, true, but of no nothing to the file of facts," they told him.

MANAGERS TO MASTERS

Lord Amory then told of the Three Government scientists who were studying the cause and effect of drunkenness. (Don't laugh, the National Research Council of Canada years ago did a serious study of noise levels at cocktail parties).

The first night the three researchers tried whisky and water, and a dozen files used for them.

Recurring, the next night they made it brandy and water with ditto blotto results.

The third night they tried it was with gin and water and again they ended up whacked.

The conclusion of their research:

"Water is the intoxicating agent."

Then there was the story of the Civil Servant who was spoiled through his entire career upon door with his secretary on his lap.

The departmental brass debated whether he or the girl should be fired.

But finally, rather than upset the routine with anything so barbaric as a dismissal they issued a directive that he keep his office door discreetly closed.

Lord Amory wound up his lighter side discourse on the "home bureaucracies" on a rather more sombre note:

"We should," he advised, and seriously "take care to ensure that our professional managers do not become our masters."

Dim Prospect

Quebec Chronicle-Telegraph

One of the anomalies created by the current wave of separatism is that the exponents prevailed there will be room for English-speaking persons in the French-language state of Laurentia or Quebec, or whatever they intend to call it, but they outline policies which must inevitably drive the present English-speaking residents away.

Machines Must Not Replace Man's Morality

By SYDNEY HARRIS

Purely Personal Prejudices: The real danger of our technological age is not so much that machines will begin to think like men, but that men will begin to think like machines — that machine-oriented thinking will dominate us, to the exclusion of moral and, of conscience, of value-judgments.

By the time a speaker says, "To make a long story short," he has already made it too long.

Those who refuse to modify a system argue that modification is likely to produce disorder; but since conditions in any system are always changing, it may very well prove that the refusal to modify the system is itself a "modification" which may produce disorder. This is the paradox inherent in the conservative position, which so often loses ground because it is unwilling to change anything.)

Hate, no less than love, distorts our estimate of reality; as Nisancke said of the militaristic spirit: "How good the music and had reasons sound when one marches against an enemy!"

The only time most people are aware of their conscience is when they can say, with more than a touch of smugness, "I have a clear conscience about that." When do you feel clear uncleer?

Sometimes we remain faithful to a cause only because its opponents are so stupid and obnoxious; in this way, blind opposition generates more fervor on the other side, even when faith is destroyed.

It is hard for many parents to believe this, but most children understand adults better than adults understand children —that is, our unconscious and unexpressed assumptions are quite clear to the child, while the child's unconscious motivations are not easy for us because we have already constructed an artificial picture of the child as we want him to be or as he should be, but not as he really is.

The most dangerous lunatics in society are those who are not committable: those who would pass any psychiatric test for insanity, but who nevertheless suffer from grandiosity, delusions of persecution, and impossible life to expose some "plot" that is "known" to all of us. Both Hitler and Stalin were crazy in this way; and yet both were "sane" by conventional legal standards. Private lunacy gets a padded cell: this form of public lunacy too often wins a throne-seat.

Some words are never used, except by those who lack the quality: just as a gentleman never mentions the word "gentleman," so the word "cultured" is used only by those without it, the word "refined" used only by those lacking it, and the phrase "gracious living" implies its precise opposite the moment it is spoken.

Living up to their reputation of subscribing generously to any humanitarian cause, residents of the city "went over the top" in a blaze of financial glory in the Red Cross campaign which will end officially within the next few days. Officials reveal through figures released today that the city has exceeded the allotted quota of $20,000 by twenty-five per cent, or in round figures the amount subscribed to date is $25,000. Expressions of appreciation for the generosity of the public and the reception it accorded the general appeal and the canvassers, were voiced today by Red Cross headquarters officials.

Cows Can Get Bad Nerves

BBC Leaders Letter

Human beings are not alone in being subject to stress and nervous breakdowns. "Cattle can and do have nervous breakdowns," reported Joan Pyper in "The Farming World, program broadcast recently in the British General Overseas Service, "and the uninhibited amongst them physically express their fears and expressions of extreme emotion."

Joan Pyper was reviewing a new book called 'The Behaviour of Domestic Animals', written by eight well-known animal scientists under the leadership of Dr. Hafir. Its 505 closely-printed pages cover every facet of the behavior of cattle, pigs, horses, sheep, goats, dogs, cats and rabbits, from the early days of the formation of use to the semi-technical farmer, scientific surgeons and physicians in charge of research projects.

Commenting on some other aspects of animal behavior covered in the book, Joan Pyper spoke about the mother-child relationship with sheep. "If two animals are placed in a pen and are separated by walking between them, the same one always lead the flock, followed immediately by their young lambs. Each is followed less closely by their descendants of previous years, the female descendants being followed by their own lambs in turn. So, the leader of the flock is usually the oldest female with the largest number of descendants. This pattern only changes when you have a flock where many unrelated animals have been introduced. Members of a flock keep in contact with each other visually. As they graze each animal lifts its head every few minutes and looks around to see where it is and where the others are.

"An experiment carried out in Georgia, U.S.A., proves an interesting point concerning the reactions of cattle and pigs to hot climates. Given adequate shade the animals did not have to make physiological adjustments to the heat, but when the cooler weather came they were affected by chills — those that stayed in the sun were not. Unshaded cows eat slightly less but produce as much milk as those that are provided with shade."

To Your Good Health

Circulation Slows Down As We Begin to Grow Old

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: I am 70 and apparently in good health, but my ears, nose and the top of my head get cold. How can I improve circulation? — A. L.

Circulation isn't the whole story. Some other things can be involved, too.

Yes, our circulation slows down as we grow older. We wear sweaters more often and sit closer to the fire. A certain amount of hardening of the arteries reduces the flow of blood.

You've doubtless noticed that many older people look somewhat paler. They don't necessarily have anemia; they just don't have the same amount of blood circulating close to the surface of the skin.

In addition to whatever changes may have happened to the arteries, the total metabolism of the body is reduced. Less physical activity and slower movements also let the circulation slow down.

Quite another cause of feeling cold is a thyroid gland that is not functioning at its proper pace. People with that trouble are intolerant to cold and lay the blame on the weather when, in fact, some of their discomfort would be relieved by proper medication to increase thyroid secretions.

One more cause is heavy smoking which constricts the blood vessels, particularly the smaller ones close to the surface or in the extremities. Reduction in smoking sometimes brings immediate relief.

If the trouble is mostly in the feet and legs Buerger's exercises help. This is a very easy simple process. Lie down on your back. Raise one leg for a few moments. Then do the same with the other leg. What this amounts to mostly is letting gravity drain the blood first in one direction then the other. But the exercise itself is beneficial.

When we were young, we were — most of us — certain types that would stand the cold because our circulation and metabolism were stronger.

Since then we've individually made the discovery that people do get older. We slow down. And the best way to combat the cold is to conserve our body heat. So loosefitting shoes, heavy socks and take advantage of night caps (the kind you wear on your head, not the kind you pour). Warm the bed with a hot water bottle before climbing in. Wear a hat or a scarf on cold outdoors. Use an electric blanket. And stay young forever — but if we use our good sense and moderate ingenuity, we can stay warm and comfortable.

Dear Dr. Molner: Is there a cure for rheumatic fever? — L. S.

Yes. It depends mainly on adequate rest. Also the use of salicylates (aspirin-type drugs) or steroids, as cortisones. True, if rheumatic fever attacks are not properly treated and damage to the heart results, it may not be corrected afterward, short of surgery. But rheumatic fever can be conquered if we do a good job of treatment early every time a case is detected. Likewise it is now possible (and certainly advisable) to have treatment once a month after an attack, to prevent recurrence.

Note to Mrs. M. A.: In general, the dangers of violet rays are the same as those of sunshine. Avoid sunburn! And avoid staying under a violet ray lamp long enough to burn. For example, don't fall asleep under a lamp.

How to get rid of leg cramps and foot pains? The answer may be simple. Write to Dr. Molner in care of The Chicago Sun-Times Syndicate, P.O. Box 158, Dundee, Ill., for a copy of the leaflet, "How To Stop Leg Cramps And Foot Pains" enclosing a long self-addressed, stamped envelope and 10 cents in coin to cover cost of printing and handling.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

After all, we are all victims of that greatest predator of all, man. Hawks don't kill hawks. Wolves don't live off other wolves. Even the hungriest tiger would slink away into the jungle, embarrassed beyond expression, if such a thought entered his mind to eat another tiger.

But not the master predator, is a maneater. Apart from the fact that they prey upon one another with the highest motives and pretty sound nutritional economic principles, men seem to believe that they are at their best when living off one another. Indeed, there are vast areas of the human scheme in which it is only possible for men to survive if they are preying on other men. How many fundamental businesses in the nation would collapse if employers could not make money out of employing employees? What would lawyers do without clients? What doctors do without customers? Ah, it is true the honest doctors do not feel free in preying on his fellow men. He absolves himself by thinking that all he wants is an honest living.

But sometimes a man feels a strange urge, akin to the feeling of the hawk, the wolf or the tiger. He sees his chance to make a killing. And he is not upon a hawk, a wolf or a tiger that he pounces.

Tomb Is Not the End

By ROY L. SMITH

One does not need to endorse all that old John Brown of Kansas did, to appreciate the profound significance of at least one thing he said. As the hangman was about to put the noose about his neck, preparing to execute him, he asked Brown, "Is there anything you would like to say before you die?" To this the old man replied, "I will have a good deal more to say after I am dead." And if the history books are to be trusted, the old man kept his word.

DEATH IS NOT FINAL

In the city of London there is one of the most grotesque sources to be witnessed anywhere on this earth. At every meeting of the governing board of the London Lying-In Hospital a strange figure is wheeled up to the table, as though it might be one of the voting members.

Jeremy Bentham, one of the greatest of all the English political and economic scientists, left a will bequeathing all his property (a very great fortune) to the hospital, on the condition that his skeleton, appropriately clothed in the suit he always wore to the meetings of the board, should be placed at the board's table at the point where he always sat. A death mask was made immediately after his demise, and this adds a type of reality to the ritual. And for more than a hundred years the secretary of the Board has referred in the minutes, "Jeremy Bentham present, but not voting."

Those who know, however, say that Bentham's influence has turned the scale on many occasions, when some matter has been hotly debated and opinion divided. He is still on the job. Though he has been dead since 1832, he continues to be the most influential member on the board.

EVIL DID ITS WORST

On Friday night Christ lay dead in His tomb. Throughout Saturday He continued dead. On Sunday morning He was gone, alive! Evil's triumph lasted just that long!

When Pilate ordered His death and when the soldiers had nailed Him to the cross, they had all the power at their command. There was nothing more any of them could do. He was out of their hands.

And then it was that He was delivered!

There is a point past which malice, hatred, jealousy, and viciousness cannot go. And it is exactly at that spot that Christ and Christianity come back to life.

In the 17th century the Japanese government declared war on the Christian faith which had only recently been introduced by Dutch missionaries. For the years the faith was under the ban. Then, in 1870, under the enlightened leadership of the Meiji Emperor the ban was lifted, and millions came up from the underground, tens of thousands of Christians who had survived.

The Uniform Sunday School lesson for April 14: "Christ Is Risen," Mark 15:42 through 16:8.

When the Red Chinese took over in 1949, it appeared that the Christian Church in China was doomed. The Christian colleges were dismantled and destroyed. Christian churches were profaned, and destroyed. Christian pastors were martyred, and the Christians disappeared underground.

It is impossible to declare with any complete accuracy, exactly what the status of the Christian movement in China may be at the present moment. But an increasing mass of evidence indicates that the Christian Church is far from dead—that it has only been driven underground! And it is awaiting its resurrection.

"Truth, crushed to earth, will rise again."

There is an element of immortality about justice, mercy, and truth. They may go into eclipse for a time, but they always experience a resurrection.

WHAT KIND OF BODY ARISES?

There has been a certain kind of morbid curiosity on the part of many who have persisted in asking, "How did Christ rise? Jesus have following His resurrection?" And, if the question could be answered with certainty, it would be interesting.

But the most important fact about the resurrection of Jesus is not the physical composition of His post-resurrection body. The crux of the matter appears in the fact that the ideals He preached, the principles He lived, the promises He made, and the challenges He issued, have survived.

Jesus Christ, risen and alive, is the greatest single factor in the politics of the world today. The teachings He gave insist on obbruding themselves in governments, industry, morals, and even in scientific adventure.

As the old guide said to me once, as he pointed to a painting of Jesus above dripping ancient crosses, "He always comes back, doesn't He?"

Prime Minister

at 24 Sussex Drive after being sworn in.

Mr. Diefenbaker apparently is pondering whether to meet Parliament as prime minister or leader of the official opposition. The cabinet met for its first post - election session while awaiting results of the service vote.

It is this vote, expected to be announced this weekend, that may show whether the Liberals will extend their 128-seat victory into a working majority of 15 in the 265-seat Commons.

Mr. Diefenbaker has said he is awaiting the service-vote outcome before deciding on his future course—a decision between resigning to allow Liberal Leader Pearson a chance to form a government or continuing in office in order to vote of confidence in Parliament.

While the decision rests with the prime minister, the position of the two other smaller parties in the 36th Parliament has a crucial bearing. Without their support he would lose in a confidence vote against the Liberals.

On the basis of the civilian vote Monday, the Social Credit won 96 seats, the New Democratic 24 and the New Democratic Labor party 2, leaving the Liberals with the largest group in the Commons.

THE HOULD RESIGN'

In the light of this result, the New Democratic and Social Credit leaders have taken no effect. Mr. Diefenbaker should resign.

New Democratic Leader T. C. Douglas said "My own feeling is that Mr. Diefenbaker won't hang on."

"I think that having lost seats in two successive general elections, the logical thing would be to resign."

Robert Thompson, leader of the Social Credit party, said he believes Mr. Diefenbaker does not have the right to continue in office, even though he may have the constitutional right.

"He has lost the confidence of his party and of the Canadian people," said Mr. Thompson, who flew to Ottawa Wednesday for a private meeting with his deputy leader, Real Caouette.

Later, Mr. Thompson and Mr. Douglas expressed hope for stability of government despite the uncertain results of the election.

"I think we can get to work this out," said Mr. Douglas.

Mr. Thompson called for moratorium on elections and advocated a "working arrangement" in Parliament.

They appeared on a CBC network television program, Newsgallery. Also taking part was Alister Gordon, a Liberal re-elected to Toronto Davenport who is considered by Mr. Pearson for the finance portfolio in any new Liberal government.

All the rules of the rules of Parliament must be changed to speed up proceedings and make them more efficient.

Meanwhile Mr. Pearson, confident that he will be asked to form a government, said he plans to start picking his cabinet this week. The delicate task of matching talents with the factions of geographical and religious representation

Rebuilding of Foxboro Road Is Main '63 Hwys. Project

Paving of the south lane of 401 from Marysville to Napanee, the rebuilding of Highway 14 north of Belleville from 401 to Foxboro, and rebuilding of the Madoc county road from Foxboro to Halloway, are the major Ontario Highways Department projects for the immediate Belleville area this year.

Also included in this year's program as carry over work from last year is base course paving on the new stretch of highway 33 from Hillier to Consecon, base course paving of the 6.4 miles of 62 highway north of Bamockburn rebuilt last year and development road paving on the Madoc county road between Ivanhoe and Halloway.

"New" work planned for the area includes construction of the new interchange on No. 2 highway south of Marysville to be rebuilt to provide a connecting link between the proposed new Bay of Quinte Causeway (Deseronto and 401 highway.

PROPOSE NEW BRIDGE

Proposed is a new bridge over Selby (Sucker) Creek, two miles south of Marysville, and the bypass over the double track CNR south of Marysville.

The paving scheduled for 401 Highway between Marysville and Napanee will provide an uninterrupted four-lane route between Belleville and Kingston. This last stretch of 401 is scheduled for completion in 1964.

As mentioned earlier plans are to pave only the south lane of the 401 section at this time between Marysville and Napanee. The four lane is the super highway between Marysville and the north of Cataraqui will be paved later.

Work has already been commenced on the rebuilding of Highway 14 between 401 highway and Foxboro. Grading from the present route have been up rooted and grading will be commenced by H. J. McFarlane as soon as the ground is sufficiently dry.

ANOTHER NEW BRIDGE

The work on 14 highway which includes complete reconstruction of the roadway, including the Foxboro bypass will line up with the new Madoc development road at a point just northwest of Foxboro.

The Foxboro by-pass includes construction of a new bridge over Fullbier Creek, while the development road project between Foxboro and Halloway calls for a new bridge over Chrysler Creek.

Miss and Mr. BCIVS Chosen In Election

Two Belleville Collegiate senior students, Miss Mary Ellen McKibbon and Mr. Jack Hannah, were elected Miss BCIVS and Mr. BCIVS for 1963 during assembly in the auditorium at the collegiate on Wednesday morning.

In addition, Miss McKibbon was presented with a dozen red roses and a bracelet (donated by the Roses), while Mr. Hannah received a boutonniere, a bracelet and a gift certificate. They were also presented with tickets for the "Spring Fling", B.C.I.'s Easter Prom, and trophies.

Runners up in the electon were Moira McLaughlin, Faye Courtemanche, Jack Thompson and Don Brearly.

An annual event at the Belleville Collegiate, the election is supervised by the "Boys' and Girls'" H-4 Clubs. Nominations are based on popularity, academic standing, and participation in extra-curricular activities.

Although only senior students are eligible for the positions, the entire student body is given the opportunity to vote for them.

Campaign speeches are made by friends of the candidates shortly before the election takes place.

Clip out and use for 7 days only, this weekly "KU" DIRECTORY and TRADESMAN'S guide to every type of business in Belleville, Brighton, Madoc, Prince Edward County, Stirling, Trenton and Tweed, individually accepting the "KU" CHALLENGE to build customer confidence from their satisfactorily pledged personalized service and honest salesmanship by identifying by name, model, serial number, protected with a signed 100% unconditional guarantee, the "KU" product you have purchased, manufactured or worthy of listing as a "KU" IDENTIFIED PRODUCT.

To forfeit their listing if proven to betray your confidence with unethical business practices, psychological or possible talk protected with fine print concealed in unrevealed contractual legal documents that could be broken.

You are cordially invited to enjoy unlimited and often unrealized savings from THE TRUTH offered in this DIRECTORY by demanding all agreements written on your bill and protected with a signed guarantee.

If you can satisfactorily prove in accordance to "KU" REQUIREMENTS that any above listed businesses fail to honor their signed agreements, they automatically forfeit their listing for the protection of all concerned.

One good reason why CERTIFIED "KU" QUALITY CONSTRUCTED HOMES are the most practical and envied home of modern living. When the law demands a 100 amp. service July 1st, 1964 as per Ontario Hydro Rules and Regulations governing Electrical Installations, eleventh edition, 1939, will your present fuse panel be expected to honestly deliver 33 amps. or less. This size service was introduced in the forties and to better built homes indirectly in association with LIFE-TIME CERTIFIED "KU" QUALITY CONSTRUCTED ELECTRICAL INSTALLATIONS OF THE OWNER'S CHOICE, named 1957.

"KU" KITS future government demands today's 100 amp. service, only an honestly calculated size of wire and satisfactory size switch. It is considered to be detrimental to good customer relations to recommend a 100 amp. service that cannot carry close to 100 amps. under constant load without destroying it.

STOP, THINK, Has the new home constructed in the past 5 years and sold as your STATUS SYMBOL been over rated?

How will this newly advertised STATUS SYMBOL help many new home owners after their eviction from unrealized detrimental legal agreements that protected over rated construction?

Maybe you should use a "KU" HOME WIRING CHECKING KIT and check your present home wiring. IS IT?

The unbelievable difference in a CERTIFIED "KU" QUALITY CONSTRUCTED HOME is THE TRUTH that makes possible for the average wage earner to own a better built home, often at half of today's normal cost before the final payment and claims the highest resale value.

If you are interested in owning the most practical and envied home for modern living within your budget you are cordially invited to request the privilege of using the following and other kits. For $5.00 use a "KU" HOME-DESIGN and RECOMMENDATION KIT. For $5.00 use a "KU" HOME WIRING CHECKING KIT. For $2.00 use a "KU" HOME WIRING PLANNING KIT.

Officials said the nuclear storage depots would be built on the bases.

There are other defence problems which would be inherited by a Liberal government.

Former defence minister Hartness announced a year ago that Canada would buy three conventional submarines from Britain. The purchase has not been carried out because Britain so far has declined to buy defence equipment of comparable value in Canada.

A $10,000,000 contract to de Havilland Aircraft of Canada Limited for construction of an anti-submarine hydrofoil boat is pending. Tenders have not yet been let for construction of eight new frigates. A new government would also have to decide about production of the Bobcat armored personnel carrier for the army.

The RCAF has a long-range, requirement for about 100 jet transport planes for utility, liaison and training operations and is making preliminary checks of various types of planes in this field.

tial, if not satisfactory, he said, adding:

"We've lost a large part of our foreign market in steel and a price increase would make it harder to compete."

KEEP HANDS OFF?

Several Republican senators said the government should keep its hands off the situation.

There was no sign that Kennedy planned any comment before his scheduled departure for an Easter vacation at Palm Beach, Fla.

The southern trip was scheduled for Wednesday. Kennedy postponed it and, instead, went into a series of meetings with Treasury Secretary Douglas Dillon, Commerce Secretary Luther H. Hodges, and a parade of others.

One presidential adviser said the possibility of a general wave of steel price boosts—the classic steel pattern of follow-the-price-leader — was viewed with "deep concern."

on orders from Lemnitzer, who will get his instructions from the president of the United States. U.S. law requires the president to retain sole control over the use of the nuclear weapons the U.S. will supply the force.

The allies are still discussing expansion of NATO's fleet to include ships armed with U.S. Polaris missiles but manned by crews of other nations.

The U.S. has agreed to sell Britain Polaris missiles for British nuclear submarines which will join U.S. Polaris subs in the NATO fleet. The U.S. also is urging the creation of a surface fleet of 25 freighter-type ships armed with the Polaris and manned by crews of mixed nationalities.

At Ottawa, informants said the agreement, which would have to be ratified by NATO ministers, means only that assignment of targets for U.S. Polaris submarines in the Mediterranean, British V-bombers and tactical nuclear forces in Europe, including those of Canada, would be done by NATO's supreme allied commander in Europe.

Ann Landers

Modern Lady Not Confined To Life of Unemployment

ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANN LANDERS—I came to this country two years ago from Switzerland.

I do not understand a few peculiarities of your language. In you article the other day you used the phrase "cleaning lady." In Europe a lady does not clean her own home, much less go out and clean up somebody else's dirt for a few dollars. The picture in my mind of Her Ladyship with dust rags and a broom is like a comic opera. My American neighbors refer to a woman who sells hair nets in the dime store as a saleslady.

Yesterday when my husband and I drove into a parking lot the man said, "Just leave the keys in your car. The lady will take care of it." A person in tight pants came up and that was "the lady."

In Europe lady doesn't scrub floors, sell hair nets or park cars. Work is beneath her dignity. What does "lady" mean here?—SWISS MRS.

DEAR MRS.—In America we also have people who think work is beneath their dignity. They are called loafers.

The notion that work is for slobs is hopelessly outmoded—even in Europe. All work has dignity and merit if it is well done.

DEAR ANN LANDERS—Something is on my mind which is causing me sleepless nights. You have helped others, maybe you can help me. How long do you think a man should wait to remarry after his first wife passes away?

My sister was ill for two years. She was a lovely person and a fine wife and mother. Five months after the funeral her husband married another woman. There was no need for him to rush into this marriage as his children are grown.

I am deeply hurt by this and feel that his fast second marriage was a slap in the face to the memory of my beloved sister and to our family. What do you think of a woman who would marry a man as soon after his wife was buried? What do you think of a man who would do this?—BLUE GRASS HERITAGE.

DEAR HEARTACHE—This question comes up often—and almost never is it raised by the widow or the widower. Usually, it is raised by a relative.

It is impossible to know what is in someone else's heart. Those five months may have been like five centuries to the one who was left. You should be happy your sister's husband is able to pick up the pieces and make a new life for himself. Don't allow your grief to blind you to the realities of life.

Tax

inces have agreed to assist the commission.

These are the commissioners whose work is clearly cut out:

Mr. Carter, 56, former chairman of the Canadian Tax Foundation, past president of the Institute of Chartered Accountants of Ontario and a widely-regarded financial expert.

Donald G. Grant, 53, Halifax, general manager of the Nova Scotia Trust Company.

Emile Beauvais, 58, Quebec City chartered accountant.

J. Harvey Perry, 50, Toronto, vice-president of the Canadian Bankers Association.

Charles K. S. Wells, Victoria, manager of the British Columbia Federation of Agriculture.

Mrs. S. M. Milne, Winnipeg, national treasurer of the Canadian Council of Women.

Next Tuesday, the commission will open a four-day sitting in Ottawa when seven organizations will present their views on the investigation.

One of the most knowledgeable of these organizations is the Canadian Tax Foundation, a private research association with a wide membership among chartered accountants and business lawyers specializing in tax law. Commissioner Perry was its director for seven years, beginning in 1954.

The tax foundation and the other six organizations — Canadian Chamber of Commerce, tax study group of Queen's University, Canadian Manufacturers' Association, Canadian Labor Congress, Canadian Institute of Chartered Accountants and the Canadian Bar Association — are expected to appear before the commission again in the fall with formal submissions.

MOVE LATER

Meanwhile, the commission will move to Montreal April 22-30 and Toronto-May 1-24. In August, it will cross Canada collecting information and views on taxation. More than 200 briefs are expected by the time hearings end in Ottawa late this year.

It is the first such royal commission investigation ever undertaken in Canada and will almost certainly result in a new version of the income tax act which hasn't been rewritten, apart from occasional amendments, since 1948.

The biggest slice of federal government tax revenue, 30.8 per cent, now is collected through personal income tax. Corporation taxes bring in 220-2 per cent and sales tax 14.1 per cent.

So that no opinions will be stifled in a court-room atmosphere, Mr. Carter says the commission will keep the hearings as "informal as we possibly can, consistent with fidness."

Y.M.C.A. MILLINERY COURSE — Thirty women completed an 8 week millinery course conducted at the Y.M.C.A. under the direction of Mrs. L. J. Minion.

This most interesting course in the creative art of hat making included three to four hats of varying styles and materials. The Swiss straw in beautiful spring colors was used in a number of styles, as well as covered frames with spring flowers and materials. The final style was the draping of silk organza or crystalline over shapes and resulted in beautiful and original styles.

'Lines on Life'

By Dr. Stuart E. Rosenberg

Man, we have been taught, has an innate need to love and to be loved.

Does he also possess a similar inner need to hate?

The more we study the nature of prejudice the more it appears that the primitive mind of man has not yet been outgrown. Men do hate, for no good reason, except that they need to hate.

And every man who in his adult years still needs to hate betrays his primitive infantile mental condition.

Love and hate start out as twins. The infant learns about hate only through love. He discovers his dependence upon his mother for love, only when he is frustrated by her absence.

As long as the infant is an infant, he will not be able to separate his love from his hate. He is pained by the frustration that comes when his love is not gratified; he suffers from the harsh hurt of the hate that follows. As infants, our loves and our desires are coupled to hatred and destructiveness.

However, as we grow older, we can learn new techniques whereby we can love without hating. Yet, we are often tempted to fall back upon our infantile mannerisms: we protect our own love by hating others. This happens principally to those who have sought love and have not found it. The hateful man is always the unloved man; he is a grown-up version of the loving-fearing-hating infant.

RACIAL PREJUDICE

A recent study makes this so very clear. It points up the irritating fact that racial prejudice, for example, occurs in certain people simply because of their primitive need to hate. An experiment recently listed three non-existent groups together with scores of other minorities. Those studied were asked to pick out the names of the groups that they disliked — they liked so intensely that they were willing to advocate restrictive measures against them.

The argument in "favor" of prejudice often assumes that the bigot has at least some very good "reasons" for not liking certain groups of people. How then explain the fact that those who said that they disliked Jews and Negroes also admitted their dislike for the fictitious "Danireans", "Pireneans" and "Walloons"? Clearly, prejudices and hates exist not because we have had bad experiences with certain people or groups, but rather because we walk around as adults with the tell-tale slips of our childishness, still showing: we retain our infantile need to hate somebody.

If we were loved more by those whom we really want to love, we would have less need to hate those we never-or-indeed, could never—have even met!

Racial antagonism and religious prejudices are not caused by the hated minorities, but by under-developed, unloved majorities who refuse to outgrow their childhood.

Argyll IODE Hears Reports On Activities

The regular monthly meeting of the Argyll Chapter I.O.D.E. was held in the Armories with the Regent Mrs. E. F. Smith, presiding.

Reports were given by the various conveners. Mrs. Duffy thanked all for the support given the "rummage" sale.

Mrs. Berkinshaw reported on the adopted school and said a visit would be made in June.

Members were reminded that in order to receive "Echoes," membership fees must be paid before April 15th.

Mrs. Burtt urged all members to return sewing before the end of May. An interesting letter was read re shipments of clothing to Italy and Nyasaland.

After considerable discussion, it was decided that the Argyll chapter withdraw from the United Appeal. A letter has been sent confirming this.

Magazines for the Frontier College were to be brought to the May meeting.

A donation was given toward purchase of equipment for the officers' mess.

Delegates to the annual meetings in Hamilton are Mrs. C. F. Smith and Mrs. Fullerton.

Refreshments were served following a period of entertainment.

Club Activities

President Hugh Lyons was in charge, Donald Knight was Sgt.-of-Arms and Glenn Heath gave the fellowship report. The assembly singing was led by Craig Watson with Ralph Jeffs as pianist. Two new members were installed, Harold Elliott of Bethel and Richard Draeup of Wellmans.

The devotional was conducted by Ira David. The musical portion of the program included several selections by Omar Draeup and son Richard.

The Rev. W. G. Fletcher closed the meeting.

Fifteen Nuns Running Successful Ontario Farm

LAMBETH, Ont. (CP) — A 200-acre general farming operation has proved a worthwhile venture for a small order of nuns trying to establish itself in North America.

The Dominican Sisters of Bethany turned to farming shortly after six of them arrived from Holland eight years ago. And the enthusiasm and energy with which they tackled their project are reflected today in the farm's well-kept, flourishing appearance.

The nuns started with only 12 cows, six of which became sick and had to be destroyed. Now they have 35 milking cows (many of which have won awards at livestock shows), about a dozen calves, close to 600 chickens and 15 Yorkshire sows with numerous piglets.

A recently built addition to the barn can accommodate 17 more milking cows and five calves.

"We are gradually culling the cows so that we will have purebred stock before long," said Mother Elizabeth.

ENLARGE HOME

Fifteen nuns now run the farm and the two-storey white farm house has been enlarged to provide seven more bedrooms and a recreation room on the main floor and a large chapel upstairs.

Each sister has her own duties to do around the farm. "They do the jobs which they like and which them best," said Mother Elizabeth.

Sister Daniel and Sister Praxedes are especially proud that they get "600 eggs a day" from their chickens.

When the sisters first arrived in Canada, they did domestic work at the College of Christ the King at the University of Western Ontario, London, Ont.

But as more sisters joined them, the need for their own convent increased and with the financial help of the Roman Catholic Diocese of London, the farm, about 10 miles from the city, was purchased.

REHABILITATION AIM

The order, founded in 1867 by the French Dominican Father John Joseph Lataste, aims at rehabilitation for girls "who have lost their good reputation" and the establishment of homes for children of broken homes, juvenile delinquents and emotionally disturbed children, Mother Elizabeth explained.

"The farm, with hard, healthy and interesting work is excellent for rehabilitation and if our order ever establishes a children's home reasonably near, we could feed them very well and cheaply from the food we grow right here on the farm."

The farm has also become a retreat for nuns working in other areas of the world who go there for a holiday and a training school for sisters who will work in other North American centres as the order expands.

Two homes have recently been opened in the United States—one in Chicago and one in Miami.

The sisters hope the one in Miami will help to serve the Cuban refugees as well as the American people.

Easter Film Enjoyed by U.C.W. Group

Cannifton United Church Women held the Easter meeting in the Sunday rooms with a good attendance.

The president, Mrs. D. Brenton, welcomed all present, especially the visitors and opened the meeting with the hymn "Rejoice The Lord Is King".

The open meeting will be May 1, with several societies invited.

Mrs. C. Bird had charge of the program, basing it on her theme, "Easter - rejoicing in hope." The Scripture from St. Matt. 28 was read by Mrs. A. Holgate, followed by meditation by Mrs. Boyd, "Let us think of Easter as a season of gladness and joy. All nature comes forth with strivings of new growth. The Resurrection proved that God had set the seal of His approval on the claims of Jesus Christ.

"Tragedy had changed to triumph. Love had conquered death and Easter demonstrated that death is not the end of all things.

Mrs. C. Bird read a timely story of Mary and her devotion to Jesus.

A film on the Crucifixion and Resurrection was shown.

A social half hour followed.

Christ Church P. G. Plans Blossom Tea

Mrs. H. Wright, West Moira Street, was hostess on Tuesday afternoon when she welcomed the members of Christ Parish Guild to her home for their regular monthly meeting.

It was "Operation Work" and everyone was kept busy sewing and cutting articles which will be sold at the forthcoming "Blossom Tea" which is an annual project of the Guild. Part of the tea was brought by the convener, Mrs. Fred Lazier, and the convener of the tea, Mrs. R. H. Dawson, made sure that each member left with an ample supply.

Mrs. A. Jordan, president, presided at the business portion of the meeting and thanked those who had helped at the recent missionary display, also reminded members of those who are ill in hospital.

The devotional was given by Mrs. Dawson, who took as her guide some of the writings of great thinkers in the past, notably Thomas Carlyle, all of them pertaining to spiritual strength obtained through faith.

Those who helped Mrs. Wright at tea time were: Mrs. G. Livingston, Mrs. James Wright, and Mrs. R. Wallbridge.

Women's Activities

U.C.W.

WOOLER—Mrs. Fred Van Vrals was hostess for the April meeting of Unit 2 of Wooler U.C.W. when they met on the evening of April 2.

The leader Mrs. J. Putnam opened the meeting and extended a welcome to everyone. The business portion of the meeting followed and Mrs. Homer Lowe led in the worship period. A colored film was shown on the "Judgment and Crucifixion."

Refreshments were served by Mrs. McMaster and Mrs. Van Vaals.

Diamonds Are Not Girl's Best Friend

BIOT, France (Reuters) — Diamonds are not a girl's best friend, says an internationally known designer of jewelry.

Swedish - born Torun Bulow-Hube, who works in a sunny balcony studio in this French Riviera village, believes that women's jewelry must be sensuous.

"Diamonds have a killing effect on women," says the green-eyed, shapely designer. "You see the diamonds but not the woman.

"Good jewelry reminds men of a woman's beauty. Jewelry only looks good on a woman if it expresses her inner feeling of wanting to appeal to a man."

Torun has achieved international recognition almost overnight.

Little more than a decade ago this master silversmith lived a struggling existence in a Paris Left Bank hotel.

PICASSO A CUSTOMER

Now Brigitte Bardot wears a Torun silver circle necklace with Venetian drop pendant. Pablo Picasso sports a pair of her beach pebble cuff links.

The fine arts museums of Copenhagen and Oslo have held "One - woman" Torun jewelry shows.

Torun, 35, discovered that women in Europe had a choice between impossibly expensive jewels and cheap chain-store stuff.

"I thought of those millions of young women all over the world who commute between suburban homes and city offices and have not the time to return home at night to change before going out as a date," she says.

For them she created a simple circle necklace on which a dozen different kinds of pendant might be hooked, with matching earrings. Some pendants were just ordinary beach pebbles, naturally polished by the waves, others drops of Venetian glass and specially cut semi-precious stones.

Wife of Montreal Poet Writes Children's Stories

MONTREAL (CP) — Aviva Layton, wife of Montreal poet Irving Layton, launched her own writing career when she began telling children's stories to her husband to help him relax.

Her first book, The Singing Stones, is directed at the five-to-eight-year-old set, but it was her 50-year-old husband who persuaded her to put her tales into print for children.

Mrs. Layton, a transplanted Australian, has found that "children and poets have the same fresh approach to life."

She is a schoolteacher, but says she gets no inspiration from her students. Ideas just spring to her mind, and she saves them until summer when she can write during the holidays.

"I do most of my writing in the summer and so does my husband," she says. "You need unlimited time to yourself and we rarely have that except when we're on holiday."" Mr. Layton teaches at Sir George Williams University.

"We never work together," says Mrs. Layton, "mainly because he composes aloud and taps and bangs."

She has three more books ready for publication. She is against realism in children's stories and believes "the more imaginative they are the better."

The only time she and her husband collaborated was several years ago when they wrote songs spoofing the rock 'n' roll craze. They made a recording of Mrs. Layton singing the songs.

Unwed Female Prisoners Create Problem

By RUKMINI DEVI
Canadian Press Correspondent

BOMBAY (CP) — The problem of unwed female prisoners serving short sentences is worrying provincial governments in India.

Under the prodding of social welfare workers some jail administrations have launched a campaign to find suitable husbands for the erring women within their walls. The theory is that matrimony is one sure way to rehabilitate them once they have finished their terms.

The jail department of Uttar Pradesh state has enlisted the services of some top social welfare workers to help 500 eligible spinsters in the state's prisons and lock-up. All are serving short sentences for minor offences ranging from petty thieving to violent brawling.

At a meeting of social workers in the town of Allahabad a speaker was cheered when she said: "Any young man who marries one of these girls will have the added satisfaction of moulding the life of a forlorn woman along the right lines."

The Social Welfare Association said the response has not been disappointing. A recent week saw the celebration of three post-prison weddings. One of the grooms was a university graduate.

In West Bengal, the state prison authorities said they were receiving a sizable number of inquiries from young men wanting to marry prison brides.

The city of Amritsar in the Punjab recently rolled out the red carpet for a former man who sought the hand of a fair ex - prisoner. The couple was taken in procession through the streets. A fund of 800 rupees ($160) was raised to help the newly-weds set up home. The husband has organized a cycle workshop and said: "I cannot be luckier in marriage."

SPEAKING of MANNERS

PATRICIA LEWIS

MAIL CALL

Question: A friend of mine is planning her daughter's wedding. It will take place the end of September. The bride and her mother would like the attendants to wear velvet. Would this be appropriate for that time of year or would satin gowns be more correct? There will be four bridesmaids and a maid of honor.

Also my friend knows the proper way to address envelopes when children are not included, but very often we find that people just don't pay any attention to this and bring their children anyway. Is there any way she can emphasize this point without "stepping on any toes." She has a large guest list and just can't invite the children, too. — A Steady Reader, No. Attleboro, Mass.

Answer: Velvet is appropriate for late Fall and Winter weddings. It might still be a little warm in September for such a heavy fabric. The bridal consultant in a local store would be the best source of information about what fabric would be most suitable for that locality at that time of year, based on past experiences. She'll also be able to advise about colors — which will be in fashion at the time and also which will be most suitable for the type of ceremony planned.

The problem of parents bringing children to a wedding is a fairly common one. A woman I know solved it this way: She sent out invitations addressed only to the parents. When they accepted, she then sent the mothers a note saying how glad she was they could attend and that most she would like to have included the children limited space did not permit it. The note was warm and gracious and, to the best of her knowledge no one took offense. If the parents had any intention of bringing along the kiddies, the follow-up note help change their minds. It worked for my friend, perhaps it will work for yours.

Shannonville U.C.W. Hold P-L Supper

On April 4th the Shannonville U.C.W. held a pot-luck dinner and quilting in the church hall with a goodly number in attendance.

At 2.30 Mrs. Asa Cook, president, called the group to order for the regular meeting.

Mrs. D. Hinchey took charge of the devotional the theme being, "Are Strangers Enemies?". Mrs. R. Clarke read the Scripture from Deuteronomy with Mrs. Hinchey giving the comments.

Mrs. Cook conducted the business period.

THANKS TENDERED

Thanks were given for get well cards sent to Mrs. W. Ross, Mrs. G. Stratton and Mrs. Hinchey expressed thanks for the sympathy card sent at the time of her brother's death.

Mrs. G. Stratton was appointed to the committes on social functions. This committee is to meet on Tuesday evening to make final plans for the pie social later in April.

Proceeds from the recent rummage sale were gratifying but due to the large surplus, it was decided to hold a rummage sale in Belleville, date to be set later.

The thank-offering was taken.

MEASURES SUGAR

Brown sugar can be measured accurately by packing the sugar into the cup so firmly that it holds the cup's shape when turned out.

Perfect Sour Cream Coffee Cake

by Mary Moore

Temptation won.

The recipe I am about to give you might be mistaken for a repetition of one I gave here a short time ago for a Sour Cream Coffee Cake (September 11/62). But it is quite different and comes to you highly recommended.

What happened was that the mother of the president of our Young Peoples' Union served it to the executive with tea one evening and I fell in love with it and ate two big pieces. It is perfect.

It came from Dorothy Smith who has a fine reputation as a baker at our church. At bazaars people ask "What did Dorothy Smith make?" and hustle to buy it.

I have not tasted this cake when it is a day old but Dorothy says it is just as tender and delicata as when it comes fresh from the oven.

So if you are having guests for the Easter weekend and plan to serve Hot Cross Buns but want another fast hot cake make and serve it warm.

Topping: ¾ or ¼ cup finely chopped walnuts or other nuts, ½ cup white sugar, 1½ teaspoons cinnamon.

Batter: ½ cup butter (or shortening — see note), 1 cup sugar, 2 eggs, ½ pint dairy sour cream (10-oz. or 1¼ cups), 2 cups unsifted all-purpose flour, 1 teaspoon baking soda, ¼ teaspoon salt.

Mix the topping ingredients in a bowl. Sift the dry ingredients (for the batter) together. Cream the butter (or shortening — Dorothy says she cannot tell the difference) and add the cakes when she makes one with shortening and at another time with butter). Cream in the sugar. Beat in eggs one at a time. Add sifted dry ingredients alternately with the sour cream without very much beating. Turn half of mixture into well-greased 9 or 10" tube pan. (It is more convenient if cabtre is removable, but not necessary.) Sprinkle ¾ of topping mixture over batter. Add remaining batter, sprinkle it with remaining topping. Gently pat topping on to surface of batter. Bake 45 minutes at 350 deg. Fahr. Let stand in pan 10 minutes. Turn out, but invert so top is up. Return any nuts that fall off to top.

To all of the readers of this column I hope Easter is a meaningful holiday and that your loved ones come home. My guest will be eight-month-old Jennifer as I'm going to hunt for Easter eggs this year.

SPRING: HOME, GARDEN IMPROVEMENT TIME

Canadian Garden Service

By Gordon Lindsay Smith

A RECORD WILL PROVE INTERESTING

One doesn't need to clutter up gardening with a lot of paper work, but a record of planting dates, time of blooming or maturity will prove valuable and interesting next year and later. Nothing elaborate is needed. Some people simply jot on the inside of the garage wall, the date they were first able to dig each year and then add when they got the first flowers planted or the first vegetables, just something like a record of when the birds appear and leave each year. Others keep something more permanent like a diary in which they note briefly all garden developments, then are able to make a comparison from year to year. They may also list when any particular bug or disease appeared so as to be ready next time, or they jot down the name of a flower or vegetable they may have seen in a neighbor's garden and which they want to be sure and order for themselves the next year.

A garden record like this will not only help plan and create a better garden in future years, it will settle a lot of arguments. One can refer to it then speak with authority on the name of any particular plant or shrub, and give the exact year when a certain tree was planted, know the time of the first or last frosts, therefore when it is safe to put out the bedding plants, or when it is wise to bring in the flowering tubs and so on.

FOR AN EXTRA EARLY START

There are some plants such as zinnias, melons, cucumbers, etc., that do not take kindly to transplanting and yet if we want them to bloom or mature quickly, or if we want to enjoy them at all in many of the cooler parts of Canada, the seed must be sown early, certainly well before the middle of May. Well - there is a way of doing this and still avoid late frosts or cold. Three to four weeks before we would ordinarily sow the seed of these things outside we plant it indoors in fine rich soil in special fibre pots obtainable from any seed store. These pots are made of peat moss or some such loose material and when the time comes to move the started plants to permanent quarters outside, we plant pot and all. In this way there is no disturbance at all to the roots and no set back in growth. Indeed, the pot being porous, simply disintegrates and the roots of our zinnia or melon grow right through. By using these fibre pots we can have zinnias blooming at least three weeks earlier than if sown directly outdoors and melons ripening and cucumbers ready to use in August.

Another short cut in the warmer parts of Canada is to follow the example of the English gardener, who invariably plants some of his flowers and vegetables on the early side, then protects with a pane of glass, or a sort of waxed paper little tent for the first few weeks.

WIDE VARIETY OF PATHS

Even in small layouts around the home some sort of paths are usually required and they can be made into attractive features, with a little care and planning. A winding path, of course, is much more interesting than one that runs straight from one point to another. But curves and turns should have some reason like a tree, a clump of shrubbery, a bench, a gate or wall, even if you have to put these things there deliberately. Where there will be only moderate traffic over the walk or path we can use grass. It is surprising how much wear it will stand if it is given a little plant food once in a while. Of course for heavier traffic something more substantial will be required like flagstones, brick, gravel, cinder, asphalt or even concrete. In addition to a curve around some leading through a rock garden or up to a bench will add interest or shrubbery, a few steps set to any path.

HOME OF THE WEEK

The clean cut lines of this contemporary split level emphasize the modern trend in architectural design. There are three bedrooms on the upper level and underneath is an extra room which would be suitable for a study, den, office, or even an extra bedroom. There is a handy washroom convenient to the back door. Furnace and utility area are located in the full basement beneath the kitchen-living area. There is also ample space for a large recreation room if desired. This home offers an exceptionally convenient layout for a growing family. Because of the very efficient use of the floor area, cost of building would be quite reasonable.

Standard Builders Blueprints for this design No. 808 cost $15. for the first set and $5. for additional sets. They are available in Canada by return mail. (Ontario residents must remit 3% sales tax). Now available at this newspaper office is the latest design book entitled "Canadian Guide to Home Planning and Design," price $1.00 and 12 tax free. This new edition includes information on financing in Canada, building construction details, landscaping, color selection, interior decorating, furniture arrangement, custom designing etc., plus over 100 popular and new designs to choose from. Also included in this book are full details on how to order blueprints.

Look Into the Remodeling Possibilities

Has your family outgrown the "living space" in your present home? Why not consider adding an extra room in the basement or attic? Or how about enclosing a carport or converting a garage? Careful planning before remodeling can make your home a pleasure for years to come.

First, make an inventory of your family needs and then decide which area in your home would be best suited to fulfil your requirements.

In looking around for more living space, owners of basements are truly blessed, since few if any structural changes need to be made. The walls and ceilings are already there — it is merely a question of how to cover them. A drab basement could be transformed into an attractive place for you and your children to play and entertain.

VARIED EFFECTS

A variety effect can be achieved by making use of the different widths and patterns available from Western Pine region lumber. Solid lumber used in paneling or storage units, particularly the latter, comes in for a good deal of abuse. However, if it is simply stained and waxed, wood will not show signs of fingerprints or wear, and requires only an occasional dusting and wipe down with a sponge.

Attic owners too, have the basic ingredients for one room or several, depending on the size of the home.

Furring, partitioning, insulating, paneling and moulding — then who would know that this now highly livable area under the eaves was once a repository for trunks and old newspapers?

Attics can be converted for use as charming guest rooms or additional family bedrooms.

Living quarters may be moved out to enclose an outdoor area such as a porch, patio, breezeway or carport. This newly found low-cost conversion space might well become a studio for your special interests, an informal room for relaxation and entertainment or a family room for family farm.

By blending imagination and practicality, remodeled patios and porches are designed to be activity areas, thus freeing the living room for normal and tranquil family use and saving the rest of the house from wear and tear.

ORGANIZED STORAGE

A well planned remodeling project transforms wasted space into living space and can lead to organized storage in the form of built-ins. One of the most practical forms of built-in units is the storage wall. This type of storage may be either straight storage, a combination of storage and furniture, or storage and activity.

Whether your project entails a step-by-step remodeling process toward a total goal or a single project approach, careful planning is necessary.

Even if you plan a do-it-yourself remodeling project, you might wish to have the advice or part of the work done by a building contractor. He will also be able to counsel you on structural considerations and local building codes and restrictions. When it comes to choice of materials, your own lumber dealer is the best authority.

FOGGY AREA

The Grand Banks fishing area off Newfoundland is recognized as the world's foggiest area.

Family Pool Ownership Now Easier

Families by the thousands are now getting in the swim" — in their own backyards!

Until quite recently, the matter of cost made ownership of a private swimming pool a luxury to be enjoyed mainly by movie stars and the wealthy.

Today, the price of installing a backyard pool has been reduced to a point that is well within the reach of the average home-owner.

There are currently in the neighborhood of 425,000 swimming pools in America, with more being installed every day as people learn that you no longer have to be rich to own your own pool.

The backyard pool eliminates the inconvenience of traffic-congested drives to and from the beach or lake and is an investment that pays handsome dividends in outdoor living and informal entertaining.

EASY TO FINANCE

It has the added advantage of being an improvement that greatly increases property value. Many banks and finance agencies are willing to arrange convenient time payment plans for such a project.

Great progress has also been made in pool construction methods. The home owner choosing a pool is offered a wide and varied choice of installations to suit every site requirement and family need.

Pool design is no longer restricted to rectangular shape. Interesting free-form pools can now be built at reasonable cost, thanks to the development of "guniting," a process by which sand, cement and water are sprayed under high pressure to form the pool shell.

New lines of plastic fittings and equipment are winning enthusiastic acceptance. These new plastics offer lower cost, greater permanence and safety, and are easily maintained. Plastic pool liners, fabricated to shape and size of the desired pool, make any structure watertight and eliminates periodic pool painting.

Another development is the increasing use of stainless steel for deck and filter equipment.

Other break-throughs in the field have simplified the task of keeping pools clean. The newer methods are far more efficient, and in the future lies the exciting possibility of a truly self-cleaning pool.

Today's pools are speedily installed, eliminating the need to endure a torn-up backyard for weeks or months. In the installation of prefabricated pools, many do-it-yourselfers are tackling much of the work themselves.

In more and more homes, the backyard swimming pool has become the focal point of outdoor living. There is growing awareness of the appeal of a well-thought out "poolscape" achieved by the imaginative use of color and texture in tile, coping and deck-work.

Pool-side accessories, such as umbrellas and patio furnishings, are chosen to co-ordinate with the hues of the pool.

ROSLIN

Local 183 F. U. Holds P-L Supper

ROSLIN — The March meeting of Roslin Local 183 Ontario Farmers' Union was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Russell Reid with a good attendance.

The president, Mr. Carman Gibson, presided over the meeting. It was decided to have a pot-luck supper in the hall on April 1st.

An interesting program followed. Mrs. Gibson gave an outline of the "Workshop Fellowship" meeting which was held in the hall on March 9th with Mrs. Hopkins, Mr. Frank Gambel and Mr. Ed Morden as speakers from head office.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Chisholm showed slides on their trip to the north country; also on their recent trip to Florida.

The April meeting will be held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Meeks.

Lunch was served by the ladies and a social time enjoyed.

A successful pot-luck supper was held in the Roslin Hall by the members of Local 183, Ontario Farmers' Union, April 1st.

Slides were shown during the evening by the men from Hydro, which were much enjoyed. Mr. Wilbur Bateman, from Springbrook, gave humorous songs, playing his own accompaniment on the guitar.

Greetings were brought from the Locals of Tweed, Springbrook and Marysville.

Two Fishermen

water blocked their path, they plunged into the icy water and swam 30 feet.

FOUND CLOTHING

Once ashore, they found dry clothing in a cottage in the Peninsula's bird sanctuary. They slept and then made the 26-mile hike to the provincial park.

They hadn't changed their minds.

"We thought we were right," said Jennings, "and we still do, no matter what happened."

The two drove to Port Dover, about seven miles south of here, with their friend, Capt. Gray, to take the boat out of its winter berth. They left Port Dover about 5 a.m. to sail the 70-mile course around the Long Point Peninsula to Port Bruce.

"Most of the disagreement was on the course we were taking," explained Jennings, a high school student. "We were staying close inland, running into too much ice. We wanted to go farther out and the captain didn't.

WOULDN'T RETURN

"We wouldn't back down so we got him to put us ashore about a mile from the lighthouse at the end of the peninsula. At least we thought we were ashore, but behind a big ice bank there was open water."

Jennings and Niblock had no intention of going back, so they swam across the freezing water, walked onto the wind-swept point, took a deep breath and started trudging toward civilization.

Another Home Earner

DORIS CLARK

DEAR DORIS—Recently it has been necessary for me to assist with family finances. Perhaps "Married Ten Years" would like to follow in my footsteps. I placed an ad in a local paper to the effect that I would do ironing for one dollar per hour.

Do you know, Doris, it really worked! I have earned sufficient to feed and clothe four children, pay for nurse to assist with ill child, and take care of all the unexpected necessities which have arisen due to the prolonged and apparently incurable illness of our child.

Hope this suggestion helps. Perhaps she could bake, type, or sew in order to cut down expenses. Regardless of what she does, my heart goes out to her. I wish her luck, but her husband is right, stay home with your children.—ADOPTED MOM OF FOUR.

DEAR MOM—Ironing is hereby added to the list of home professions. Thanks for reporting.

* * *

DEAR DORIS—1. Could you please tell me if it is proper etiquette for the mother and sister of the groom to have a shower for the bride? 2. I would also like to know if it is proper to announce a marriage in personals the night before the wedding, to give time and place, when the engagement has been announced three or four weeks previous?—CURIOUS.

* * *

DEAR CURIOUS:

No.

2. No. Bad taste.

CONFIDENTIAL TO MRS. C. B., TRENTON—Watch the column for an item on this subject. If you want me to write you direct send me a five-cent-stamped, self-addressed envelope.

have been a ship just above the submarine which was cruising near the surface. As it turned out there was nothing.

Then there was the time aboard the Seawolf, second atomic submarine built.

The Seawolf had left Key West, Fla., on a routine trip to New London, Conn. A message came to join in a hunt for a suspected unknown submarine off the Florida coast.

The tempo changed. A routine training operation became a hunt to see whether there was a foreign submarine (specifically a Russian submarine) hovering off the U.S. coast.

Hour upon hour, the submarine cruised, stopping, moving, listening on passive sonar, closing in toward an area where the suspected unknown was reported.

HUNT, LISTEN

The Seawolf hunted and listened.

"Take her deeper." The diving officer called off the depth . . . "Passing one hundred . . . passing two hundred" . . . and more and more hundreds. The depth indicator needle crept steadily towards the red line, then passed it.

The submarine was below the depth for which its hull and fittings were tested. Submarines can do this. It is hard on the boat and on the men's nerves, but it is done.

If you watched closely, you caught crew members stealing quick glances at rivets and hull fittings as the terrific pressure of deep water built up.

The understanding is that a submarine hull usually doesn't just crush inwards, although this probably has happened in some accidents. What probably happens in most instances is that an intake valve or other fittings gives way suddenly. A compartment floods and the pressure overwhelms the door and bulkheads into other compartments. Suddenly the boat is filled and the pressure equalizes. It goes on down and down, until it rests on the bottom.

There Are Striking Parallels Between the Political Scene In Ottawa Now and June '57

OTTAWA (CP)—There are striking parallels between the political scene in Ottawa now and in June of 1957.

On a warm Wednesday nearly six years ago, Liberal Prime Minister St. Laurent returned to the capital from his Quebec City constituency where two days earlier he had watched the flow of returns from a general election in which no party obtained a majority in the 265-seat House of Commons and his own party wound up second best.

Wednesday night Conservative Prime Minister Diefenbaker flew in from Prince Albert, Sask., confronted by a somewhat similar election picture. But on this Wednesday he came into gloomy weather, after a day of cloudy, misty and raw temperatures.

Mr. St. Laurent met Thursday for a meeting of his cabinet, nine members of which were beaten at the polls in their own constituencies.

Mr. Diefenbaker plans a cabinet meeting today—Thursday. Six of his ministers were beaten in their constituencies. Five others resigned earlier or did not contest the election.

CABINET NEXT

After a total of cabinet sessions six years ago, Mr. St. Laurent said on the Friday after the June 10 election he would not be proper to "form or initiate a decision" on a government change until after announcement of service vote results, due on the Saturday.

This time, Mr. Diefenbaker has already suggested that any decision would await result of the service vote, expected to be announced once more on a Saturday.

But there were contrasts today, as well as parallels, with 1957.

For one thing, Mr. Diefenbaker's role was reversed. Six years ago he served on a commercial airliner on the Friday morning after the election to find the capital tense with expectation that a Conservative administration would take over after 22 years in opposition.

This time, he came by chartered plane. And the expectation was that he would turn over the reins of office to Liberal leader Lester B. Pearson.

PEARSON WAS PRESENT

Mr. Pearson, in his current role, didn't want to be too partial. He was here for election day Monday. This afternoon he flies to Toronto for a visit with his grandchildren and to attend Thursday night's Stanley Cup hockey battle between Toronto and Detroit.

Mr. Pearson's return plans are indefinite and it isn't known whether he will be here for conference with Mr. Diefenbaker such as the latter held with Mr. St. Laurent six years ago before the changeover was announced.

There was a contrast also in the strength of the parties.

Six years ago, the Conservatives held 109 of the 265 Commons seats before the service vote count, against 105 for the Liberals. The CCF held 25, social Credit 19, others five, one constituency vote was deferred and there was one vacancy caused by death of a Conservative within a week of the election.

This time the Liberals hold 128 seats, Conservatives 96, Social Credit 26 and New Democratic Party (formerly the CCF) 17. The Liberals hold high hopes that the service vote, traditionally pro-Liberal, will give them three or possibly four more seats.

TIME WILL TELL

Only time will tell whether future events show any more parallels with 1957. Then Mr. St. Laurent and his cabinet met again on a windy day, 11 days after the June 10 election. That night about 7 o'clock he went to the Governor-General and tendered his resignation for the latter's consideration.

The Governor-General, then Rt. Hon. Vincent Massey, sent for Mr. Diefenbaker, asking him to be at Government House at 8:30 p.m. At the meeting, Mr. Massey asked Mr. Diefenbaker would form a government. The latter agreed.

By agreement, further official action was suspended until the following Friday to give Mr. Diefenbaker time to select his first cabinet. On Friday, June 21, Mr. St. Laurent went to Government House where the Governor-General accepted his resignation. He was accompanied by members of his cabinet who went to take their leave of the Governor-General.

Formal acceptance of the resignation came at 10:05 a.m.

Mr. Diefenbaker and the 17 members of his first cabinet arrived at 11 a.m. At 11:40 a.m., the government changeover was completed when Mr. Diefenbaker was sworn in as privy councillor and the Queen's first minister in Canada.

Justice Rules Union President Not Eligible

TORONTO (CP) — President David B. Archer of the Ontario Federation of Labor should not have sat on an Ontario Labor Relations Board hearing on a recertification struggle involving the International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers (Ind.), Chief Justice J. C. McRuer ruled Wednesday.

The Ontario Supreme Court said Mr. Archer should not have sat as a member of an impartial judiciary because he is chief executive officer of an organization that has declared a political interest in Mine-Mill.

"I think it is asking too much of human nature," he said in a written judgment.

Mr. Justice McRuer granted Mine-Mill Local 902 an order prohibiting the OLRB from considering the Dec. 7 application by the Sudbury General Workers' Union (CLC) from Mine-Mill bargaining rights for a group of supermarket employees.

Mine-Mill's counsel withdrew from the certification hearing after Mr. Archer refused to disqualify himself. The board heard the application and reserved its decision which has yet to be released.

ACTED AS CHAIRMAN

Mr. Justice McRuer said that Mr. Archer had acted as chairman of a 1961 OFL convention which endorsed the campaign by the United Steelworkers of America (CLC) to wrest bargaining rights at the International Nickel Company of Canada Limited Sudbury plant. The Steelworkers have been a prolonged legal battle.

He said Mr. Archer had been faced with the added responsibility of carrying out the "delicate" duties of the Ontario Federation of Labor and on the other hand to decide impartially every matter that may be in conflict with these policies."

"I feel confident that if the facts had been presented to him at the time the objection was made in the light that I have set out he would have disqualified himself."

Apart from Mr. Archer and Mr. Justice McRuer, the prohibition also includes Frank Gallant, board deputy vice-president, and Morris C. Hay, a member.

Four Rules For Burning Rubbish

TORONTO — If you're burning debris at camp or cottage within the Fire District during the fire season, follow these four simple fire prevention safety rules:

1. Obtain a fire permit from your local fire warden or forest ranger.

2. Set your fire in a safe place, preferably an incinerator.

3. Always burn at a safe time, never on a windy day. It is safer to burn in the evening when the wind is calm.

4. Never leave your fire until it is dead out.

TURNS INFORMER

NEW YORK (AP) — Bobby Wilcoxson, most notorious U.S. bank bandit since the John Dillinger days, pleaded guilty Wednesday to seven bank robberies. He apparently turned FBI informer on his own gang to save his skin. U.S. Attorney Joseph Hoey said the 32-year-old Wilcoxson is co-operating with the FBI concerning several unsolved crimes and is expected to be a government witness at the pending trial of two confederates, Albert Nussbaum and Eddie Green.

Twelve local women graduated last night at Education Hall from the Red Cross Volunteer Nursing Service Course. The course, for one night a week for twelve weeks, qualifies them to serve without pay in the Red Cross Home Nursing Service. Mrs. Ken Thompson, president of the local branch looks on as Mrs. A. H. Ketcheson presents one of the graduates, Mrs. N. King with her pin.

Some Diplomats Sad About British Chances in Market

By ALAN HARVEY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Britain and France have taken the first tentative steps towards patching up their Common Market quarrel, but the happy ending may be a long way off.

The meeting in Paris between President De Gaulle and the Earl of Home, Britain's foreign secretary, represents a welcome improvement in relations, and encouragement can be gleaned from the bumper crop of British tourists bent on pending Easter in the French capital.

But there are diplomats in Paris who shake their heads sadly when asked about Britain's chances of gaining admittance to the Common Market club. They argue that there will have to be a sharp change in the political climate first.

MOST WAIT YEARS

It used to be said that Britain's negotiations to join the European Economic Community were "doomed to succeed," reflecting a French feeling that much as it has to be deplored, Britain would find a way in somehow.

Now the French are saying that things will be "ripe" for British entry at another three to five years. Among foreign diplomats in Paris, there is some speculation that it will take:

"The fact is, you know, that the British and the French just don't like each other very much," one informant said recently.

"There is a lot of jealousy and suspicion on both sides."

The two countries, some say, are basically as different as a cat and a dog. There may be periods of uneasy peace, but the hissing and the spitting is sure to break out sooner or later.

LIKE WALLS

Recently a high French official, seeking to explain to a visiting Canadian minister the underlying incompatibility of temperament, chose the example of the walls of houses in regards the landscaping of gardens.

The Englishman, he said, likes to have his garden neatly laid out in a classical, symmetrical style. It may well be indistinguishable from 1,000 other gardens in 1,000 other suburbs.

The Frenchman, on the other hand, prefers to improvise, to draw his inspiration from nature, to have something different than his neighbors. And then he throws a high, impenetrable stone wall around the property.

The analogy may seem farfetched, but British negotiations will at least confirm that French attitudes, before and after the breakdown of the Brussels discussions, have certainly been impenetrable.

Even Reds Join in Praise Of Encyclical

LONDON (CP)—Virtually all political factions in western Europe unite in rare agreement today in praise of Pope John's new encyclical on peace.

Left - wing and Communist newspapers were as quick to jump into print with favorable responses as were conservative and Roman Catholic publications.

L'Unita in Italy and L'Humanite in Paris—the organs of western Europe's two biggest Communist parties—underline their Pope's views on peace and social change.

"It is an immense satisfaction," says L'Humanite, "to see the highest Catholic authority take unshakable stand on the moral movement of the largest masses and, by the same token, favor action toward peace."

L'Unita's front-page editorial leads up to the same message dealing with "a positive dialogue" between East and West.

Austria's Communist Volkswille-me headlines the "Papal message of peace" and Drafeu Rouge in Belgium runs a full report stressing the Pope's remarks on nuclear weapon and disarmament.

"This encyclical," says the Belgian Communist paper, "is a testimony to the efforts undertaken to widen or adapt (Roman Catholic) doctrine to the social demands of our time."

In Yugoslavia Politika, the Communist country's largest daily, headlines its report from Rome: "Pope John XXIII demands strengthening of UN."

Soviet newspapers make no mention of the encyclical, "pacem in terris" (peace on earth), possibly indicating the Kremlin is judging it. The Soviet news agency Tass carried a brief digest in its overseas service emphasizing the call for a halt in the arms race and the Pope's warning against accidental nuclear war.

Non-Communist opinion was struck by the encyclical's wide appeal "to all men of good will," the first time in history such a papal letter was addressed to non-Catholics as well as Catholics.

World Pressures For Peace in Laos Rising

VIENTIANE (AP)—The Canadian, Indian and Polish members of the International Control Commission met separately with warring pro - Communist Pathet Lao and neutralist commanders on the Plain of Jars Wednesday in an attempt to end the hostilities menacing Laos' freedom and neutrality.

The Indian chairman, Avtar Singh, said the commission found the situation quiet but tense.

No fresh shooting was reported. The latest incident was a Pathet Lao attack Tuesday on a detachment of live or six tanks approaching the plain in an effort to reinforce the beleaguered neutralists.

World pressures for peace were rising. The Russians joined in those pressures. But Red China's propagandists openly took the side of the Pathet Lao.

In Washington, the state department said in a statement it would give consideration to any formal request from the Laotian government for arms aid to the neutralists.

Commission members made a flying trip to the disputed, hill-ringed plateau 120 miles northeast of Vientiane in an effort to force another neutralist Gen. Kong Le and the Pathet Lao's military chief, Gen. Singkapo.

Informed sources said the two generals expressed readiness to meet, but the arrangements apparently were left in the air. Kong Le said he wants nothing to do with Col. Deuane, a dissident neutralist who has aligned himself and perhaps 300 other neutralist army men with the Pathet Lao.

Libera's Look for Minister To Shake up Defence Dept.

OTTAWA (CP)—The Liberals are looking for a new defence minister for any government they form.

Many Liberals want a tough cookie to "shake out" the defence department and "bring down" any senior officer who steps out of line on policy.

Some Liberals say recent history shows a defence minister must lay down the law in the department in his first 10 days or be "captured" by the military.

The former Liberal administration was embarrassed by public statements by Lt.-Gen. George Simonds, then chief of the general staff, advocating national selective service, but never fired him.

The Liberals say they won't tolerate again such public disagreements by the military with government policy.

Some military officers say the defence department hasn't had a shaking up since the post-war defence buildup started in 1950 and that it needs one.

They add that the department sometimes gets bogged down in almost endless committee meetings and that often new, bright ideas are rejected by officers interested mainly in the status quo.

NEEDS BACKING

Some Liberals say a new defence minister should have the unqualified backing of the prime minister to achieve reforms in the department, including giving the power to fire senior officers."

Liberal Leader Pearson has already said he has no advance what would amount to a massive shakeup in the defence department. Integration of the armed forces under "single control"

He has urged the "complete co-ordination" of the armed forces into a "truly national defence service" so that "common defence plans, policies, tactics and ideas will have to be scrapped, he has said.

The man Mr. Pearson may appoint, if he forms a government, is Charles Mills (Bud) Drury, 50, MP for Montreal Mount Royal since 1957.

Mr. Drury commanded a brigade in the 4th Canadian Armored Division in North West Europe in the Second World War.

He was deputy defence minister from 1949 to 1955, when he returned to Montreal to become president of a provincial transport company. He practised law from 1936 to 1939, was chief of the Canadian political and works agency mission to Poland in 1945-46 and was in the external affairs department in 1947-49.

He was deputy defence minister under the late Brooke Claxton in the busiest years of the defence buildup and knows the department inside out.

Moreover, he's a hardrock.

Egypt, Syria Iraq to Form New Republic

CAIRO (AP) — The rulers of Egypt, Syria and Iraq have agreed to unite their 38,000,000 people in a new United Arab Republic with Cairo as the capital, but they are keeping most of the details secret.

After four days of unity negotiations, Egyptian Premier Aly Sabry announced Wednesday night that the new U.A.R. will have a single flag, a central military command and one nationality for all.

Sabry did not say who will head the unified state, but there seemed little doubt that Egypt's President Nasser will hold the reins.

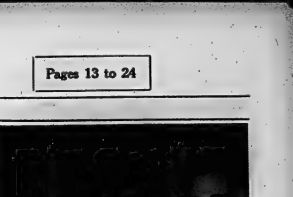
Sabry's announcement indicated the new U.A.R. will have a strong central government, controlling foreign affairs, defence, economic planning, currency, foreign trade, customs and taxes. But a man present at the negotiations said purely local affairs will be kept in local hands rather than under the tight iron control which a feature of the earlier abortive Syria-Egypt union.

Sabry said the new state will have central control of information, education, religious affairs and of education to insure "unified thought for the nationalist unionist trend."

With much still to be worked out, the unity negotiators are continuing to meet in Cairo.

Former General, Edwin A. Walker Said Shot At

DALLAS, Tex. (AP) — Former Maj-Gen. Edwin A. Walker said Wednesday night he was the victim of an attempted rifle assassination but that a fat at a desk before a window of his home.



The retired general, a controversial figure before and since leaving the army, said he was sitting at the desk working on his income tax report when a rifle bullet slammed through the window.

A Walker aide said "It was inconceivable that it was a miss-ed, the shot was so close."

Asked if he had any idea who shot at him, the former general replied: "There are plenty of people on the other side. You would be out of business if they earn a Purple Heart."

"I've been saving the front was right here at home."

Asked if he was taking precautions at his home, Walker replied doing the same thing I was before it happened, sitting at the same desk, working on my income tax."

GIFTS ACROSS THE SEA — Major Dan Cronin, Royal Sussex Regiment, presents Lieut.-Col. Joseph Black, commanding officer of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, with commemorative gifts of regimental affiliation. Looking proudly on is the famous Indian mascot "Petawawa-Much" of the Hasty Pees.

Hasty Pees Regt. Honored By Famous Royal Sussex

Affiliation ties of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment and the Royal Sussex Regiment of the British Army have not been weakened by the passing of time.

Association between the two regiments was made during World War Two when the Hasty Pees became the Canadian affiliate of the famous British Regiment.

By virtue of this affiliation the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment carries on many of the customs of the British unit of the line.

A further strengthening of the "ties that bind" these two famous regiments was made recently when a senior officer of the Royal Sussex visited the Hasty Pees and presented the unit with tokens of remembrance.

Major Dan Cronin, Royal Sussex Regiment, the special guest of Lieut-Colonel Joseph Black, commanding officer of the Hasty Pees and his officers, presented the local regiment with handsome officers' mess hat badges, mounted on bases to be used as menu holders.

Lt.-Col. Black accepted the gifts which were presented on behalf of General Whistler, Colonel-in-Chief of the Royal Sussex.

Col. Black in a special address of appreciation, extended the greetings and warm wishes of himself, his officers and the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment to Major Cronin, the commanding officer and officers and men of the British regiment.

Cemetery Firm Would Be Out of Business Without Door-to-Door Salesmen

EDMONTON (CP) — The president of a firm which operates 40 cemeteries in Canada says commercial cemetery and prearranged funeral firms would be out of business if their salesmen were prohibited from selling on a door-to-door basis.

The comment was made Wednesday by J. H. Edwards of Toronto, president of Memorial Gardens Association which controls three Alberta cemetery operations and others outside the province.

Asked by Chief Justice C. C. McLaurin, who concluded a one-man royal commission investigation into cemetery, Funeral and securities legislation, what his chances were of some if door-to-door sales were prohibited, Mr. Edwards said he would have to go out of business.

The chief justice replied: "I'm wondering if the answer is no door-to-door selling." He suggested such firms could advertise in newspapers, on radio or television "that you have something to sell," but no more.

"I'm wondering if there's too much stress on the obligations of death and too little on the obligations of life. Life insurance, to people age 31, is worth an awful lot more than a plot in Mountainview, (a Calgary cemetery controlled by Memorial) I think."

THINKS IT WRONG

Chief Justice McLaurin said his views were not conclusive but he thought the system of commercially prepaid funeral plots and trappings might be "philosophically wrong.

Anybody who dies in the city of Calgary will have his body interred with or without previous arrangements."

The chief justice has been stern in his comments on the current operations of commercial cemeteries and prearranged funeral firms.

He has said he will recommend that legislation banning new commercial cemeteries be adopted in Alberta.

Chief Justice McLaurin said some commercial cemetery firms have used a "very, very aggressive collection policy."

When Mr. Edwards protested that his corporation never used over - aggressive methods, the chief justice said: "Yes, but you've written letters. I know, because I've seen them. Some pretty stinking letters, too, I'll tell you."

Admits Paying $2,000 to Kill Son's Wife

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y. (CP) A jealous mother-in-law who admitted paying a man $2,000 to strangle her son's wife was sentenced Wednesday to 40 years to life in prison in the killing.

Mrs. Clementine Corona, 56, who pleaded guilty to second-degree murder, told authorities she did not think her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Elizabeth Corona, 19, was good enough for her son, James, 23, a hairdresser at a beauty shop.

John Griffith, 40, charged with being her accomplice, faces sentencing April 16. He also pleaded guilty to a charge of second-degree murder.

The mother-in-law told police that she and Griffith, a coworker in a laundry, went to her son's apartment March 17, 1962, and killed his wife while her two-month-old boy was in the room.

She contended that Griffith did the killing while she watched.

SHOT WAS SUCCESS

LONDON (Reuters) — Soviet academician Anatoly Blagonravov said Wednesday night that Russia's Lunik IV moon shot had successfully completed its set program, the Soviet news agency Tass reported from Moscow. He told foreign students studying in Moscow processing of data received from the moon shot, launched last week, was "extremely complicated," Tass said.

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

Red Wings supporters horseboots are not exactly going around like the canary inside the cat, because the Maple Leafs grabbed the first bauble of the Stanley Cup series.

They shuddered at the odds issued by the boys in the backrooms but point to the fact the Black Hawks were favored in the first bracket—and "lookit what happened?" The Wings bounced back with four straight, leaving the dead bodies of the Hawks strewn over the battlefield.

They should know better than point to statistics because water-under-the-bridge happenings don't mean a tinker's dam as far as futurities are concerned.

However, they are taking some solace from the fact that the Red Wings defeated the Leafs on the season's series 7-3-1, but as the Leafs' Punch Imlach says, "history isn't going to decide the Stanley Cup and as Sid Abel says, "you'll get no predictions from me."

The Leaflan express fired by the fuel of desire swept past the sidetracked Black Hawks in a blaze of finishing glory to win the National Hockey League championship—and with their tanks far from empty they should go on to take the dual honors.

However stranger things have happened. Don't sell these Red Wings short. They went down before the Hawks twice in succession, after finishing five points off the top, then roared back to flatten the Falcons in a straight foursome.

The Leafs had it somewhat easier. They backed up, took a deep breath, then under Colonel Punch Imlach started the charge up hockey's San Juan Hill. They were halted by a minor counter-charge on the part of Toe Blake's Habitants, then reloaded and swept aside the opposition in two consecutive attacks.

Meanwhile the Red Wings are healthy, quite happy and bubbling over with desire. In this, at least, they can match the Leafs and a lot of people will say they can equal the Leafs in other departments too.

The Leafs may have suffered something of a severe blow with the sidelining of Mahovlich who, to quote rabid Leaflan supporters, "forms a devastating combination with Red Kelly, M.P."

However, the big Leaf star did nothing to write home about in the Canadiens' series and his "devastating" tactics were conspicuous by their absence. However his absence will upset the balance of the club and Maestro Imlach may have to shuffle.

I doubt very much that the absence of Mahovlich will lower the Leafs from their high-riding crest. It may give an added boost to the one-down, but high-fluttering Wings.

Neither team has any noticeable weakness anywhere. But the Wings can least afford injuries. Thus far they have escaped them and on that premise hangs part of their chances for success.

The Keons, Duffs, Armstrongs, Pulfords, Shacks and company trust the Leafs' formidable defence of Brewer, Baun, Horton and/an Douglas and Stanley, who played a whale of a game Tuesday night, while aging Johnny Bower, who stars in the clutches can be replaced if necessary by Don Simmons.

And over the shoulder comes the basso-profundo voice of Sandy O'Gilnsberg, the oppy boy, "And don't forget, there's three guys named Howe, Delvecchio and Parker MacDonald, who are quite a handful. Not to mention Norm Ullman, who is playing superbly with Floyd Smith and Larry Jeffrey. Also McGregor, Stasiuk, Faulkney, Joyal, Provonost and Pontoyne. Gadsby, Pronovost, Barkley and Sawchuk—well—they're good enough."

Tonight the Stanley Cup horses go to the barrier again, and a win for the Leafs will boost their stock considerably. If the Wings pull away with a win the back room odds should change quite a bit. And if they lose—well—their supporters point to the fact they dropped the first pair to the Hawks, then won four. But this is hardly probable. The way the teams shape now the series could go the limit.

Howe Had The Flu, But Nobody Knew

By BILL MacDOUGALL

TORONTO (CP)—Toronto Maple Leafs can win hockey games without Frank Mahovlich, but where would Detroit Red Wings be without Gordie Howe?

Many say : Nowhere.

However, getting rid of Howe is another thing. The big right winger, who has been selected to the first all-star teams 13 of his 17 National Hockey League seasons and is a good bet to get the nod again this year, had the "flu for the first game of the Stanley Cup final Tuesday night.

He still had it Wednesday, but the odds were that nothing that simple would keep him out of the second game here tonight.

Mahovlich, a 26-goal man this year, was in a slump in Leafs' semi-final against Montreal Canadiens but Toronto still won four games to one. Tuesday night Detroit defenceman Bill Gadsby checked him in the first period of Toronto's 4-3 victory and he limped off and was take into hospital.

His injury was diagnosed Wednesday as a sprain and bruise on the left knee. It will keep him off the Leaf bench tonight but a Leaf spokesman said "it looks very good" for Mahovlich's return for the third game of the best-of-seven series in Detroit Sunday.

"I guess he'll be all right," Detroit manager-coach Sid Abel said Wednesday of Howe, who was under a doctor's care. He and the rest of the players received anti-influenza inoculations at the start of the season and it was hoped this measure, although it didn't keep the bug away, will help him get over it in a hurry.

Howe was a key man in the Wings' fourth-place finish in the tight NHL race this season. He had 86 points—38 goals and 48 assists—in winning his sixth scoring championship.

Mahovlich's absence will leave a hole on the line with Red Kelly at centre and Ron Stewart at right wing. Toronto manager-coach Punch Imlach wouldn't say who'll fill the space, but in answer to reporters' questions after Leafs practised Wednesday he mentioned the names of defencemen Carl Brewer and Kent Douglas.

Douglas worked out with Kelly and Stewart. Hailed in many quarters as an almost cinch for rookie-of-the-year honors, he had some forward experience with Springfield Indians of the American League and has been used mainly in recent games as point man on the power play.

Brewer had some forward experience as an amateur. Late this season he was put on left wing when Leafs were beset with injuries. But the move never lasted for more than a period or so of any game.

CARRY SIX DEFENDERS

Leafs can afford to move a defenceman up because they are carrying six for the playoffs. Larry Hillman was brought up from Rochester Americans of the AHL in the middle of the semi-final and, although he has seen almost no action, has been dressed for every game since he arrived.

There'll be an extra spot on the bench and that will likely go to either Johnny MacMillan, almost recovered from a late-season elbow injury, or Gary Jarrett, up from Rochester. Both are wingers.

Abel revealed Wednesday that the Red Wing players got together late in the season and decided the team they would rather meet in the semi-final was Toronto. As it turned out, the Wings were paired against Chicago Black Hawks, who went down in six games.

"The players wanted to meet Toronto because they felt they could beat them—and they still do," Abel said.

Whip Moncton 8-3

Bulldogs Take 2-1 Lead

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP)—Windsor Bulldogs slammed home four goals without a reply in the first period and went on to defeat Moncton Hawks 8-3 Wednesday night, taking a 2-1 lead in their best-of-seven Eastern Allan Cup final series.

The fourth game will be played here Saturday night and the fifth next Monday night, also in Windsor.

Tommy Walker set the scoring pace with three goals for the Bulldogs. Irwin Gross netted a pair with Jacques Beglin, Lou Bendo and Bob Brown adding singles. Gross also had five assists while Walker claimed a pair.

Simon Nolet, Georges Roy and Oscar Gaudet scored for Moncton. Gaudet's goal came on a penalty shot in the second period awarded by referee orm Warner when Doug Howatt was dragged down from behind on a breakaway. It was Gaudet's 81st goal of the season.

Jean-Guy Morissette turned in another outstanding game in the Moncton nets despite the eight goals. He kicked out 34 shots to 19 for Wayne Rutledge of Windsor.

A crowd of 3,239 saw Warner levy 12 minor penalties, seven to the visitors.

Ottawa Jrs. Win Opener

OTTAWA (CP)—Ottawa Montagnards, Ottawa district junior hockey champions, blanked Charlottetown Penguins 6 - 0 Wednesday night in the opening game of their best-of-five interprovincial playoff series.

The Maritime champions, who stepped off a train just eight hours before game time, had a shaky first period when they fell behind 2-0. They showed considerable improvement in the scoreless second period but Monties had too much skate for them in the final session.

Winger Al Stitt paced the Ottawa attack with two goals. Other scorers were Larry Larock, J. P. Grouix, Greg Gordon and Bob Byrnes.

Montagnards say they will challenge the Ontario branch junior champions if they get by the Maritime club. Canadian Amateur Hockey Association officials said last week that they are trying to fit the Ottawa challenge into Memorial Cup play.

BETTERS RECORD

MATCHITOCHES, La. (AP)—Pole-vaulter John Pennel again bettered his own record Wednesday with a leap of 16 feet, four inches. Official said a surveyor would be called in to check the measurement to see if it would be submitted as a record. Pennel, 22 - year - old Northeast Louisiana State senior, set the pending world mark at 16 feet, three inches March 23 at the Memphis Relays. Pennel easily hit his new height on his second try Wednesday in an outdoor meet with Northwestern Louisiana State and McNeese. On his first attempt his feet knocked the bar off as he was coming down.

Frontenacs Defeat Wolves 6-2

KINGSTON (CP) — Kingston Frontenacs received leadership from an old pro and power from an unexpected source Wednesday night to whip Sudbury Wolves 6-2 in the opener of their Eastern Professional Hockey League best-of-seven final series.

Cliff Pennington, a former member of the National Hockey League's Boston Bruins, was the team leader as he continually carried much of the Frontenac attack.

Pennington, playing one of his stronger games, didn't score any goals but led the action and made the play for four of his team's goals.

And Dick Cherry, who usually sees only limited action, was in the right place at the right time and scored three goals to lead the Kingston attack.

ROUND IT OUT

Pete Panagabko, Wayne Connelly and Don Blackburn each counted once to round out the scoring for the winners.

Norm (Red) Armstrong and Mike McMahon scored for the Wolves.

Bruce Gamble starred in the Frontenac nets with 34 saves. Gerry Cheevers stopped 33 shots for Sudbury.

The loss for the Wolves was their first in playoff action, after eliminating Hull - Ottawa Canadiens three straight in the semi-finals.

The second game of the series will be Friday in Sudbury.

East — Niagara Falls Flyers, Toronto Neil McNeil Maroons, Espanola Eagles, North Bay Trappers, Timmins.

West — Estevan Bruins, Edmonton Oil Kings, Brandon Wheat Kings.

Ed Bailey figures to play second fiddle with San Francisco Giants, but when he picks up the pitch he can blast off like a tuba player.

The veteran Giants catcher, No. 2 backstop behind Tom Haller, got the call for a solo against Houston and crashed a pinch-hit, grand-slam homer that carried the defending National League champions from behind for an 8-7 victory over the Colts Wednesday night.

Too valuable to be traded despite a desire to play regularly, Bailey figures in the Giants' plan both as a solid relief man for Haller and a long-ball threat in pinch-hit situations. Last year he hit only .222 in 90 games but collected 17 homers and 46 runs batted in.

The Giants trailed 7-4 going into the eighth but loaded the bases against reliever Don McMahon on walks to Willie Mays, Haller and Felipe Alou. Then Bailey lined out on a 3-2 pitch.

KOUFAX FANS 10

Los Angeles left-hander Sandy Koufax gave his finger its first filing of the regular season, struck out 10 batters in a game for the 41st time and allowed only five hits as the Dodgers edged Chicago Cubs 2-1.

Philadelphia Phillies erupted for eight runs in the seventh inning and walloped Cincinnati Reds 10-7, Ray Washburn's four-hitter carried St. Louis Cardinals to a 4-0 victory over New York Mets and Pittsburgh Pirates edged Milwaukee Braves 3-2 on Donn Clendenon's homer.

Howie Goss stroked four singles as the light-hitting Colts tapped out 15 hits—only one for extra bases—and built a 7-4 lead going into the eighth. Bailey then won it for reliever Jim Duffalo. Felipe Alou also homered for San Francisco.

Koufax, who hadn't turned in a complete game since last July 4, pitched strongly, unhampered by the circulatory ailment that numbed his finger last year.

MAKE ROBBLES COUNT

The Dodger runs were donated by Cub catcher Dick Bertell, who threw wildly, allowing Willie Davis to score in the first inning, and permitted a Bob Buhl pitch to get by him for a passed ball that moved Dick Tracewski into scoring position in the fifth. Davis' single brought him across.

The Phillies sent 11 men to the plate in the seventh, collected six hits, three for doubles by John Callison and Wes Covington and a two-run homer by clay Dalrymple. Don Demeter's single snapped a 7-7 tie.

Washburn followed up Ernie Broglio's two-hitter against the Mets with his four-hitter, retiring 17 batters in order from the second to eighth innings. Julian Javier scored the only run Washburn needed in the fifth when he was hit by a pitch, took second on a balk by loser Al Jackson, moved to third on a sacrifice and scored ahead of Al Moran's wide throw home on Curt Flood's grounder.

Clendenon's homer against Bob Shaw in the eighth broke a 2-2 tie for the Pirates.

Western Junior Hockey

BRANDON (CP) — Brandon Wheat Kings, for the second season in a row and third time in four years, have reached the Western Canada junior hockey final.

They qualified Wednesday night by beating Fort William Canadiens 6-2 before 3,025 fans to sweep the best-of-seven Manitoba - Thunder Bay series in straight games.

They won the first two games 5-3 and 4-3 in Fort William and took the third game here 4-1 Tuesday night.

Brandon next meets the winner in the Estevan Bruins-Edmonton Oil Kings series in the western final, starting April 19 in Estevan or Edmonton.

EDMONTON (CP) — Centre Butch Paul scored two goals in the third period to give Edmonton Oil Kings a 5-4 victory over Estevan Bruins Wednesday night in the third game of their Memorial Cup quarter-final.

The victory, gained before 4,757 fans, left Edmonton trailing 2-1 in the best-of-seven series. The next game will be played in Edmonton Friday night.

Dodger Hero Wanted to Be a Yankee

The Dook Comes Home To N.Y. Welcome

By JOE REICHLER

NEW YORK (AP) — Duke Snider has known since last winter he would be wearing a New York uniform this season but he was hoping it would carry the letters Y a n k e e s on the shirt front rather than M e t.

"It was all set for me to come to the Yankees," the former pride of Flatbush said Wednesday, "but George Weiss blocked the deal."

There was no bitterness in Snider's voice as he spoke of the transaction which sent him from the Los Angeles Dodgers to the Mets for $40,000, 25 per cent down and the rest if the 36-year-old outfielder doesn't break down before the season's end.

"I feel bad, of course," Snider said, "but not about coming to the Mets, although I would have preferred the Yankees. Who wouldn't? But I hated to leave the Dodgers. It was home there."

The Duke's public in New York apparently doesn't agree with its idol. At Tuesday's opener, a group in section 17 at the Polo Grounds unfurled a large banner with the words: "Welcome Back Home, Dook."

MADE SHARP CATCH

Snider responded moments later by making a brilliant backhanded running catch in centre field that was comparable to any made by Willie Mays here. Like the rest of the Mets, the Duke accomplished little at the plate against right-hander Ernie Broglio, drawing a walk in four times at bat. The Cardinals won 7-0.

"I don't have my timing yet," Snider apologized afterwards. "I haven't played much this spring. But I know I'll help this club if they'll bear with me. All I ask for is a little patience.

"I feel I can play in at least 100 games and I should hit better playing regularly. If I thought I could not do this, I would not have come. I expect to have two or three more productive years."

The Yankees, it has been learned, actually offered the Dodgers $50,000 for Duke's services and Buzzie Bavasi, the Dodgers' general manager, was amenable to the deal. He wished to make Snider happy and that extra 10 grand was not to be sneezed at, either.

Unfortunately, the Dodgers had to get waivers from all clubs before Snider would be free to go to the Yankees.

Weis, who had left the Yankees with some bitterness, before accepting the president's post with the Mets, claimed Snider, thus ending any chance of the veteran becoming a Yankee.

Some observers estimated Snider's presence in the Met opening day lineup attracted an additional 5,000 people to the game. In dollars and cents, this means, it took the Duke just one day to return a good share of the investment made in him.

Bears Edge Barons 5-4, Bisons Lose

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

A message from his kid brother caught up with Les Duff Wednesday night.

Les, a left winger with Hershey Bears of the American Hockey League, may or may not have been watching television while Dick, also a left winger, pumped in two goals in 19 seconds for Toronto Maple Leafs against D e t r o i t Red Wings in the opening game of the Stanley Cup finals Tuesday night.

But he responded to the challenge at Hershey by firing two in 43 seconds to give the Bears a lead that stood up for a 5-4 victory over Cleveland Barons in the opener of their best-of-five Calder Cup semi-final.

In the other semi-final, two goals by Stan Balnik and a third by Zellio Toppazzini enabled Providence Reds to pull away for a 5-3 win over Buffalo Bisons, squaring their best-of-seven set two games apiece.

Clay, Cooper To Clash In London

LONDON (AP) — Undefeated Cassius Clay of Louisville has been matched against British heavyweight champion Henry Cooper for a fight in London in June, promoter Jack Solomons announced Wednesday.

Solomons said all arrangements had been made for the fight at London's indoor Wembley Stadium.

"The only thing left is to arrange the exact date of the fight," Solomons said.

Clay, the big talker with a punch to match, is rated second challenger for Sonny Liston's world crown. Floyd Patterson, the former champion, is the first contender.

AMATEUR TOPS

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP)— Amateur Golfer Bill Harvey stole the pros' thunder Wednesday with a six-under-par 65 for the lowest round in the pro-amateur warm-up to the Greater Greensboro Open golf tournament, starting today. Stan Leonard of Vancouver and Dick Mayer, 1957 U.S. open champion, led the professionals with 66s, each winning $370.

Unbeaten Teams Meet In N.Y.

Yanks, Birds Open 1st 'Crucial'

By JIM BECKER
Associated Press Sports Writer

The American League pennant race is only three days old, and we've got a "crucial" series already.

Baltimore Orioles and New York Yankees, the only unbeaten teams in the league, square off today for the opener of a three-game set at Yankee Stadium.

The Orioles kept their slate clean Wednesday with a 3-2 victory over Washington Senators, aided by some erratic Washington base running.

The Yankees kept pace with a 5-3 pounding of Kansas City Athletics, as Mickey Mantle hit his first homer of the year.

In other American League games, Detroit Tigers beat Chicago White Sox 2-1, Minnesota Twins topped Cleveland Indians 5-3 and Boston Red Sox toppled Los Angeles Angels 4-1.

ROBERTS KNOCKED OUT

Claude Osteen for Washington and Robin Roberts for Baltimore hooked up in an 0-0 duel for six innings. Then Don Lotz and Larry Osborne of the Nats hit successive doubles in the seventh and with two out, Ed Brinkman singled Osborne home. When Osteen singled, Roberts departed.

Pinch hitter Jim King hit a drive to right field off reliever Dick Hall which would have scored Brinkman, but Osteen failed to touch second base on his way by, and was out, ending the inning.

The Orioles got all three runs in the ninth. Jackie Brandt homered, and Osteen walked Brooks Robinson. Steve Hamilton, the loser, came on and gave up two singles and a walk and the score was tied. A sacrifice fly by Jerry Adair chased in the winning run.

Mantle and Elston Howard hit two-run homers for the Yankees, as Bill Stafford sailed along on the mound until he was forced to leave in the seventh with an elbow injury. The As got all their runs in the ninth off his successors.

Hank Aguirre, the league's earned-run leader last year, set the White Sox down with seven hits while his Tiger mates bunched three of their four hits for two runs in the first inning.

Harmon Killebrew, who led the league with 48 homers last year, hit his first of the season with one on, the key blow in the Twins' victory over the Indians. Gene Green homered for Cleveland.

Right-hander Earl Wilson set the Angels down with six hits. Boston got all its runs in the third inning, with Carl Yastrzemski's two-run double the big blow.

Mets, Mules, Are Mutual, Both Balk

NEW YORK (AP)—New York Mets already have equalled their 1962 record futility in one department—balks.

While losing 120 games in their maiden season, Met pitchers were guilty of only five balks. They have matched that with five in the first two games this season. Roger Craig had two called on him in Tuesday's opener and Don Rowe had one. In Wednesday's game, Al Jackson and Tracy Stallard each contributed one.

Even the major league record is within reach at this pace. The Phillies set that with 14 in 1959 and New York Yankees tied it the same year.

Memorial Cup Dates Announced

EDMONTON (CP) — The opening game of the Memorial Cup final will be played Wednesday, May 1 at the home of the Western Canadian junior hockey champions, Art Potter, president of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, announced Wednesday night.

Potter said other dates for the best-of-seven Canadian final will be Friday, May 3; Saturday, May 4 and Monday, May 6. If additional games are required to complete the series they will be played Wednesday, May 8; Thursday, May 9 and Saturday, May 11.

Winnipeg Shades Quakers 6-4

WINNIPEG (CP) — Winnipeg Maroons Wednesday night stayed alive in the Western Canadian Allan Cup hockey final, scoring a hard-fought 6-4 victory over Saskatoon Quakers before a crowd of 3,800.

Quakers led three games to one in the best-of-seven series going into the game. They next chance at the championship will be in Saskatoon Friday. If a seventh game is necessary it will be played in Saskatoon Saturday.

Just Name Your Own Date, Bud

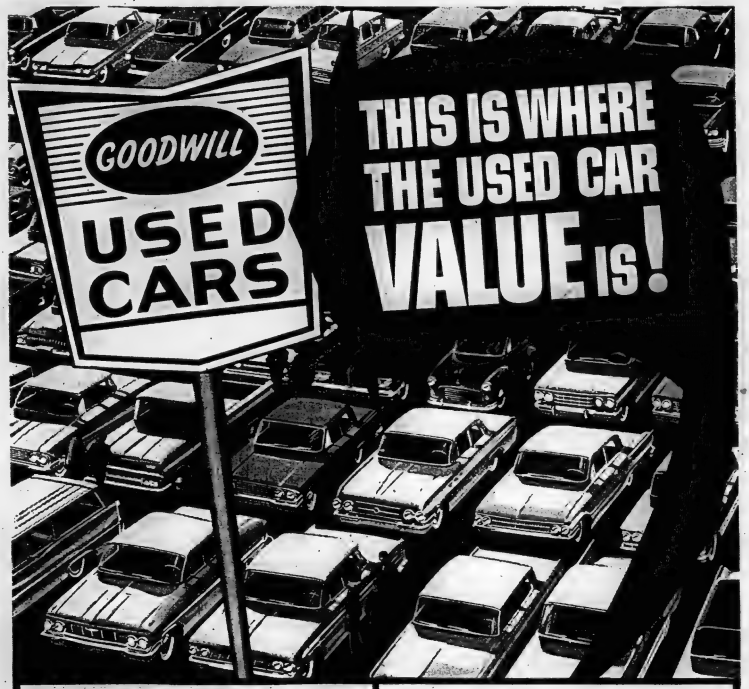
AUGUSTA, Me. (AP)— Commissioner Lloyd Allen says his department of economic development has a complaint if can't satisfy.



Allen says a recreational area operator wrote that his best business comes in July and the total eclipse of the sun should be "held" earlier than the scheduled July 20.

Western Hockey

Vancouver Canucks scraped to a 3-2 overtime victory over Seattle Totems Wednesday night in the first game of the Western Hockey League's northern division final. The second game of the best-of-seven series will be played in Vancouver Friday night.

Goaltender Al Millar of Seattle parried 30 shots to Gilles Villemure's 18 as Canucks swarmed over Totems. But the pressure of six Totem attackers at the end of the third period forced overtime.

Bob Kabel fired the winner for Canucks.

A PLAYWRIGHT BY NIGHT — George Blackburn, labor department public relations officer at Ottawa, spends the wee hours writing plays. Blackburn works on his plays between midnight and 6 a.m. while his wife and three children are asleep. He originated the department's "why wait for spring" slogan to encourage construction during winter months.

PR Man Turns Playwright At Stroke of Midnight

By EDNA BLAKELY

OTTAWA (CP)—In the daytime 46-year-old George Blackburn is a public relations officer for the federal labor department.

In the dead of night, he's a playwright.

"I work best between midnight and 6 a.m. on writing," the personable civil servant explained. "The family is in bed, and by then I've forgotten the practical aspects of my employment."

One of his plays, A Button is Missing was the first play to be held over in the 50-year history of the Ottawa Little Theatre. A recent production ran for a record 11 performances.

This comedy, written two years ago, was first produced at a summer theatre at Vineland, Ont., with a professional cast. The script has been lightened since then and the author believes "we have a play now that is workable anywhere."

There's no rush to the bank with receipts from this production, but he is hopeful its reception here may lead to other showings, perhaps a summer tour with a professional cast.

Mr. Blackburn is the man who thought up the "why wait for spring" slogan widely used in the labor department's campaigns exhorting industries and citizens to undertake construction and home improvement projects in winter, when unemployment is highest.

"I wish I had the royalties on that," he says.

Born on a farm at Wales, Ont., 12 miles north of Cornwall, he was a child when he saw his first play in a church basement.

His father was in that production, and accidentally put his knee through the trousers of his best Prince Albert suit. "For years after that," Mr. Blackburn said, "I thought the theatre was a childish operation."

But he began to read plays in preference to novels during his high school days in Ottawa.

REPORTING HELPED

Mr. Blackburn says his five years as a general news reporter with the Ottawa Journal proved helpful in his playwriting.

"Newspaper work offers a form of discipline that is not gained in any other field. You write to instructions — the way your editor expects it. Then, too, the story is into print in a short time which makes you extremely conscious of your audience."

During the Second World War he served as a captain in the artillery, and was awarded the Military Cross. He joined the labor department on his return to Canada.

Mr. Blackburn has three children, a married daughter and sons Mark, 16, and Ronnie, 10, thanked each guest.

Glynis Johns to View Show In Which She Starred

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP)—Viewers anxiously awaiting the second installment of Sunday night's two-part When Knighthood Was in Flower on NBC's Walt Disney show include its star, Glynis Johns.

The blonde English actress played the role eight years ago in England for Disney—in a feature film for theatres.

Walt Disney runs one of the smartest operations in the motion picture-television area. He has a huge backlog of cartoons and full-length features, originally made for theatre exhibition, into which he dips for material for his television shows.

He also turns his television shows into full-length movies for use in theatres.

Miss Johns says that even though she made the film about Henry VIII and his sister so long ago, it was an unforgettable experience.

"We wore authentic historical costumes," she recalled grimly, "and mine were so heavy that every night my ankles were swollen and my shoulders hurt. I had two women whose job was to help me to carry the weight of my robes. The worst was when I had to do scene of those old court dances—in gold-encrusted robes.

UNKNOWN IN U.S.

Glynis was at that time, a top English film and stage star, but comparatively unknown in the United States.

She has become a favorite in American films (starring in the recent Chapman Report) and has been a guest star in most of the top television shows. She is appearing in Shaw's Too True to be Good, on Broadway. Soon she goes to Hollywood to co-star in a film musical, Mary Poppins. From that she goes to her own television series, which starts on CBS in the fall.

Combines Turn Back Belch's 6-4

Hibbard-Callow Combines moved to within one victory of the Prince Edward North Shore Hockey League championship, and the O'Connor Trophy, with a 6-4 win over Belch Construction last night.

Combines lead the best-of-seven series three games to two. The sixth tilt is slated for next Monday night, at 8.15, and if the seventh game is necessary it will be played next Wednesday.

Hibbard-Callow led all the way while outshooting the losers 38-35 in last night's wide-open affair. It was 3-0 at the end of the first period and 4-2 after forty minutes of play.

Jack Calnan and Larryy Westfall paced the Combine scorers with a pair of goals apiece. Pete Conroy scored one goal and helped on two others while Bob Warmaker had a goal and Al Wright drew two assists.

Ralph Plane and Doug Hallam collected a goal and assist each for Belch's with Larry Rowbotham and Ralph Boomhower also scoring. Don McKevin had a single assist.

There were 12 penalties in the game, six to each side, including a lone major to Plane of the losers.

Junior B Club Feted By Executive

The Belleville Junior "B" hockey club executives were host to the players in a windup dinner held at Columbus Hall last evening.

Most of the club's executive was at the head table and along with the players enjoyed a turkey dinner.

Club president Gord Bell thanked the players for their co-operation during the winter. "We finished up a good deal stronger than we started out and that certainly was a step in the right direction," he said.

Bell also offered special thanks for the excellent job done by coach Don "Turk" Barclay, "who gave so freely of his time, without reimbursement of any kind," wished the players who are now over age luck in the future and invited all those who are not, to play next season.

Other members of the executive spoke briefly while team captain Stu Milroy thanked the club executive and especially Barclay "for giving us a place to play hockey this winter."

At a short executive meeting following the dinner, the club was said to be on a sound financial basis and ready to go again next fall. Coach Barclay was given a gift of appreciation by the executive.

Patty Duke Girl of Hour At Oscar Ball Monday

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — During the tumult of the Oscar ball late Monday night, a pert blonde teen-ager sat happily sipping a soft drink.

Her name is Patty Duke, and she was the girl of the hour. She had just won an Academy Award for her supporting performance in The Miracle Worker, scoring over such acting veterans as Thelma Ritter and Angela Lansbury.

She was understandably all aglow. In keeping with trooper tradition for award sweats, she issued her thanks to those who had helped her.

"I got a great deal of help from Arthur Penn, who was marvelous," said Patty of the man who directed her as the deaf-blind-mute Helen Keller.

FRAINES MANAGER

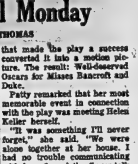
But she devoted her most lavish praise to John Ross, her manager, who escorted her to the awards affair, along with wife.

"I owe Mr. Ross everything," said the young actress. "He discovered me when I was eight and had a New York accent you could cut with a knife.

"He taught me like little blonde kid around and tell cast. ing offices, 'She's another Shirley Temple.' Then they heard me talk and they said, 'Are you kidding?'

"Mr. Ross worked with me to get rid of my accent. It was a whole year before he was able to get me a job."

SUCCESS FOLLOWED



Patty began getting roles in television, plays and a couple of movies. Then came The Miracle Workers with Anne Bancroft on the stage. It was the big second-wind for both performers. They suggested in a nightly knock-down fight to depict how the strong-willed Annie Sullivan finally subdued the animal-like child.

Fortunately, the same team that made the play a success converted it into a motion picture. The result: Well-deserved Oscars for Misses Bancroft and Duke.

Patty remarked that her most memorable event in connection with the play was meeting Helen Keller herself.

"It was something I'll never forget," she said. "We were alone together at her house. I had no trouble communicating with her: I used the finger-talk I had learned in the play."

U.K. Business, Industry Pleased With Election

By ALAN HARVEY

LONDON (CP)—British business and industry expressed quiet relief Tuesday at the result of the Canadian election but it was tinged with disappointment in some quarters.

Comment in financial circles reflected a widespread feeling that economic affairs have been mishandled in Canada in recent years. The conflict between the government and the Bank of Canada when James Coyne was governor attracted unfavorable attention here.

Persistent unemployment in Canada and the disappointment of some British investors who had gambled on Canadian oil stocks contributed to disenchantment in the City.

One financial commentator said it would be unfair to blame any one government for this sense of disillusionment. In some cases the "excessive hopes" placed in the Canadian economy were the result of extraneous factors.

Several investment counselors expressed disquiet that the party had gained a clear majority.

The Evening Standard, in the first editorial comment published here, described the result as perhaps Canada's most perplexing vote since Confederation.

The paper says Pearson's chief difficulty is that his most amenable allies may well be the New Democratic Party, who speak "the same political dialect" as the Liberals. But the defence policies of the two parties are "essentially alien," the paper says.

The same newspaper, in a separate report, speculates about the position of George Drew, Canadian high commissioner in London, under a Liberal regime. Drew is a former leader of the Conservative party.

Director General Kenneth Younger of the Royal Institute of International Affairs, said he would be "absolutely delighted" if Canada's political destinies were entrusted to Pearson and NDP Leader T. C. Douglas, both of whom he has met.

"I don't want to appear to be advocating any particular coalition, but I just happen to think that Mr. Pearson and Mr. Douglas are both very good men," said Younger, who was a minister in post-war governments before quitting politics."

Minto
CARD PARTY

MINTO — The card party sponsored by L.O.L. No. 859 on Thursday evening was fairly well attended with six tables in play. Prize winners were: ladies' high — Mrs. Cecil Carter; ladies' low — Mrs. Bob Jeffrey; men's high — Joe Hagerman; men's low — Charles Lowbow; door prize — Mrs. Archie Hall.

Mrs. Bob Jeffrey, W.M., thanked all for attending and announced another card party the first Thursday evening in May. Lunch was served.

Miss Nancy and Master Bruce Keller, of Belleville spent the weekend with their grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Keller.

Mr. Burton Heagle spent the weekend in Toronto.

Six Socreds Pledge Support To Pearson

Liberal Majority Govt. Would Be Assured

OTTAWA (CP) — Majority support in the next Parliament was assured the Liberal party when six Quebec members of the Social Credit party announced Friday that they intend to support the Liberal.

Liberal Leader Pearson said he was pleased that these six members of Parliament in lending their support to the cause of strong, stable majority government have put their province and their country first."

The six are Gerard Perron, member for Beauce; Pierre-Andre Boutin, Dorchester; Raymond Langlois, Megantic; Gilbert Rondeau, Shefford; Lucien Plourde, Quebec West; and Robert Beaule, Quebec East.

They sent a signed and notarized statement to Governor-General Vanier saying their decision was made "not because we are Liberals, but because we believe that the best interests of the Canadian people lie in maintaining a stable government."

On the eve of the service vote, the Liberals had 128 seats, five short of a majority in the 265-seat House. The Progressive Conservatives had 96, Social Credit 24 and the New Democratic Party 17.

NO DISCUSSIONS HELD

Sources indicated the Liberals held no discussions with the six Social Credit members and no details, beyond those outlined in the statement, were known here.

Until there was reaction outside Ottawa.

In Three Hills, Alta., Social Credit Leader Robert Thompson said "I will not tolerate any deals of any kind." He said he has asked Dr. Owen Marcoux, party whip, to make an investigation.

"Should any arrangements with the Liberal party be entered into by any Social Credit member of Parliament such will be repudiated."

He also said: "Canada urgently needs responsible and stable government. Another immediate election is out of the question. However, the working out of such a policy will be clear-cut and above board at all times."

In Quebec City, Dr. Marcoux said he "repudiates" the action of the six.

"He was not taken by the party after a caucus, and I am not."

Arrested Man Wanted Back In Ontario

TORONTO (CP)—RCMP say the attorney - general's department has started extradition proceedings against Joseph Samuel Wacker, 62, of Toronto, arrested Sunday in New Orleans, La.

Wacker was arrested by the Federal Bureau of Investigation in co-operation with RCMP on a warrant charging him with fraud and using the mails to defraud the public.

RCMP identified Wacker as president of Josamer Management Corporation Limited, with offices in Toronto. They said he left the Toronto area last July.

Air, Rail, Bus Lines Swamped, Church Services Well Attended

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Canadian Easter weekend began with balmy temperatures and sunny skies in all provinces except the Maritimes and British Columbia.

Scores of motorists were marooned on snowblocked highways in southeastern New Brunswick after some of the worst snowstorms in recent years struck the Atlantic provinces. The storm dumped up to 30 inches of snow in parts of New Brunswick, Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island.

Attendance at Good Friday church services was heavy in most cities. Air, rail and bus lines were swamped with travellers anxious to get on their way as early as possible.

Downtown Toronto was almost deserted Good Friday and is likely to remain that way most of the weekend. Stores opened for a few hours on Saturday and the Easter parade has been planned for Sunday.

Firemen in Montreal dealt with a sudden rash of grass fires that accompanied mild spring weather.

The first tourist onslaught of the year was felt in Parliament Hill in Ottawa Good Friday and many motorists were also attracted to the area by the opening of the scenic Gatineau Parkway.

Civic-owned golf courses were open in Edmonton Good Friday.

Few special weekend events were planned in other cities.

Temperatures up to as high as 70 were expected to continue in most of Ontario and Quebec.

Showers in most of British Columbia were expected to turn to heavy rain by Sunday.

Today's Chuckle

An old-timer is one who remembers when you could promise a child the moon without having to buy him a spacesuit.

THE WEATHER

Synopsis: Fair dry weather prevails over Ontario and practically all of Central Canada and the central United States.

Little significant change in weather is likely to occur over the weekend.

17 Fatalities In 4 Provinces Over Holiday

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Seventeen persons in four provinces died in accidents across Canada as the three-day Easter weekend got under way. Fourteen persons died in traffic accidents.

Six provinces — Newfoundland, Prince Edward Island, Nova Scotia, Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta — reported no accidental deaths.

A Canadian Press survey from 6 p.m. Thursday to midnight Friday showed six traffic deaths in British Columbia, four in Ontario, three in Quebec and one in New Brunswick.

Over the entire Easter weekend last year, 46 persons met accidental death, 29 of them on highways. The record Easter death toll was 70 in 1957 including 47 in traffic.

The survey does not include known slayings, suicides, natural deaths or industrial accidents.

Ontario deaths:

Thursday

Pamela Filter, 5, of Fort William, when struck by a car.

Friday

William Shackleton, transport department radio maintenance officer, when his propeller-driven boat returned on the ice-bound St. Mary's River near Sault Ste. Marie.

Mrs. Josephine Ferrari, 65, of Windsor, Ont., when her car crashed into a bridge on Highway 401 near Toronto, injuring five others.

"NOW SEE HERE!" — Peter the Easter Bunny gets his holiday instructions from 13-months-old Allison Alexander. The live bunny, in Easter-mood, later refused to give way to a chocolate counterpart.

SHIPS PROBING FOR DEEP GRAVE OF SUBMARINE

Echo-Sounding Gear Will Map Bottom

WASHINGTON (AP) — Dark weather and gale winds swept farther out to sea today, clearing the skies over a dozen ships probing for the deep grave of the submarine Thresher.

Special echo-sounding gear in the hands of oceanographers will map the bottom of the Atlantic in the effort to find the hull—or what is left of it—in order that it can be scanned by underwater television and the bathyscaphe Trieste.

There is no hope for the 129 men who rode the nuclear submarine a mile and a half down into the ocean trough. All that can be salvaged now are the bows and why of the U.S. Navy's worst submarine disaster—an explanation that could save the lives of other submariners.

While the search goes on, the navy has announced it intends to go ahead with construction of 22 more attack submarines like the Thresher.

STUDIES DESIGN

But, said Navy Secretary Fred Korth, the Bureau of Ships is making a new study of the entire structural design.

This study, he told reporters Friday night, is beside and in addition to the general investigation being conducted by a naval court of inquiry.

Chinese Head Visit Designed To Aid Red Chinese in Asia

NEW DELHI (CP-AP)—The Indian government says that Chinese Communist President Liu Shao-chi's tour of Southeast Asia that began in Indonesia Friday is designed to make Red China better known than Russia and to promote China over India.

The Indian government in a press statement released Friday says the first objective of Liu's visits to Indonesia, Burma and Cambodia is to wave the Chinese flag.

"Flag-waving is intended not only to make China better known but make China better known than the Soviet Union," the press says.

"Peking sees herself as a competitor with the Soviet Union and is anxious to strengthen her position as compared with Russia's in Asia and Africa."

But China is regarded as a political upstart by some of these countries and she cannot afford to give them financial aid. She tries to make up for this by "vocal support" and this is the objective of Liu's tour, the press note says.

Liu, accompanied by his wife and Chinese Foreign Minister Marshal Chen Yi, is making the first visit outside China by a head of state since the people's republic was established in 1949.

His eight-day state visit to Indonesia follows on the heels of that of the Soviet Defence Minister Marshal Rodion Malinovsky, who left April 4 after spending 10 days in Indonesia.

On Friday, Liu told his Indonesian host, President Sukarno, that his visit was aimed at strengthening friendly relations with Indonesia.

He was told by Sukarno the two countries were "comrades in arms," engaged in a common struggle against foreign domination and exploitation.

The Indian press note warns that Chinese flag-waving was designed also to show Asian countries "that they should not think of India as their principal friend on the Asian map."

Liu will also be invited Chinese actions in the China-India border conflict and try to prove China is a peaceful country, it adds. It predicts Liu would say India is a committed aggressor against China, China was forced to defend herself and China subsequent declared a cease-fire and withdrew her forces and China is returning all prisoners.

'I Murdered Them, Threw Bodies Overboard'—Youth

KEY WEST, Fla. (AP) — A wide search for a Georgia boy sold two Key West fishermen ended when the U.S. Coast Guard found the blood-stained lad alone on the fishermen's boat, out of fuel close to Cuba.

"I murdered them and threw them overboard," coast guardsmen said Roger Foster, 17, told them Friday night on the 32-foot cabin cruiser of Douglas Trevor, 47, and his son, Edward, 22.

The ex - fool patrol vessel's crew gave Foster first aid, put him under guard and towed the boat—loaded with guns, they said—toward Key West.

Waiting there was Monroe County Sheriff Tom Lyon and grief-stricken friends and kin of the well-liked Trevors. Waiting also — and not informed at once of what had happened—was Dr. H. A. Foster of Griffin, Ga., who got word from police aimed for his son.

A suicide note found in Roger's bloodspattered Key West motel room had said, "I think I am insane." It urged authorities: "Do not publicize my death. Be careful when you tell my father because he has a bad heart."

A Key West naval doctor, Lieut. Terrell Tanner, refused to tell reporters where his friend, Dr. Foster, was spending Friday night.

Laotian Police Chief Slain In His Home

VIENTIANE, Laos (Reuters) Laotian Police Chief Col. Kanthi Sisouanthong was assassinated Friday night in his home, a high-ranking neutralist source said today.

Kanthi was reported to be a left - leaning neutralist and a close friend of Foreign Minister Quinim Pholsena, the leftist neutralist who was murdered outside his home by a member of his bodyguard less than two weeks ago.

The neighbor of Kanthi's said he heard one revolver shot inside Kanthi's house Friday night but decided it would be safer not to investigate.

Since Quinim's death and the skirmishing on the Plain of Jars between neutralists and leftists, a grim guessing game has been going on in this tense capital over what government official will next die under an assassin's gun.

MANY ROADS STILL CLOGGED IN MARITIMES

Most of Motorists Marooned Now Safe

HALIFAX (CP) — Settling weather was forecast today as wide sections of the Maritimes dug out after the season's worst blizzard.

The weather office here said clear weather was expected to move in from the west, ending a hectic week of storms that started Monday. The latest blast — delivered Thursday — still clogged many roads with snow early today.

However, civil defence authorities in hard-hit southeastern New Brunswick said most of the hundreds of motorists marooned on highways near Moncton had been freed by snowplow crews.

An RCAF transport left Chatham, N.B., Friday night to take Mrs. Arthur Mallett from her home near Bactouche to Moncton. The elderly woman was reported suffering from a severe internal disorder. The road from Moncton to Bactouche was still blocked but snowplows had broken down trying to get through.

Prowlers, snowmobiles and trucks carrying civil defence personnel and Red Cross workers fought drifts to reach stranded motorists.

WAS SECOND BLOW

The storm, in its second pass at the Maritimes in a week, dropped up to 20 inches of snow Thursday on the New Brunswick counties of Kent, Albert and Westmoreland and on Nova Scotia's Cumberland County.

Finance Minister L. G. Desbrisay, who had declared an emergency in the three New Brunswick counties in the absence of Premier Robichaud, stranded in his car 17 miles from Moncton, and the situation was improving rapidly and was no longer termed an emergency.

The storm first showed its strength Monday when it disrupted communications in much of Nova Scotia, and ripped Prince Edward Island, caused power deaths and brought down power lines.

Before much of the damage could be repaired a new storm returned Thursday from the Gulf of St. Lawrence. Winds reached 115 miles an hour in Cabot Strait and blew 15 railway cars off the track in western Newfoundland.

Winds reached 77 miles an hour at Summerside, P.E.I., during the night and highways

15 Picked Up For Questioning In Several Raids

MONTREAL (CP)—A crackdown that police launched against the Front de Liberation Quebec, a brassy self-styled terrorist organization, has pledged "systematic sabotage of federal institutions" in Quebec province.

In simultaneous raids through widely-scattered parts of Montreal Friday, police from three forces picked up 15 men for questioning.

Those described as between 20 and 30 years of age, were held on immobilize jurisdiction whether formal charges will be laid.

Police witnesses took part in the raids. They represented city and provincial police and the RCMP. Most were made on private homes. A number of articles such as typewriters were seized.

The FLQ, seeking an independent state for Quebec, issued a typewritten statement to newspapers and police some hours before the raids, urging a revolutionary group of "suicide commandos."

The movement has claimed itself responsible for a series of violent incidents—planting Molotov cocktails in bottles filled with gasoline—in several Montreal mailboxes, and planting a bomb in the Federal Revenue Building here and sabotaging CNR train signals.

No one has been hurt.

SMILES OF VICTORY — Mr. and Mrs. Robert Temple beam their happiness after receiving the news today of Mr. Temple's election. The successful Liberal candidate won the constituency "turnover" by a majority of 598 over Conservative Lee Grills.

Service Vote Gives Temple Hastings South

Liberal Majority 598 Over Grills

Liberal Robert Temple has gained Hastings South from Conservative Lee Grills. The final decision—awaited since Monday's indecisive returns gave Mr. Grills a marginal victory after a recount reversed by the Armed Services' vote, announced at 11.10 a.m. today.

The vote has given Mr. Temple a majority of 598.

This morning's results confirmed what was almost an admitted certainty as the services held to tradition and voted Liberal.

DELIGHTED WITH RESULT

"I am, of course, delighted with the result—even though the wait since Monday night was certainly a long one," said Mr. Temple, when he first heard the news late this morning.

"I consider this not as a personal victory, but rather one for good government," said Mr. Temple.

"I want to express my appreciation to those many people who worked so hard and so unselfishly on my behalf. My compliments to Mr. Grills, Mr. Digby and Mr. Mallory. I wish to thank the voters for the confidence they have placed in me. I will do my very best to ensure that their confidence is not misplaced.

"I will represent all the people of South Hastings and my offices in Belleville and in Ottawa will be open to all."

Defeated candidate Lee Grills said he had no regrets over the result of the election.

"I congratulate Mr. Temple as the elected member for South Hastings and wish him well", Mr. Grills said.

"I sincerely appreciate the effort and support of many wonderful people of South Hastings who worked so hard for me."

"I campaigned honestly and straightforwardly and have no regrets. I tried to be the best member I knew how and trust that I made many friends in doing it.

"I value honesty and friendship above all else in the world," Mr. Grills continued. "My name is still Lee and I will look forward to seeing my friends at home and to spending some time with my wife and family."

A heavy pro-Liberal vote among the armed services swung two constituencies to the Liberals today, ousting two progressive Conservatives, and left Lester B. Pearson's Liberal party only three seats short.

Pope, Wearing Robes of Papal Mourning, Walked Shoeless

VATICAN CITY (AP)—Pope John XXIII, wearing the robes of a papal mourning, walked shoeless Friday in St. Peter's Basilica to venerate a crucifix at Good Friday services.

The 81-year-old leader of the Roman Catholic Church went to the tourist-thronged basilica and all Christianity observed its most sorrowful day of the year —recalling the "Dio Amarissimi" (Day of Bitterness) when Christ died on the cross at Calvary for mankind's sins.

The huge confessional altar was stripped almost bare. The Sistine Choir chanted without organ. No bell sounded. Purple draping shrouded statues.

Pope John's ring of office was missing from his hand and he imparted no blessings.

Even the Good Friday mass, attended by more than a dozen cardinals, was not a true and complete mass because church law forbids consecration of bread and wine on this day.

All this was part of the observance of Christ's passion and death.

The Vatican service was like special rituals in Roman Catholic churches throughout the world as Christianity observed its strictest day of penance to mourn Christ's death on the cross.

The unusual mass—the "Mass of the Pre-Sanctified"—marked the solemn period of Holy Week leading to the joyous celebration of the Resurrection on Easter Sunday.

Vatican radio said it will beam the Pope's Easter message around the world today at 8 p.m. Rome time (3 p.m. EST).

It said broadcasts of the message will be fed to stations in Canada, the United States, and 13 other countries.

Radio Free Europe, which broadcasts to Communist East Europe, also will carry the message.

2 Held for Armed Robbery Of Storekeeper at Cooper

Good Friday Grass Fires Show Decrease

Despite warnings from the fire department yesterday to residents in and around the city to take every precaution possible when burning grass, the department received several calls.

However, the number of grass fires on Good Friday of this year compared to last Good Friday was small. Fire Chief Gerald Vance said 39 grass fires were attended last year.

Yesterday firemen were called to a grass fire on the Marshall Road, the 4th of Sidney, where a shed owned by Doug Martin burned, a grass fire near Carrying Place, to Bridge St. where leaves were burning on the roadway, and to the Haig property on the Hair Sidetrail early this morning to a house fire.

Chief Vance said it is believed the fire was set as the house was vacant and was in the process of being torn down.

Also yesterday, the department was called to a house on Yeomans Street, where a mouse had burned up in the oven filling the house with smoke.

MADOC (Staff) — Two men are being held for armed robbery of a country store keeper after a chase through bush country north of here last night.

Provincial police at Bellerville this morning said they had charged Thomas DeRushie, between 20 and 25, formerly of Belleville and Raymond Brown, Peterborough. They are in Hastings County jail at Bellerville.

The arrests took place after a hold-up in which everything appears to have gone wrong.

About 8.30 p.m. two men, their faces distorted by nylon stocking masks strode into the general store of Albert Fox at Cooper, 19 miles north of here. One of the men was carrying a shotgun.

The first part of the holdup plan appears to have gone wrong right then. Instead of complying with orders of the bandits, provincial police say, Mr. Fox tackled them. A fight ensued in which the storekeeper was eventually subdued by the two men and bound with haywire.

CASE TAKEN

The men then took off with about $200 in cash, along with merchandise believed to include cigarettes.

During the getaway by car, provincials Shaw and Hooker from the Madoc detachment, spotted an automobile on Highway 7 they believed answered the description of the wanted vehicle. They gave chase and the pursuit ended at Bannockburn, five miles north of here. Near the residence of Dan Andrews the car stopped and two men took to the bush.

Constables Hooker and Shaw took into custody Brown after the men. The chase was short-lived and the officers, took the pair into custody.

The men were taken to OPP offices at Madoc for questioning and later to the county jail.

This morning, police said they found two slit stockings on the porch outside the Fox store.

Chamber Will Probe Prices Increase Rumor

TRENTON — The Trenton Chamber of Commerce is going about proving or disproving rumors that Trenton merchants up the prices of their goods to co-incide with air force pay days. If it's true, the chamber will take steps to correct the situation. If it isn't true . . . it's time the rumors were accounted for all times, says the chamber. Chamber manager Nostrand Sprague will head up the investigating committee.

At a meeting in the Gilbert Hotel Wednesday, the revised budget for the year was presented to the directors and approved. This year it will take at least $5,000 to run the chamber's business. The sum has been asked for a grant of $2,943 if the chamber is to continue to run the tourist booth ; $2,445 if the booth isn't opened. Council's budget announcement on Monday will tell the tale for the chamber.

In a means of attracting fisherman into the area, the chamber will sponsor a summer long fishing contest. Trophies will be awarded to the women and boys and girls and categories will be established such as pickerel, bass and muskies.

Those who attend the annual chamber dinner in the Legion Hall, May 8, are in for a treat. Special attraction will be Chris Sheridan of the International Brotherhood of Magicians. Guest speaker at the dinner will be Edward Nokes, assistant manager of the chamber at provincial level.

Says Gardens Revenue Shows Big Increase

TRENTON — Daniel Senik, chairman of the Trenton Community Gardens Committee for the past three years, told the board this week that receipts from the gardens for the first three months of this year was more than that for the entire year back in 1960.

Upon his election as chairman of the board, Mr. Senik vowed to put the gardens on a paying basis or "die in the attempt", he said. He has formed "White Elephant" showing a profit, Mr. Senik gives credit to the gardens' manager Ronald Thornton and the hard-working members of the board.

More people are using the facilities of the gardens than ever before, figures show for the Saturday dances and the attendance at the hockey games this season was record.

For the summer, the board has planned a diversified program which includes a "Name Band" dances, rock 'n' roll sessions for teens and the Trenton Lions' Club will start their games nights soon.

This winter, the Globetrotters were given new dressing rooms. Maintenance throughout the gardens has been kept at a high level. And present plans call for renovations to the stage area of the gardens auditorium. The upstairs kitchen will be given a face-lifting as will upstairs washrooms. Plans also exist a new coat of paint are needed for both and new kitchen cupboards for the Senik grill.

"We're doing all renovations within our means", says chairman Senik.

Rash of Minor Motor Mishaps Over Holiday

Belleville police issued a number of warnings early this morning, as fine weather held out the prospect of record auto-bumbile travel over the Easter holiday.

The reminder — and warning—came from Inspector J. C. Hayes as police marked up accident statistics over the Good Friday holiday.

A rash of minor accidents was headed by at least one accident Thursday night when a two-car crash sent a girl passenger to hospital and resulted in one driver being charged.

Scene of the accident was Station Street, where, police say, a car driven by 48-year-old Sidney Bowerman, R.R. 1, Corbyville, crashed into an automobile operated by Marvin Elston, 46, of 15 Bruyere St.

A passenger in the Elston car, Kay Rochon, was taken to hospital with chest injuries.

The impact completely damaged the front end of the Walsh car. Total property damage was estimated at $1,400. Police charged Walsh with careless driving.

Property damage also was extensive in another two-car crash Thursday night at Pinnacle and Dundas Streets. The drivers involved were James Commins, Ottawa, and Lorne James Cornell, 46 John St.

Peacefully sleeping, resting at rest.

His weary toils and troubles are past,

In silence he suffered, in patience he died

Till God called him home to suffer no more.

Sadly missed by wife and family.

County Shows Increased Interest In Association Mass TB Survey

Scouting activities

AVONDALE AUXILIARY

Avondale Cub and Scout mother auxiliary met at the home of Kay Riddel, 158 Wright Avenue on Wednesday, March 20. The president, Hazel Hugh, opened the meeting with the Mother's Prayer. After the financial report was given, Joan Reid showed the group a sample bonga drum, one of the 34 that the Cub Pack made from supplies purchased from a donation from the Cub Mothers. A card of thanks was read from Anne McDonald in appreciation of the sympathy card sent by the welfare convener at the time of her father's death. Joan Reed also thanked the group for the expression of sympathy at the time of her father-in-law's death. Janette Cooke reported on the March group committee meeting.

At the next Auxiliary meeting which is to be held at the home of Mary Wilson, 177 Wright Avenue on Wednesday, 17th April, an auction is to be held which will consist of books, magazines with emphasis on children's books. It would be appreciated if mothers who are unable to attend this auction would send along any suitable items of reading material.

Mrs. Pugh gave a descriptive reading on the opening of Baden-Powell House in England, July 1961. Lady Baden-Powell, World Chief Guide, was the Founder. The House cost one half million pounds to complete and Scouters from 34 countries have already found accommodation and friendship there since its opening less than 2 years ago.

Lunch was served by the hostess, assisted by Katherine Thompson.

"HI-JINX — '63"

A show you can't afford to miss, and the first of it to be presented by the Scouting Movement in Belleville. "Hi-Jinx — '63" is a colorful musical variety show consisting of choral numbers, comedy skits and other acts.

Plan to attend this gala event which takes place on April 17th and 18th at Moira Secondary School certain time at 8.00 p.m.; admission 75c for adults and 50c for children. Tickets are available at the door.

18TH "CARE DALE" CUB SCOUT AUXILIARY

The home of Mrs. Earla Whitney, Sidney St. became a hive of industry on March 28th, when the 18th "Care Dale" was assembled to put the finishing touches to preparations for the Father and Son banquet which is to be held on Wednesday, April 17th. There is much to be said for the old adage, "willing hands make light work" as evidence by the amount of folded napkins and teepees which the ladies prepared. These will be used to grace the tables on the big night.

Well earned refreshments were served by Mrs. Hyatt and Mrs. Rose.

SUGAR BUSH VISITED

An invitation to the firm of Mr. Malthardr R.R. 3, Trenton, was enthusiastically received by the Cub Pack and Sunday afternoon saw the boys out in the sugar bush witnessing the processing of maple syrup.

A hearty vote of thanks was extended to Mr. Malthardr for this wonderful opportunity afforded the boys.

The April meeting of the Auxiliary will be held at the home of Mrs. Lajoie, 636 Sidney St.

Residents of Hastings County have a growing belief in the advantages of detecting disease in its early stages.

This is indicated by the increased percentage of county residents who last fall took advantage of the mass TB survey conducted by the Hastings County Tuberculosis Association.

Out of a population of 84,828, a total of 31,301 persons took advantage of the survey, an increase of 58 per cent in participation from 1955.

Of the total persons processed 13,775 were from Belleville, 2,183 from Bancroft, 1,097 from Deseronto, 1,319 from Madoc, 1,010 from Stirling, 1,348 from Tweed and 3,670 from Trenton.

In past years no x-rays were given to children under 12 years of age but last year because of the tuberculin test persons of all ages were eligible.

MORE PARTICIPATE

The actual county participation in the TB survey last year was 39.7 per cent, but if figured on the same basis as in 1955, the percentage would be about 49.1 per cent, said to be an "exceptional increase" over 1955.

Of the total number of persons processed last year there were 30,983 with no reportable abnormality.

There were 19 cases of pulmonary tuberculosis reported of which four were classed as active, one being minimal and three moderately advanced.

There were two persons listed as pulmonary tuberculosis suspects, while 292 were reported to have other diseases or abnormalities including 118 cases of heart disease or aorta.

The "tremendous gains" in the percentage participation in the survey was credited to be the result of efforts put forth by the active members of the county TB association committee.

Two Juveniles Are Questioned

Provincial police from Belleville Friday questioned two juveniles after two young Middle Park girls claimed money had been demanded from them at Bridgeport.

Police say the two youngsters told they were forced into bushes and also told to "get some money" and released.

Instead she raised the alarm and officers were directed to the school to the area. The juveniles were questioned and later released on their own recognizances.

Three Youths Charged After Break-n

Belleville police have charged three youths after a chase across town from the scene of a break-in last night.

The chase started after officers found a broken rear side window at Patterson's service station on West Dundas Street.

The three youths are charged with the building as police were making their inspection. One of them was stopped nearby and the other arrested some time later downtown, say police.

Charged with break-and-enter with intent are Lawrence Barry McCaw, 18, of 24 West Street and David Lorne Reid, 17, of 18 Haig Road. The third youth is a juvenile.

Larry Meagher New Official Of CNRA Ltd.

The regular monthly meeting of the directors of the CNRA Belleville Ltd. was held at Club Canara on Wednesday evening. Prior to the transaction of business, president Al Rliss requested two minutes of silence in memory of the late Lionel J. Train, who was an enthusiastic member of the organization and at the time of his death held the position of secretary-treasurer.

During the meeting L. A. Meagher was appointed as Mr. Train's successor as secretary-treasurer.

OUT OF THE PAST—Village Councillor Jack Ogilvy and cemetery attendant Gordon Henry examine the recently-discovered gravestone of Daniel "Old Smoke" Reynolds, pioneer founder of the village of Wellington. The stone was located in the former "burying ground" of the Quaker Meeting House, a log structure built in 1800, and taken down in 1880.

Grave of Pioneer Founder of Wellington Located in Old Quaker Burying Ground

By GEORGE H. CARVER

WELLINGTON — The mystery of the final resting place of Daniel "Old Smoke" Reynolds, pioneer-founder of this village, has been solved.

For many years, this reporter was told, the location of the grave of the first white settler to locate here was not known.

Nor to this day has the place where Reynolds was interred after his death been discovered.

Perhaps the historians and others interested in the early days of this village and district looked too far afield.

Fittingly, the bones of "Old Smoke" rest within a few hundred yards from where he first set foot on the timbered shorelines of the village he founded.

He lies in the "old cemetery" on the northwestern outskirts of the village. The location was discovered a short time ago by cemetery officials.

No marble monument or Greek commande rears a stately head over the grave of the pioneer who landed here in or around 1776.

An oblong piece of blue-grey glacier stone some eighteen inches in length marks the last resting place of "Old Smoke" as he was known. The flattish stone was found-countersunk an inch below the grass level of the cemetery.

GRAVESTONES GOOD

The "old cemetery" is the former "Quaker Burying Ground" which is part of the site of the first Quaker Church believed to have been built in or around 1800.

"Gravestones still in a good state of preservation bear 1828 dates. These are situated in the immediate vicinity of the Reynolds' grave.

Strange markings on the stone give some credence to authenticity.

This reporter, staff photographer Harry Mulhall, Cemetery General Chairman Councillor Jack Ogilvy and cemetery attendant Gordon Henry examined the markings closely.

They took like crude letters etched with a sharp nail-like tool.

To the left of the stone appears what looks like a capital "R". At the extreme right there are markings that resemble an "L" and a "D".

The stone after being weathered appears to have a smooth surface. Oldtimers here say the stone is not what is termed "pot one of the "hard-head" variety.

The smoothish surface and blue-grey coloring gives rise to the belief that the stone is a shoreline product, worn smooth by Lake Ontario waves.

WAS TRANSFERRED

The location of the grave and the position of the stone indicate that the pioneer's body was transferred from its original resting place. That locality is not known.

Gravestones of the early Quakers and others buried in the cemetery after the turn of the 19th century are aligned in straight rows.

The Reynolds stone was found midway between two of these rows, placed at a 45-degree to the alignment.

It is near the site of the first Quaker Meeting House, a log structure that served worship-pers until 1880 when a new building was erected on the main street of the village.

Descendants of the early Quakers say that in the early days of the old meeting house Indian women came to the morning meetings for worship in their bare feet. They left quietly in the back seats, departing as silently as they came.

Reynolds, of English descent, was born in Danbury, Connecticut. The year is not known but he was a young man when he came to Wellington in 1776. He is reported to have been 6 feet 2 leaving several hundreds of acres of fine farm and timber lands to his descendants two of whom still reside in the village.

After landing here Reynolds became fast friends with an Indian chief called "Smoke". The white man became known as "Old Smoke" and the first little community he founded, now Wellington, was called "Smokeville".

REYNOLDS

At first he resided in a crude log cabin. As he prospered he decided to build a house of stone. His friend the Indian chief "Smoke" came to his aid and with his Indians built what today is known as "The Manor". Reynolds supervised the building with a critical eye.

BROUGHT HIS BRIDE

Perhaps the Indians wondered why the white man was so fussy about building a stone mansion in the forest. It did not take them long to find out.

After the house was completed, Reynolds left for Albany and returned with his fifteen-year-old bride Nancy Waite of New York. The couple lived for many years in the stone house and brought six sons and two daughters into the world.

Wellington is marking its 100th year as an incorporated village with a five-day Civic Holiday celebration this year.

Special tribute will be paid to the early pioneers and to events of pioneer days.

Plans are underway by the Centenary Committee, according to general chairman Ogilvy, to have a special stone properly engraved, placed above the grave of Daniel Reynolds.

The Reynolds House or "The Manor" as it is now called, which retains the greater part of the Reynolds pioneer relics and characteristics, will be available for inspection.

The present owners, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Robertson have graciously consented to have the "Manor" made "open house" for certain hours during the centenary celebration.

PICTON — Navigation in Picton opened on Thursday when the C.S.L. freighter Glenelg docked at Lake Ontario Portland Cement Co. docks at 4.30. The carrier loaded 3,900 tons of cement for Toronto. The Glenelg wintered in Toronto and came here from Rochester where a cargo was unloaded. While there was considerable ice in the lake her course to Picton was clear.

The cement company has stockpiled much clinker during the winter months and this is converted into cement. Steady shipments are anticipated by the cement company.

House Fire Is Discovered In Nick of Time

PICTON — Early discovery prevented a serious fire at the home of George Wilkinson, Waupoos, Greenpoint road. Mrs. Wilkinson looked out of the kitchen window to see smoke issuing from an outside stairway leading to the cellar. Straw, used as bedding for dogs had ignited in some manner. Fortunately passers-by and neighbors were on hand quickly and a call to Camp Picton fire department was cancelled as they were able to extinguish it before much damage was done. Some of the contents of the house were removed as a precaution.

Missing Man, 69, Partially Blind Found Near Barn 3 Miles Away

THOMASBURG (Staff) — The search for a 69-year-old partially blind man, missing nearly 24 hours from his home here, had a sudden and happy ending yesterday.

Arthur Roberts was found near a barn, three miles from his home, safe and showing no apparent ill effects.

Mr. Roberts went missing Thursday after he went for an afternoon stroll. When he failed to return home provincial police were called and an area-wide alarm raised.

Mr. Roberts' description was repeatedly broadcast through Thursday night and Friday morning over Radio Station CJBQ. Fears for the man's safety increased when no trace of his whereabout turned up by nightfall.

Friday morning the search continued still without apparent success.

Then the search ended suddenly as Tony Merwe and companion from Tweed came on Mr. Roberts near the barn of one of his neighbor's.

One better aspect of the incident was the weather. It remained fine and warm through Thursday night and Friday. Had it not done so, said one of the searchers, the incident could have become an ordeal for Mr. Roberts.

Pearson Likely to Meet JFK, Macmillan Within a Month

By JACK BEST

OTTAWA (CP)—Early meetings between Liberal Leader Pearson and Prime Minister Macmillan and President Kennedy are expected should Mr. Pearson be called upon to form a new government.

Diplomatic informants say the top - level conferences could come within a month of Mr. Pearson's taking office.

Mr. Pearson said during the election campaign that as prime minister he would make arrangements "at once" to fly to London to discuss with Britain's prime minister ways and means of strengthening Anglo-Canadian political and economic relations.

Immediately on his return from London, he would invite the U.S. president to a conference. Mr. Pearson said he wished to discuss with Mr. Kennedy Canadian-American joint responsibilities in defence of North America and in the Atlantic coalition.

The Liberal leader said he also wanted to meet with Mr. Kennedy measures to increase and balance Canada's trade and to expand world trade.

The talks also would have the general purpose of improving relations between Canada and its two principal allies, relations which Mr. Pearson often accused the Conservatives of needlessly damaging.

Informants emphasize that careful preparations would have to precede the proposed meetings.

There will be immediate and urgent demands on Mr. Pearson's time should he become prime minister.

Nevertheless, despite difficulties, it would be "quite feasible" to line up meetings with either or both the British and U.S. leaders within a month, said one source. "It certainly could be done."

Replace Diefenbaker

Mr. John Bassett, publisher of the Toronto Telegram, is apparently already tiring of his brief flirtation with the Liberals. Seeking changes which would make it possible for him to return to the Progressive Conservative fold with an easy conscience, he has indicated his belief that the Conservatives ought to replace Prime Minister Diefenbaker as their leader with Col. Douglas Harkness. He made this suggestion in the course of a television interview.

On the face of it, this may appear as if Mr. Bassett's main quarrel with Mr. Diefenbaker is over the Prime Minister's policy regarding nuclear warheads for Canadian weapons. If this were so, it would be one of the poorest excuses on record for changing the leadership of a political party. This is a question which will be settled long before the next election, unless the members of the newly-elected House act in a highly irresponsible manner and force an early appeal to the electors, under circumstances which give little promise for any radical change in the results.

Reading further, though, we learn that Mr. Bassett apparently suggests the choice of Mr. Harkness because he is a Western member while at the same time having reasonable chances of obtaining the support of Eastern Conservatives. This throws an altogether different light on the proposal. The Conservatives are not exactly embarrassed by a wealth of leadership material at this stage—when 17 Cabinet ministers have either resigned or been defeated at the polls in the short space of ten months.

Eastern Conservatives might suggest calling Hon. George Hees back out of retirement, but Mr. Bassett does not think the West will accept him. Obvious choice in the West would be Hon. Alvin Hamilton. Last summer when the Toronto Globe and Mail was supporting the Conservatives an election expert from that paper wrote that Mr. Hamilton "had taken over the walking-on-water concession from Mr. Diefenbaker in the West" but we believe the phrase never saw print. Mr. Hamilton, though, has no component following in the East.

Mr. Harkness, then, may be a good choice as any. But why change right now? It is true that the results of Monday's election indicate Canadians were dissatisfied with Mr. Diefenbaker's government. In the new House, though, the Conservatives ought to fill the role of Her Majesty's Loyal Opposition—and no one is able to match Mr. Diefenbaker's qualifications as Leader of the Opposition. In any realistic view, that is the role he played on the hustings, devoting most of his time to criticizing the action of the opposition parties in defeating his government. He played it with such consummate skill that in two short months he transformed the Conservatives from a schism-torn group in a hopeless position into a united party. He denied an overall majority to the Liberals who enjoyed the almost unanimous backing of the most influential opinion-forming groups in the country. Could Harkness—or any other Conservative—have done that?

In Search of the Holy Gail

Belleville Wing 418 of the Royal Canadian Air Force Association is looking for ways to improve the municipalities in which the members live. Its first move is to invite speakers who know the problems (civic officials, councillors and even would-be councillors and aldermen), to address monthly meetings.

"If there are any corrections needed to improve the community, we will be acquainted with the reasons," said one member of the association. By setting out to find the problems, one suggests, they have already solved one of the most important ones.

Evenly Balanced

By one of those queer quirks of fate, Monday's election left the Progressive Conservatives with almost the same number of seats in Eastern Canada as they have in the West.

Only the nation's ten provinces lie east of the Ontario-Manitoba border and these gave the Conservatives a total of 49 seats. Four western provinces, and two northern territories returned 47 Conservatives.

The difference, of course, is that the six eastern provinces have a total of 193 seats, while the four western provinces and the territories elect only 72 members.

In order for the press to achieve its purpose, it is absolutely essential not to impose outside conditions, but to accept it as one accepts nature, to recognise that it has inner laws, the consequences of which one cannot voluntarily escape. —Karl Marx in Die Neue Rhelnische Zeitung, Jan. 4, 1843.

Davie Fulton Cornerstones Post-Election Talk Special

By RICHARD JACKSON
(From The Ontario Intelligencer's Ottawa Bureau)

OTTAWA— . . . notes off the reportorial cuff . . .
Looking for something distinctive and different to give your Summer cottage such a character all its own as to make it the conversation piece all up your district?

Well, now that former Federal Public Works Minister E. Davie Fulton has resigned, why not get yourself one of his former Government Department's handsome cornerstones?

These are distinctive looking bronze and aluminum plaques such as you can see on almost all Federal building as the Post Office or the old-age pension, Unemployment Insurance - Income Tax-Customs and Excise office structures the Government has been erecting in recent years.

The cornerstone in use the past few months has carried the lettering, in bronze, aluminum, or even carved into the rock itself:

"This Stone Was Laid by Hon. E. Davie Fulton, Minister of Public Works."

And, of course, the thing is out of date and likely an embarrassment on the hands of the Works Department.

DOG HOUSES, TOO

As a way of saving a few of the taxpayers' dollars, Public Works has made it a practice to order these bronze, aluminum or plain stone cornerstones, if not actually in bulk, then at a time.

Cheaper to get them by the dozen and leave the dates blank, to be cut in later than to order them custom-made, one at a time, as each occasion arises.

So, naturally, when a Government or the Minister of Public Works changes, there are always a few old cornerstones looking around.

It happened that way when former Liberal Trade Minister C. D. Howe was made, almost, of opening new buildings and performing the formality of tamping in the cornerstone-proud and Public Works Writers were defeated in '58.

And now, scattered through the nearby Gatineau Hills you can see the odd Summer cottage proudly bearing the big, bright and shining bronze and aluminum plaque: "This Cornerstone Was Laid by Right Honorable C. D. Howe, Minister of Trade and Commerce."

There was a doghouse, distinguished with an old C. D. Howe plaque.

So see your MP and put in a bid for one of the left-over Honorable E. Davie Fulton cornerstones while the supply lasts.

It will make your cottage, the woodshed or even the outhouse the talk of the townplaces of the summer colony.

A QUIET PLACE

When the new Parliament meets, it will have a new facility has been provided for it — one that it and could have used all these past years, a place to meditate and pray.

In the old West Block on Parliament Hill, rebuilt from the cellar to the tower and connected by the tunnel with the House of Commons, a chapel, quiet, dim, secluded, is being installed.

It will have an altar.

And six straight, high-back chairs.

There, with two small windows of stained glass filtering in the light from the north, the Member of Parliament in these troubled times, may pray and seek Divine guidance.

They are not calling it a chapel, nor even a prayer room, but simply "The Quiet Place."

It was to have been in Sir John A. Macdonald's old office, down which Sir John could stroll to the peace and quiet of privacy when the pressure-office seekers besieging his office became unbearable.

This old office, not particularly large, but still commodious, looked out through a great bay window to the Chaudiere Falls of the Ottawa River and the spectacular sunsets over the Gatineau Hills.

It had a lovely old inlaid hardwood floor, beautifully carved wood around its ceiling edge, stained glass windows, and in it you could feel, almost hear, the hush of history.

But as a "Quiet Place" it was too large.

Straight, high-back chairs would have looked out of place, and it would have been necessary to curtain, in dark, heavy drapes, that wonderful old bay window.

So, instead of making it "The Quiet Place," the Works Department is transforming it into a lounge and reading room for the Members of Parliament and Senate.

It will have deep, soft leather chairs, a couple of over-size chesterfields, a huge Gatineau-style sandstone fireplace, a piano, phonograph and perhaps even a television set.

And it will have two entrances - - the big, wide door leading in from the corridor - - and the little hidden-in-the-wall door at the foot of Sir John's secret "escape" stairway.

Parliament, in session, has always prayed for a minute or two each day, in private with the doors locked when the Commons opens - - but this is the first time that a chamber has been set aside for the sole purpose of prayer and meditation.

And who knows? This may also be the best thing Parliament has done for a long, long time.

Be Patient With Africa

By Rita Hinden
in London Socialist Commentary

When the African countries emerged into free nationhood, they were equipped with parliamentary systems embracing all the range of institutions already well-tried in the mother country, even down to the petty details of British parliamentary procedure.

We all know now that things have not worked out so easily. Within a few short years, the new democratic institutions have been crushed.

Of nearly thirty ex-British ex-French and ex-Belgian colonies which have now attained independence in Africa, scarcely more than one or two have not already strayed from the path originally laid down.

Some — Ghana is the spectacular example — have advanced far on the totalitarian road. There are two ways in which the erosion shows itself.

First, the power and influence of the Parliament declined and, as it weakens, more and more power is vested in a strong president (presidents seem to be preferred to prime ministers) and in the predominating individual emerges.

And second the Opposition disintegrates and disappears.

In Ghana, it was first hounded down, and then ruled out constitutionally.

More often, it has been swallowed up in one mass party, in which all freedom is concentrated. Even an independent trade union movement, which might contain the seeds of political opposition, is, as often as not actually prohibited.

Generally speaking, legal opposition parties are now ceasing to exist in Africa.

But Western democrats may well be wise to extend an umbrella of tolerance to the one-party states of Africa; to recognise them as living within the democratic fold if only essential conditions are respected — the functioning of a representative assembly, the maintenance of civil liberties, and respect for the rule of law.

As long as these conditions persist, time may see the growth of separate political parties.

The day may come when th people and groups that think alike will naturally gravitate together and unite to propogate their own distinctive views, and by then it may be possible to have such groups emerge without endangering the very life of the nation.

If we insist, dogmatically, that a country must lie outside the democratic fold unless it permits of separate parties now, all we will do is to drive a wedge between ourselves and almost the whole of the new Africa — and Asia as well.

Change the Rules

Tillsonburg News

In an effort to jab the Government into taking action on pay increases, postal workers have been voting on a "work by rule" policy, which, apparently, could throw quite a crimp into the postal service and still be all according to the book. It is only by not following the "rules" that things get done with any degree of efficiency, it would seem. Obvious question: How come the rules aren't changed?

LOOKING BACKWARDS

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

April 12th, 1932

A Canadian mother is the first in this nation's history to follow her sons overseas, they being in the armed services and she in the Canadian' Women's Army Corps. She is Pte. Minnie Howe of Collingwood. In the same contingent is Private Charmain Sansom who has just met her father, Lt.-General E. W. Sansom, head of a Canadian armored corps in Britain. In Britain many thousands of girls and women are serving in the women's war organizations and in essential civilian posts.

Several Belleville Rotarians will leave for Toronto where they will attend the district conference of Rotary Clubs being held in the Royal York Hotel. Included are President Lloyd Hicks, Director-Secretary Orland Pinkston and Past District Governor J. O. Herity. The district governor attracts as many as 9,000 Rotarians to the annual conclave.

Mrs. Harold Gerow has had a cable from her husband, Sergeant Harold Gerow, R.C.A.F., informing her of his safe arrival in Britain.

Several girl friends spent an enjoyable evening recently when they were entertained at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Samain in honor of Mrs. Norman Pomeroy (nee Gladys Samain) a recent bride. During the evening games was played, the winners being Mrs. Eliza Bell and Marion Taylor. After a lunch had been served by the hostess a number of beautiful and useful gifts were presented to the bride and groom for which they both expressed sincerest thanks and appreciation.

Easter Market Prices: Eggs advanced one cent in price and sold at 13 cents per dozen; butter 22 cents to 23 cents per pound; chicken 40 cents to $1 each, according to weight; potatoes 75 cents per bag; maple syrup 50 cents per gallon.

Mr. Richard Bone, a resident of Belleville for twenty years and an employee of the Canadian National Railways here for twenty years, retired on pension at the end of March. He was objected with the yard office during the full time he served, and was a well liked man. At present he held the post of chief clerk which position he held for a considerable time. His many friends trust that he will long enjoy his retirement.

The Rev. Dr. C. W. Bishop and Mrs. Bishop spent a few days in Toronto this week.

Miss Evelyn Johnson is visiting friends in Toronto.

Miss Betty Illsley is spending Easter with friends in Hamilton.

Mr. John Wallbridge is home from Windsor, Ont., to spend Easter with his father, Mr. Arthur Wallbridge, on Queen Street.

Mr. Clare Countryman is home from Queen's University, Kingston, to spend Easter.

Mrs. W. H. Ashley spent a few days this week with friends in Toronto.

The Knights of Columbus defeated the Canadian Industrial Alcohol team in a bowling match at the Recreation Parlors last evening, the score being 2655 to 2446. The following composed the teams: Can. Ind. Alco. — Monroe, Alfew, Green, Holway and Phillips. K. of C.—Barrett, O'Callaghan, Hiots, Bawden and Donnelico.

At a meeting of the Junior Baseball League at the Y.M.C.A. last evening the following officers were elected: president, W. Gerow; first vice-president, A. B. Charlton; second vice-president, Ken Colling; secretary, C. Hayes; treasurer, Vern Wells.

50 YEARS AGO

April 12th, 1912

Mr. Albert Ling is home from Toronto on a visit.

The Rev. W. G. Clarke, pastor of the Tabernacle, preached in the Methodist Church in Tweed on Sunday, and the Rev. A. J. Terrill of Tweed occupied the pulpit in the Tabernacle.

Mr. Walter Pope is expected home from Western Canada shortly.

A signalling corps is being formed in connection with the 15th Regiment and is in charge of Lieut. Fennell.

Mr. W. J. Thompson has been appointed city clerk to succeed Mr. W. C. Mikel, who has resigned. The salary has been set at $200 per year.

The Tabernacle choir will give a concert in Foxboro on Friday evening.

The Rev. Dr. E. N. Baker of Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., a former pastor of Bridge Street Church here, has accepted the office to become Principal of Albert College to succeed the Rev. W. E. Dyer, who has resigned owing to poor health after many years of faithful and efficient service.

U.S. Buying Soviet Chrome

St. Thomas Times-Journal

The United States does not like us to trade with Russia, and has even forbidden American industries operating in Canada to accept orders from Iron Curtain countries. But now we see what the United States is doing.

For years the United States has bought chrome from Southern Rhodesia. That country produced chrome to the value of $846,000 a year, much of which was exported to the United States. Now the exports have dwindled to such, a degree that a number of shiploads have closed. Reason: The United States has found that Russian chrome is much cheaper than Rhodesian chrome and is now buying from Russia.

Premier Khrushchev must chuckle up his sleeve at that.

To Your Good Health

Functional Disease Result Of Emotional Problem

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Have you ever run into a nerve-wracking experience after which you couldn't eat, sleep, relax? Ever been so nervous about anything that you threw up? Or even had a dizzy spell?

Or come home with a "sick headache"? Or had a gassy stomach?

If not, you have iron nerves. But if you ever had any of these troubles, or other similar ones, you'll understand the following letter — especially if you read it all the way through, including the P. S. at the end.

Dear Dr. Molner: What is functional disease? I have a niece, 24 years old, who has been sick for several years, and so. She has blackout spells, falls down, and runs a temperature most of the time.

She has been in the hospital for tests and to several doctors. They can't find anything wrong with her, except one doctor who says she has "functional disease." What can be done for it and is it curable? She is a single girl who lives at home. — T.W.

P.S. The atmosphere at home is very bad. Could that have anything to do with it?

Everybody, I presume, is familiar with the term, organic disease. This means that something is wrong with an organ of the body. Examples are: the heart, if a valve has become damaged; stones in the gall bladder; an ulcer in the duodenal tract. Each is organic.

If the organs, physically, are in good shape, but don't operate properly, that's a functional disorder. The heart or gall bladder or duodenum are excellent, except they work too fast, or too slow, or have cramps or excessive act up. That's functional.

What about the young woman described in his letter. She's been examined by a number of doctors, and been in the hospital for tests. Everybody can find anything wrong.

So one doctor (bright fellow, I'd say; he deserves it!) used the term functional. The young woman's in bed, except that her healthy body makes her feist, upsets her temperature, and so on.

So the clue, in a case like this, lies in that little short postscript on the letter: "The atmosphere at home is very bad. Could that have anything to do with it?"

Don't you think the answer might be that the "atmosphere is very bad"? Why a woman of 24 still at home and unhappy? And developing functional disorders in a body that is healthy? Emotional pressures of some sort.

I haven't the slightest doubt that somewhere along the line doctors have suggested that the "atmosphere at home" is at fault, or the "emotional problem" should be resolved or treated. At each such suggestion — again by guess or intuition — the thought was rejected, and another doctor, or another hospital was summoned to find out why the girl is sick.

Functional is a tactful word. My version: Let Father let the girl live her life as she wishes, or else call for a psychiatrist who very well may advise likewise. Something's very wrong in the "atmosphere."

Dear Dr. Molner: Is it all right for a woman to wash her hair during the monthly period? R.

All sorts of horrendous old wives' tales to the contrary, there is absolutely no reason not to.

Note to Mrs. D. R.: There are two kinds of Oppenheim's disease, quite different from each other, so I'd have to know which one you are inquiring about.

"Don't Quit Because Of Arthritis" is the title of my leaflet designed to help all who suffer the aches and pains of arthritis. For a copy write to Dr. Molner in care of The Chicago Sun-Times Syndicate, P.O. Box 158, Dundee, Ill., enclosing a long, self-addressed envelope and 10 cents in coin to cover cost of handling.

Men's Hearing Takes 3 Drops

Portland Oregonian

Does your wife jump up to answer the telephone when you're not aware it was ringing? Do people seem to mumble more than they used to? If you are a male and exhibit certain effects of hearing have bothered you, the findings, of Dr. John F. Lee, Seattle psychologist, should be reassuring.

The Missouri scientist wrote in Archives of Environmental Health that a study of 912 men and women showed that men lose some of their hearing acuity at about age 32. About 15 years later another drop occurs. Between 50 and 65, men exhibit a third hearing loss. Women, on the other hand, have their first noticeable decline in hearing at about age 37 and from then on the deterioration is gradual.

Not only should this word reassure men who fear they are becoming deaf. It should be shown to those wives who think the old man is lazy or faking when he does not hear their calls or a summons to empty the garbage can.

Nature's octage hearing loss is kind to the male sex. The first mutes the crying of babies and pre-school youngsters. The second dims the din caused by teen-agers and the college crowd. The third reduces the impact of a wife's voice when she's been bawling out a child trying to penetrate the earliest declines.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

The prosperity of our big cities naturally produces quite large numbers of people who can afford to live in those lavish stately apartments we see rising in the more exclusive areas. They cost a great deal per penny per month in which to live in apartments, however much. They want to get out into choice suburbs inhabited by their own kind. Country bungalows spaced far enough apart to suggest privacy to one another. Nice highways affording comfortable access to the city with no vulgar impression of commuting. And they invest generously in these exclusive elements.

And what happens? A shopping plaza soon rises not only on the horizon, but within five blocks. All of a sudden, housing developments leap out of the earth like pink and blue mushrooms. A half acre gas station bulldozes itself into existence two blocks away on the elite highway. ▪

It is becoming almost impossible to be exclusive any more. At least, within a reasonable distance of prosperity.

Service Vote

short of an outright majority in the new Parliament.

The two service vote turnovers — one of them defeating Mines Minister Paul Martineau — boosted the Liberal strength to 130 seats from the 128 they won in Monday's civilian balloting. Progressive Conservative membership was cut to 94 from 96.

The Liberals needed 133 seats for a bare majority in the 265-seat Commons. There remains the slim possibility that recounts may change the eventual result.

Mines Minister Martineau—seventh cabinet member to be defeated—had held a 33-vote lead in civilian votes over Liberal Paul O. Gentil in Quebec's Pontiac - Temiscamingue riding.

Mr. Goulet had a margin of 49 in the service voting, giving him an over-all lead of 16 votes.

HASTINGS SOUTH SWITCHES

The other turnover was in Hastings South in Ontario where Liberal Robert Temple ousted Conservative Lee Grills with an over-all lead of 598. Mr. Temple had a 560-vote lead in service voting to wipe out Mr. Grills' 89-vote plurality in civilian vote.

The service vote results, made public today, left this party standing in the Commons, compared with outcomes of the three previous federal elections:

| | 1963 | 1962 | 1958 | 1957 |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| LIB. | 130 | 100 | 49 | 105 |
| PC | 94 | 116 | 208 | 112 |
| SC | 24 | 30 | 0 | 19 |
| NDP (CCF) | 17 | 19 | 8 | 25 |
| Ind. | 0 | 0 | 0 | 2 |
| Total | 265 | 265 | 265 | 265 |

SERVICE VOTE EARLIER

The armed services vote, covering 141,210 servicemen, their wives, and veterans in government hospitals eligible to vote, was taken April 1-6 during the week preceding Monday's civilian voting.

Liberals—captured 70.5 per cent of the 96,236 service votes counted, compared to the 30.5 per cent that went Conservative. Other - 3 s r: Social Credit 4.6 per cent, New Democratic Party 4.1 per cent, others 0.3 per cent.

This was a sharp change from the party split in the civilian vote which went 41 per cent Liberal, 33 per cent Conservative, 12 per cent Social Credit and 14 per cent NDP.

HOPED FOR MORE

The Liberals had hoped the service vote might swing to them more than the two seats of Pontiac-Temiscamingue and Hastings South.

Two of the close seats the Liberals hoped for were Lambton-Kent in Ontario, where they trailed a Conservative by 100 votes in civilian balloting, and Rimouski in Quebec where they trailed a Social Credit candidate by 200 votes.

But in the service vote the Liberals picked up an 83-vote margin over the Conservative in Lambton-Kent, leaving them 17 votes short over-all, and in Rimouski they picked up 126 service votes over Social-Credit, leaving the Liberal 132 votes short.

In Digby - Annapolis - Kings, Finance Minister George Nowlan trailed Liberal John E. Shaffner by 431 votes in the service poll but his 895-vote lead from the civilian count left him in no danger.

In Colchester - Hants, Conservative Cyril F. Kennedy's 351-vote lead in the civilian count over Liberal Hector Hill was more than enough to offset his loss to the Liberal by 262 votes in service ballots.

Mr. Nowlan remained 435 votes ahead over-all and Mr. Kennedy 283 votes ahead.

NATIVES ARE RESTLESS

DAR ES SALAAM, Tanganyka (Reuters) — Police Friday used tear gas and then opened fire, killing the leader of a band of Waarusha warriors, to prevent a major clash between thousands of Waarusha and Masai tribesmen at Arusha in Tanganyika's northern region. The two tribes have been at odds over cattle rustling.

Your Car

Never Ignore Electrical Troubles

By EUGENE B. MILMOE

A few recent inquiries have prompted these reminders regarding your car's electrically controlled safeguards — lights and windshield wipers.

Don't assume that a weakening battery is causing your headlights to dim when the engine is idling and flare up strongly when you accelerate. Loose connections could be the reason . . . and the symptoms might suddenly change to a flickering or complete blackout at a critical moment.

Check up immediately on abnormal windshield wiper action, too. If they've begun to operate a bit sluggishly, it may be due to a slight linkage binding — or a defective wiper motor which could conk out completely at the worst time.

Since the horn, tail lights and directionals are also subject to various electrical malfunctions, a prompt investigation of any peculiar symptom can prevent development of a dangerous situation . . . or avoid a traffic violation.

T.E. asks: "Outside faulty carburetor or choke operation, what else might cause a very rich fuel mixture?"

(A) A clogged air cleaner or excessive fuel pump pressure.

From W.O.: "After less than two years, I'm told the clutch facing on my sports car is badly worn. Could this be due to the way I handle the shift?"

(A) It could. If you constantly slip the clutch or use it excessively, rapid wear will result. Keeping the foot on ('riding') the clutch pedal is probably the most common cause.

K.M. writes: "In recent weeks, my engine dies out if I try to push the speed above 30 mph. Since reading your article about low carburetor float level symptoms, I've been wondering if that could be my trouble."

(A) It's possible. Other causes to check out are: a restricted fuel line or carburetor, and low pump pressure.

R.C. asks: "I've noticed that the right front wheel cover of my '59 feels much hotter than the left after the car runs a while. Would this mean the brake is dragging?"

(A) Either that, or it is excessive wheel bearing heat due to some bearing or lubricant deficiency.

Steals Meat Goes to Jail For a Day

VANCOUVER (CP) — Mrs. Marion Golden, 62, found guilty of stealing $2.23 worth of meat from a store, was sentenced to one day in jail and ordered by Magistrate Lorne Jackson to stay out of self-service food stores forever.

"There is no use fining you as it comes out of your husband's pocket. And I can't send you to jail very long because of your age and health."

Ships Probing

force the navy' to change some of its secret message code system.

Whether codes are changed to prevent them from falling into the hands of other nations depends on such things as the place where a ship sinks, water depth and the possibility of access to the wreck.

A navy spokesman declined today to say whether codes would be changed because of the Thresher's sinking in 8,400 feet of water more than 200 miles east of Boston.

The navy has said that because of the depth of water there is no chance of salvage.

REDS HAVE SPECIAL SHIPS

However, Russia has some ultra-modern oceanographic research ships designed for studies of bottoms in deep water, with extensive equipment aboard. At times, one of these ships is seen working with the Soviet fishing fleet in the Grand Banks area, which is in the vicinity of the Thresher sinking.

Vice-Admiral Bernard L. Austin, the court of inquiry head, told reporters Friday the court "will go into everything we can into the overhaul of the ship."

He also said "there is no report of sabotage."

The Thresher was in yards at Portsmouth, N.H. more than 12 months from the time of her commissioning Aug. 3, 1961.

In San Diego, Calif., the navy announced that the Trieste, the research submarine which is to look over the Thresher's wreckage if found, will leave by ship Sunday for Norfolk, Va. Condolences poured into the U.S. capital.

Queen Elizabeth and President de Gaulle of France sent messages of sympathy to President Kennedy on the loss of the Thresher.

The Canadian armed forces also conveyed their "profound sympathy" in a message signed by Defence Minister Churchill and delivered to the Pentagon personally by Rear - Admiral Desmond Piers, chairman of the Canadian staff in Washington.

'Hot Air' Balloon Lands Safety

CALAIS, France (AP)—The hot air balloon Raven carrying two Americans landed today at Gravelines, near Dunkerque, after crossing the English Channel. It landed on French soil about 3½ hours after going aloft at Rye, England.

It was the first balloon of its sort—using heated air instead of gas—to make the cross-channel trip. The last attempted crossing in a hot air balloon ended in failure 180 years ago when sparks set the balloon fabric on fire.

Riding the platform beneath the 50 - foot plastic - covered nylon bag were Ed Yost, 43, and Ben Picard, 37, employees of a Sioux Falls, S.D., balloon firm. Picard is the son of the late Jean Picard, noted balloonist.

The huge bag enclosed 60,000 cubic feet of air which was heated by a liquid propane burner beneath the bag's opening.

Air within the bag was heated to about 100 degrees more than the surrounding air—providing the necessary buoyancy.

EXPLOSION KILLS SIX

TAIPEI, Formosa (AP)—Six miners were killed and six others badly injured Friday in a gas explosion at a coal mine at Hsinchu, 335 miles west-southwest of Taipei, police reported.

ask Henry

Dear Henry:

Should a politician's son be allowed to give out pamphlets, matches and carry a sign which bears the name of his father's political party?

Dear Politician's Son:

I suppose that if my father was running for election I would get interested in the party he is running for. I would critically investigate his party platform as well as all other party platforms. Had I come to the conclusion that his party was the best, I would be his most faithful supporter. I would put up posters, give out pamphlets, I would even try converting people. You should be allowed to do it providing your father doesn't mind. HENRY

Dear Henry:

I am a boy who is kind of fed up with school. I cannot mention my name because I would be clobbered if I did. I've done everything that my teacher is still mean. She won't co-operate. I've done every single thing to be friendly, so don't say that I should try co-operating. Please help. FED-UP

Dear Fed-Up:

Maybe your teacher is not the last person you will meet and not like. She is also not the last person you will have to get along with. So skip up the fed-up bit, buckle up and really get to work. HENRY

Dear Henry:

Do you think it is right for a teacher to talk with his students (boys and girls) about sex? WONDERING

Dear Wondering:

Once in a boys' health period we had an interesting discussion and the teacher was quite frank. Probably in the girls' health period there was the same discussion.

These discussions couldn't be as free in a mixed class. That is why I think that a teacher can only clean the surface with a broom in a mixed class, but he can use the shovel in all-girl or all-boy classes. HENRY

Dear Henry:

All my friends say I'm fat. I'm not really fat, I'm just not skinny. I've been on diets and I look in mirror trying to make me not look so fat so boys and girls will like me. I'm a girl. I'm 12. NOT REALLY FAT

Dear Not Really Fat:

There is no magic secret, it is one word that will make you popular with your friends, boys and girls alike. It will make you popular with your teachers and your parents and most important of all it will make you not fat any more. The magic word is work. HENRY

Dear Henry:

I have this mother that's a real cheap person. She enters all kinds of contests. She cuts out all the boys from the paper. She takes advantage of all the sales. She will even send a beatup away to get a few cents refund. What should I do? WORRIED

Dear Worried:

Your mother is not cheap. She is smart, she is getting things cheap. HENRY in the eastern part of the island were sealed with snow.

One storm was reported to have suffered carbon monoxide poisoning in New Brunswick. The unidentified man was rushed to hospital by snowmobile.

Mrs. Paul Caissie, an expectant mother, and her five children were trapped in their car two days without food or fuel in their home at Weimer, 10 miles north of Moncton, were rescued Friday by a snowplow and a doctor-and-nurse team.

Mr. Caissie had reached Moncton Thursday night but was unable to return with supplies for his family and notified civil defence authorities.

Mrs. Caissie, who had been expecting her baby April 8, and her children were taken back to Moncton.

Mrs. Edmund Hebert of Cocagne, N.B., was unable to reach hospital Friday morning for the expected arrival of her baby. While snow plows attacked huge drifts, Mrs. Hebert's 18-year-old daughter assisted in the delivery of a nine-pound baby boy.

STUCK HUNDREDS

Area civil defence co-ordinator Dr. Gilles Richard said at one stage that between 500 and 1,000 cars were marooned in New Brunswick by the blizzard. Authorities broadcast instructions to motorists in how to signal aerial spotters for assistance.

A teacher and 200 children were assisted to their homes late Friday from a school near the Magnetic Hill area north of Moncton where they had spent the night without food.

Premier Robichaud reached Moncton at noon Friday after spending 19 hours in his stranded automobile. The premier said he stayed awake all night and had great admiration for the "courage, cheer and solicitous feelings" of other motorists who trudged through deep snow to see if he was all-right.

Four men were still missing aboard the longliner Elizabeth and Leonard off the western coast of Newfoundland. The vessel had been unreported since Tuesday night.

POPE MEETS STUDENTS

VATICAN CITY (Reuters)—The Pope Joined in singing Holy Saturday psalms in French with about 1,000 university students from the Sorbonne when he received them in audience in the Sistine Chapel. The 81-year-old pontiff recalled his days in Paris as papal nuncio and spoke affectionately of the Bohemian Left Bank and its second-hand booksellers.

Six Socreds

don't see how any parliamentary party can act without a caucus."

DEFENDS MOVE

However, Deputy Social Credit Leader Real Caouette said the six were not "defectors." He termed it "political strategy to give the Liberals a chance to practise what they have preached for the last six years."

He said at least two of the six, Mr. Ferron and Mr. Hamilton, have been "confirmed Social Crediters" for about 25 years and will continue to be.

"Personally, I will support a Liberal government which moves toward Canadian economic development."

The only immediate comment from within the Conservative party came from Transport Minister Leon Balcer who predicted the move "heralds the definite end of Social Credit in Quebec." The six men were elected, he said, for attacking the Liberal party. Their present action "can only cause distrust among the people."

The statement by the six said a government led by Mr. Pearson would get support from Social Credit "as it has done in the past when necessary to bring to the Canadian people the progressive legislation so much needs to set the country back towards its destiny."

RESERVE NUCLEAR VOTE

So far as nuclear arms are concerned, "we reserve ourselves the right to vote according to our conscience."

About biculturalism, the statement said:

"We give this assurance of support to the hope that Mr. Pearson is sincere in his determination to do everything in his power to develop in Canada in which French - Canadians and English - Canadians will be equal partners in Confederation.

"We expect that Mr. Pearson will, in the shortest possible time, bring about biculturalism in Canada, with equality as a distinctive flag. It will recognize O Canada as the national anthem and will bring case on duty."

The statement came out clearly against Prime Minister Diefenbaker's government re-election. The present government, in our view, has no democratic right to stay in power and another government can be formed by a party supported by a larger part of the electorate."

Mr. Pearson, in a press interview he had approached other members of the party before the statement was issued. "A few of the others agree in principle with us but they prefer not to engage themselves publicly," he said.

Neither Mr. Thompson nor Mr. Caouette had been consulted.

He was asked whether the move could lead to expulsion of the six members from the party. It was too early to forecast, he said, "but evidently, that possibility exists."

How to Tell Middle Age In 14 Easy Recollections

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP)—How can you tell whether you are middle-aged?

There are certain ways a man can discover for himself whether he has reached the shady side of life's slope.

For example, you are probably middle-aged if—

You can still remember what Theda Bara and Wallace Reid looked like.

You spend more time working crossword puzzles than you do watching the pretty girls go by.

When somebody says he'd like to take a trip to the moon, you automatically write him off as goofy.

They seem to be making staircases longer and the steps higher and further apart.

You daydream about retiring to Florida on $250 a month instead of living as a beachcomber with a dusky native you automatically write him off as goofy.

The hens starts rewarding you with a pat on the back, in place of a pay increase, figuring you no longer have the courage to look for a better job.

Any man under 40—or any girl under 35—bores you after 15 minutes.

Your wife gets up early and shovels the snow off the driveway, so you won't strain yourself.

The desk at your office holds more empty aspirin bottles than letters you wouldn't want your wife to see.

Every new blizzard reminds you of one in your youth that was ever so much worse. They just don't have winters like that any more.

No woman you can call by her first name still has the same color hair that she did when you first met her.

Instead of acquiring new and interesting vices, you spend more and more time trying to get rid of your old and dull bad habits.

You quit reading the comic strips in the newspapers, but find the obituaries of total strangers oddly fascinating.

Everything you see today reminds you of something that was better in the old days.

LONDON (CP)—A continuing study shows that maternal mortality in England and Wales was reduced by nearly 50 per cent in 10 years and now is one-tenth of what it was 30 years ago.

More than 2,300,000 births were registered from 1958 to 1960 in the areas covered and there were 928 maternal deaths in that period ascribed to pregnancy and childbirth.

These figures were reported by the Confidential Enquiries into Maternal Deaths in England and Wales, which found that 315, or 42.5 per cent, of the deaths had some avoidable factors.

The study, in its third such report, showed that further reduction of maternal deaths still is possible and, indeed, it is likely that improvement has been made since 1960, as authorities have been working on previous recommendations.

Many deaths, for example, had resulted in the 1958-60 period from the failure of the mother herself, or her family, to make arrangements for confinement. It is thought this attitude has gradually improved.

Some of the 1958-60 deaths were investigated confidentially with the help of all professional groups concerned — including specialists, general practitioners, midwives and medical officers of health.

ABORTIONS EXCLUDED

The major causes of death—expressed in percentages — remained as for former years: blood-poisoning 18; hemorrhage 15; abortion 18; pulmonary embolism 18; other causes 31.

Summarizing, the report said that, excluding abortion, there were 270 deaths with avoidable factors in the more than 2,000,000 births in three years.

Among those in attendance, responsibility was allocated to: consultants 37; general practitioners 136; local clinics and midwives 37; the patient 91; others 6.

The general practitioner, the report says, was bound to figure frequently since one of the commonest avoidable factors was failure to refer the patient to hospital quickly enough by the code of the general practitioner.

The report did not claim that lives could automatically have been saved by eliminating the avoidable factors, but it declared: "if the mistakes had not been made the pattern of events might have been different."

SUAVE, ELEGANT AND COMFORTABLE

(Part Two)

In our last column, we explored the progress made on the part of the designers of foundation garments, in the interests of customer comfort - and let's face it — more profits. Today's foundation garments, especially panty girdles and "bras" are so comfortable, that the old excuse of "oh, I never wear a girdle - they're too uncomfortable" is no valid explanation for a bad figure. An admission that one does not wear a girdle today, generally means that the speaker is too lazy to explore this field and take the time to find the correct fitting. This still takes time and the advice of a trained consultant is essential.

To further explore our theory that comfort means suave elegance, consider the latest improvements in hosiery. Hosiery, proportioned in length and width, is an old story, but we still hear complaints o runs resulting from too tight gartering. If a stocking is too short for its wearer and it is garter-ed firmly at the girdle, it will burst at the knee cap. Before it does though, it will be very uncomfortable, because it pulls a corselette or a pantie girdle out of alignment. A stocking too long or too wide in the leg, results in that strange appearance of a second, sagging knee, unfortunately too common sight.

Today's modern woman, regardless o her age, is an active, vibrant person. She gets around. What is the trend in shoe fashions today? Of course, lower heels are the big news - not only on walking shoes, but on dress shoes, as well. The new, jet-heeled shoes with their paved-down, heel base, much larger than the dime-sized heel base of last year, are aptly named. We no longer have to avoid subway gratings, or rubber mats with little holes in them. Our feet no longer scream for the frequent rests that they used to demand. The frown lines that accompanied aching feet are gone. We're comfortable and we hope, elegant.

No woman, who has endured the discomfort of straight, tight, tapered skirts, so popular until last season, can deny the comfort of the new graceful "A" line skirt, with its proportioned gores and wider hem, line. The fact that this line is also flattering, bears out our theory that comfortable elegance is news.

The sample is the waist cincher and the tight, binding suit or dress silhouette, is still fresh in our minds, along with the prickly, graceless feeling of crinoline, puffed-out skirts. All these horrors have departed from the fashion scene, for good, we hope in their place, we find an easy, fluid "A" line - graceful and comfortable. Who is responsible for these improvements in fashions? We, the fashion customers, have forced the designers to combine beauty and elegance with comfort.

If you have a question on fashion, just write Pegg Rogers, care of the Ontario Intelligencer, Front St., Belleville, Ont.

Unique Speech of Australia Adds to Color and Intrigue

By Shirley and Bob Sloane

SYDNEY, Australia — There are many parallels between Australia and America, not the least of which is the fact that they both grew up as isolated new worlds.

Inevitably, each continent developed its own version of the English language. And the English language being as expressive as it is, each produced a slang vocabulary that competes with the other for the most dazzling in the world. For sheer originality, novelty and proliferation, nothing this side of Shakespeare can shake a stick at everyday Aussie.

Australians were little aware of their unique speech until two more or less simultaneous events called attention to it. One was a revival of popularity of the old folk song, "Waltzing Matilda," the story of a tramp who stole a sheep and got his comeuppance. Most of the words in the song are unintelligible on the east side of the Pacific.

The other event was publication of a hilarious novel called "They're A Weird Mob," by Nino Culotta (pen name of a non-Italian Sydney newspaperman), which purported to tell the story of an Italian journalist who found he wasn't fluent in English after all when he arrived in Australia on an assignment. One of the most memorable passages concerns the first words of Australian he heard from a cab driver after getting off the ship. They were: "Ow're yer gola', mite, orright?"

WORD COLLECTION

We have been assiduously collecting some of these embellishments to the mother tongue. Just a few of our favorites, others obscure and esoteric, but they are all part of the dynamic quality of Australia that makes it so colorful and intriguing a place:

Apples — Okay.

Bomb — An old car.

Blue — fight.

Crook or crooked — broken, sick, or just lousy, as in "I feel pretty crooked this morning."

Good-o — Fine.

Good-on-ya — This is more or less untranslatable, but registers somewhere between "nice going" and "God bless you."

Kick on — Carry on.

Turn on — Switch it.

Not much chop — Not much to recommend it.

Offsider — Right hand man.

Shgila — a girl, any girl, but most often one best left otherwise unidentified.

Jack up — To arrange, especially in New Zealand.

Doer — dull or bad.

Dudder — bad.

Dubster — good.

Dinkum — regular.

Cobber — Pal or buddy (a little obsolete).

No-hoper — A hopeless case.

DISCOMBOBULATED

Thing — Another virtually untranslatable word, understandable only in its context. Generally, it means excited, stimulated, disconcerted, distracted or — to use an American term — discombobulated.

Roo(ing — Another use also in mixed company; it does not mean cheering.

Aussies also have their own nicknames for people from various parts of their own country. Queenslanders are banana benders or kanakalanders, Victorians are Yarra-sailers (from the Yarra River) or cabbage-patchers, and West Australians are sand-gropers.

Australians never say "please." Not that they're impolite; they simply say "thanks very much" instead, as in: "Would you pass the salt, thanks very much."

Well, we'd better kick on while we're still spyies and before we get in a bloo with some dinkum cobber of a banana bender and get crooked for a couple of no-hopers. Good on ya, mate.

April

'Tis April, and spring has come to the land of lakes.
Welcome to the winter-weary, Heaven sum,
Then come the warming sun, and April showers,
That bring forth from Mother Earth, the sweet spring flowers.

'Tis April, and a fresh green carpet covers field and lawn;
What'l soon bright and shining April morn,
We find a golden pattern on the fresh green lawn.
The dandelions that grow where fairy feet have trod.

'Tis April, and spring has come to the land of lakes.
The wind that blow and blusters now, are only fakes.
The ice and snow that blanketed the frozen earth,
Have given way to warmth of April showers, in spring's rebirth.

'Tis April, and the swollen rivers, roaring their way down to the sea.
Have cast their icy fetters off and happy to be free.
They race with white-capped fishes, their merry banks decking;
While the wild sea gulls are crying, "come along come along with me."

'Tis April, and spring has come to the land of the maple.
The trees are budded, and the sweet sap runs from the staple.
The budding leaves will soon give shelter from the sun;
While nesting birds their home will make, ere April's course has run.

'Tis April, and spring has come to this land so richly blessed;
And Mother Earth once wakened from her long winter rest,
Brings forth in bounteous bearty, in woods, and dale, and hill,
Hepatices and trilliums, shy violets, and tulips, fonquil, and daffodil.

'Tis April, and the robin's song is heard at early morn.
The meadow lark is singing, the cock of the blackbird winging.
Over from green pastures, where you see, the little lambs, new-born.
Frolic and play their heels in glee, by their mothers, newly shorn.

'Tis April, and the sound of roller-skates is heard on bare concrete.
For blades have turned to wheels, as children pass on flying feet.
The skipping-rope and marbles, now take the place of skis and sleighs.
And children's laughing chatter fills the long spring days.

ONE EASTER MORNING

"Joys are our wings. Sorrows are our spurs" — Jean Paul Richter.

If you've a box in the attic full of old colorful beads from broken necklaces, bits of variegated ribbon and artificial flowers, yes, even cut-outs from old greeting cards, take it down to the kitchen and have fun.

To what do?

Trim eggs for Easter. And oh, empty them first by all means. Tricky? Not a bit.

According to a current magazine here, just make a pinhole in each end. Blow the egg's contents into a bowl. Wash and dry the shell and all is ready to decorate, using toothpicks, tweezers and polyvinyl (white) glue as tools.

This tradition, it seems, stems from Alexander III, Emperor of Russia (1881-1894), when he spoke with his artist and craftsman Fabergo about an Easter egg gift for the Empress. Fabergo suggested an enamel egg - shapes of enameled gold and silver covered with jewels. The Empress Mother loved them and made him famous.

Looking back to our childhood days, however, there is no trace of trimming eggs; that is with beads, sequins, pearls, or what have you.

Instead, our Easter eggs found special treats just before dyeing. Simply fill a cup with just enough boiling water to cover an egg or two, a tablespoon of vinegar and the same of food coloring. Dip hot boiled egg and before it knew it, we'd dipped a most colorful collection of Easter eggs ready to serve.

That Easter eggs were a symbol of new life held little meaning for children, but we were sure that the Easter bunny (if we were well - behaved, kind, helpful, loveable, etc.) would leave a nest of Easter eggs on Easter morning.

Perhaps it was to spread a prosaic everyday world into a fairyland. If a rabbit could lay eggs, Easter was a whyl what happen? What a world!

How time dragged by. Filled with apprehensive wonder. What if the Easter bunny didn't . . . ?

Then came Easter morning at last. And the nest!

And this summer (as previously recorded) a visit from Grandma Ryan unlisted the scene of early childhood memories in Ogden, Utah. Visiting, by the way, after 47 years, came to mind the happy moment when the children rounded outside the sun just rising from behind the mountain-draped trees, to gaze in awe at every scene, searching, searching.

Could the nest be hidden behind the rose where the tall ferns grew? Was it by the foot of the tall tree that graced the far end of the lawn? Was it waiting there in the flower bed by the fence or "neath the board walk that divided the grass?

Now suddenly, shouts and cries of glee and delight fill the air.

Here at the foot of the tree lay the most beautiful nest of cut green grass threaded with violets holding the prettiest colored Easter eggs in the world.

"We weren't forgotten. The Promise came true!"

And now it is again Easter. Again, the charm of that morning — when found parents had arranged a "surprised by joy" Easter symbol — blossoms from an mannequ'e branches. Time, as time does, has brought family happiness, has divided family by death. But the wonder that united us by a nest of Easter eggs grows ever more and more meaningful, dearer and precious with the passing of each Easter's gift of hope and life anew. A proof of the importance of myths, folk and dairy stories in the lives of children, surely, "and as important as their daily bread and butter," as Linda Duncan of the Vancouver Public Library.

"These stories encompass the wisdom of the race," she says, "and through the centuries they have been told and retold until they are polished and shining. By reading and telling them we can lead a child into the attitudes we hope he will have as an adult. We can also lead him to a life-long love of literature."

As someone has truly said: "Myths are the pattern room of the mind. The map of roads of Mankind."

Bellevignette: Wurrt you who walked into a local bakery and found the girl asking, "Have you any Red Cross buns?" of a very puzzled salesgirl?

A very Happy Easter, everyone!

SPEAKING of MANNERS

PATRICIA LEWIS

THE DRUGGIST'S DILEMMA

Our local druggist was moved almost to tears last week when he bought a bottle of aspirin.

It wasn't because he despaired of the evil aspirin and, even though he's ordinarily a sympathetic soul, he wasn't bowled over by every-day headache of mine. He was taking stock of the toy counter and it had given him a sing-along headache of his own.

Boxes were rearranged, parts of several puzzles were missing (you could see gaping holes in the pre-done pictures), and a number of books had been better days although they had been put on display that morning. Crayons had mysteriously disappeared from a few boxes. A doll had been undressed and dressed again; it had plowed through a drag race and a rag doll was drastically eying a tear in her dress.

I could readily sympathize, because, a few days before, I had purchased from the same counter a box of Colorforms to take home to my very busy boy. He was not to find when I opened it that Popeye had lost his hat, his pipe and suddenly his left arm. His charm for a certain four-year-old.

Our druggist has a marvelous disposition and is always cheerful but this Saturday day he was quite disappointed about the way some of his customers' youngsters had been treating the hospitality he usually offers them. Children flock to the toy and game section while their mothers are shopping elsewhere in the store or at the neighborhood supermarket. Generally, they're well-behaved and they look, rather than handle. A number of sales are made in this free-wheeling way. But sometimes a youngster just can't resist sampling the wares. The mother may not be aware of it, and so by the time she gets to the counter is less salable shape.

"Maybe you could point this out in your column some day," he said hopefully. "Maybe I don't want to be destructive. But perhaps it might be worthwhile to impress upon mothers that youngsters need to be reminded that merchandise purchased."

So that's exactly what I'm trying to do, for sake of my friend's continued good humor and prosperity.

Youngsters are permitted to browse at the toy counter while mothers are busy elsewhere, but should be left with a reminder not to open boxes and packages, and to remind them not to remove the wares from their wraps and play with them.

The toy counter always acts like a magnet, and many mothers shop in peace knowing the youngsters are safe from that spot until they finish and, even then, it's hard to drag them away from it. In the meantime, though, they should be taught the courtesy and property of others in return for the privilege of browsing.

Children should be given this thought to take with them to the toy department as they happily scan the goodies it offers.

She Has Mad Mad Whirl Putting Mad Mad World On Deep Black Velvet

By JIM PEACOCK

NEW YORK (CP) — Vancouver artist Joy Caros, working in a field shunned by many of the purists, has reached another plateau in her rapid rise to prominence as a painter working with oils on black velvet.

New works by the 30-year-old housewife and mother of three, who during the last six years has developed a unique black velvet technique, will be shown with a Hollywood-style splash in New York City this fall.

Canadians, however, will get the first public look at the paintings scheduled for display there. Mrs. Caros will show them in a collection of 35 of her works in Welland, Ont., starting April 25. She is to make a Toronto television appearance April 22 in connection with the Welland show.

TOUR U.S.

From Ontario, the paintings will be flown to Las Vegas for a show at the Sands Hotel. Other dates are being arranged in Miami, Atlantic City and Reno, Nev.

Plans for the New York showing are incomplete, but a spokesman for United Artists says it will probably include television airing and display in the lobby of a theatre during the world premiere of producer Stanley Kramer's new movie It's a Mad, Mad, Mad, Mad World.

Mrs. Caros currently is in Hollywood completing, under contract, between 10 and 15 paintings for the displays here. They are to include a portrait of Frances Nuyen, in Hawaii where Mrs. Caros went last winter to open a dress shop.

"The first day," Mrs. Caros said, "I got a phone call at home in my studio that Mr. Kramer would like to buy my painting of a girl with a candle, so I went down."

Kramer felt that one and two others Mrs. Caros earlier had refused to sell for $1,500 each. He wanted to know just how he argued them out of me," she said.

Then he spotted a painting of a Hawaiian boy which Mrs. Caros described as "my first real effort." It was owned by the manager of the Hawaii Surf Hotel, where the gallery is located. The manager made it a gift to Kramer, who offered earlier and then bought to Hollywood to complete the clowns.

TAKES TO AIR

The assignment put Mrs. Caros on a mad, mad whirl. She flew to Hollywood to get photos from the film from which to catch the facial expressions of the clowns, where she flew to Vancouver to work on paintings for the Welland show, or-dered earlier, and then back to Hollywood to complete the clowns.

"Whew," she said in a letter reporting her latest success, which includes selection of her Nuyen portrait for the cover of a leading U.S. movie magazine coming out later this year.

Well she might feel this way. Born in Trail, B.C., and raised in Vancouver, Mrs. Carlo has been painting seriously for only six years, having only dabbled previously while keeping house for her policeman husband and bearing two children. She had a third child last year.

Two years ago she was still struggling in Vancouver. To get her works displayed by a Vancouver art gallery, she had to paint oils on canvas because purists don't accept velvets as true art.—They say an artist doesn't have to paint backgrounds on velvet," Mrs. Caros said.

PRICES WENT UP

Awards in a California art competition, resulting publicity and improvement in her velvet technique all helped to propel her career. Sales, at prices from $80 to $500, began to increase a year ago. Then the prices went up—to between $150 and $800—and today Caros' velvets command a minimum of $300.

Her work is being compared with that of Walt Kuhn, the American who revived the ancient art about 15 years ago while living in Tahiti and whose paintings have sold for $5,000 or more since his death in a motorcycle accident in 1953.

I've come across a new technique," Mrs. Caros said. It is really something and I mean really something. It's my own Leotag."

Says Kramer:

"Miss Caros combines a fine talent for portraiture with a most unusual technique that results in an exciting dimension of art. I think the young lady is destined to make an important name for herself."

QUESTION:

I am coming to you for help again. Something you suggested ways puzzled me is what kind of lunch to serve if one has guests and again for the morning meal. When we are alone I always serve the biggest meal of the day in the evening because that's when the whole family is at home. I would appreciate it if you would send me a few sample menus. For ourselves I usually have soup and sandwiches at noon but I don't think guests would appreciate this — Mrs. R. S.

CURRIED EGGS:

8 hard-cooked eggs, sliced, ¼ cup chopped onion, 2 tablespoons butter, ¼ cup flour, 1 to 3 teaspoons curry powder, 2½ cups milk, 3 teaspoons salt, ⅛ teaspoon pepper.

Saute the onion in the butter. Remove from heat and blend in the flour and curry. Return to heat, stir until smooth and gradually add the milk, stirring until thickened. Add the eggs and season with salt and pepper. Good served over rice. Makes 6 servings.

BAKED SALMON MOULDS:

1 lb. can red or pink salmon, 2 eggs, 2 tablespoons melted butter, ½ cup milk, ¾ cup crushed corn flakes, ½ teaspoon garlic salt, 2 tablespoons grated onion, dash of pepper.

Drain the salmon and mash the bones and skin. Flake. There should be about 2 cups. Mix with slightly beaten eggs, butter, hot milk and corn flakes. Season with garlic salt, onion and pepper. Mix thoroughly. Pack into 4 greased custard cups. Set in pan of hot water and bake at 375 deg. Fahr. for 30 minutes. Serve with Tomato Sauce. This is good served with cole slaw and hot tea biscuits or bran muffins.

CHICKEN ASPIC:

1 package unflavored gelatine, 2 cups water, divided, 2 chicken bouillon cubes, ½ teaspoon Worcestershire sauce, 1 teaspoon grated onion, dash of pepper, 2 cups finely cooked meat (chicken or pork), ½ cup diced celery, 2 tablespoons chopped green pepper, 1 or 2 teaspoons chopped pimiento (optional).

Sprinkle gelatine on ½ cup of the water to soften. Add boiling water, bouillon cubes and heat and stir until gelatine is dissolved. Remove from heat and add remaining 1½ cups water, Worcestershire sauce, onion and pepper. Chill to unbesten egg consistency. Fold in meat, celery, green pepper and pimiento, if used. Turn into a shallow pan or individual moulds and chill until firm. Unmould on serving plate and garnish with salad greens.

Teen-Age Canada

Port Arthur Singer Is Leading Revolt

By JACK HUTTON

A wavy-haired 18-year-old from Port Arthur, Ont., is quietly succeeding these days in a campaign where many others have failed — a revolt against rock 'n roll.

Says Bobby Curtola: "Rock 'n roll was a fad like the Charleston. But I believe teen-agers can appreciate much more than the beat."

When Bobby talks about singing, even senior record executives listen. The young Port Arthur, Ont., singer was last year listed by Billboard as the only young "pops" singer with international status while living in Canada.

(Paul Anka, with whom Bobby is frequently compared, does not live in Canada. Therefore, the American magazine wasn't including him in that assessment.)

TOO SOON?

I talked with Bobby this week hours before he was due to fly to Nashville, Tenn., for another recording session. Was he sorry, I wondered, that he decided upon a singing career after finishing Grade 12?

"No, sir," declared Bobby, "I intend to go back to school, eventually, and possibly even university. But right now I'm going to give the singing all the effort I can. We may even have a new album in June."

The young singer feels strongly about a new trend which he helped to start. "I've always felt that people underestimate the musical tastes of teen-agers," he said. "They like more than rock 'n roll."

At this point Bobby sang a few bars of his latest recording, Gypsy Heart, for my benefit and any long distance operators who might be listening. "See what I mean?" he said. "It's a rock-a-ballad sound."

"Rock-a-ballad? "That's using a strong beat to back up a song with good melodic lines and good lyrics," explained Bobby. "The days are gone when they could throw in any old nonsense lyrics."

HIS FAVORITE

Bobby, who was first discovered singing at a Port Arthur high school dance three years ago, has ruled shoulders with many artists since then. Who, I asked, are his favorite singers?

"Well," said Bobby, "I like Elvis Presley, Connie Francis, and Conway Twitty, too. Also Johnny Mathis. Sinatra? I like him in a way, but I think most of his fans like to remember an earlier era. That's his secret."

The story of Bobby's success over the last three years is a marked contrast to Paul Anka. Dyer Hurdon, one of Bobby's managers, explained that this was because of a "roll 'n sell" approach to publicizing the young singer.

"Bobby may not have had much publicity, but he's made more than 400 public appearances in Canada and many more in the U.S." he said. He also has about 400 fan clubs stretching across this country."

What's the future for Bobby? "Well, we reversed the usual pattern," said Mr. Hurdon. "His records have been released first in Canada, rather than being recognized first in the U.S. Some of his records are now heard in 14 countries."

Whatever else the Port Arthur singer will achieve, he has at least proven one thing: it is possible for a young singer in Canada to dent the North American hit parade.

And if Bobby Curtola can continue to lead his teen age fans above and beyond rock 'n' roll I'm all for him.

SUMMER JOBS

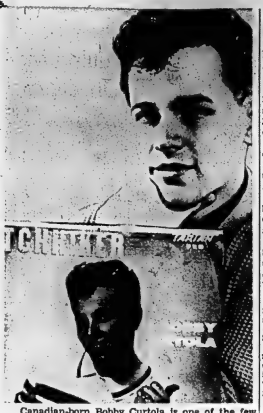
A reminder to all those who are thinking about summer jobs. Have you started looking about your neighborhood for one of those scarce jobs?

"Teen-agers are going to find it even more difficult to find summer employment this year," an employment agency executive said this week. "And those who wait until June to start looking are liable to be disappointed."

His advice: Check with large companies in the home area, even though they may not be advertising yet for summer help. You may beat the others to the punch that way.



"If a student doesn't have to worry about making a lot of money in the summer," he added, "I would advise planning a work-and-learn summer."

"For example, a boy or girl may be wondering about someday working in a particular field Why not go to someone in this field, tell him of your interest and volunteer to work for very little.

"Chances are he'll be so flattered that you'll get some sort of a summer job. And by the end of the summer you'll have a much better idea of whether or not you like this kind of work."

A Lift for Living

Followers of Jesus Christ Need Have No Fear of Death

By Dr. Ralph W. Sockman

Most of us try hard to keep thoughts of death from intruding upon us. In ancient Greek lands the River Styx separated the region of the dead from the land of the living. And the name "Styx" comes from the verb "To hate," "to loathe." From the days of the Greeks down to our own, the river of death has been regarded as a dark and fearsome stream.

Easter commemorates the day when Christ established a bridgehead on the other side of the River Styx. Christ not only convinced His followers that He had effected a crossing of death's dark stream but also that He had gone to prepare a place for them.

Easter helps to confirm our faith that life is too great for the grave. But we do not really conquer death until we overcome the dread of it. And such conquest is achieved by living and not merely by listening to arguments or even to Easter hymns.

STORY OF EMPTINESS

Some years ago a distinguished physician asked me to read a story in a current magazine. It was the story of two men who had been boon companions. They were connoisseurs of good food, good wines, and the comforts of life in general. They dined frequently and elaborately together. At one of these festive dinners one of the friends dropped dead. Later his spirit returned to tell the other of his experiences in the life beyond. It was a story of emptiness. During his earthly life he had acquired few tastes except for the perishable; consequently he had no training which could get satisfaction when his bodily appetites were gone. Death simply ushered him into a very waste of emptiness.

This imaginative story has lingered in my memory, for it is a verification of Jesus' principle when He said, "Lay not up for yourselves treasures on earth where moth and dust doth corrupt and where thieves break through and steal, but lay up for yourselves in heaven where neither moth nor rust doth corrupt and where thieves do not break through nor steal".

Our natures have both physical and spiritual compartments. If we fill our lives with material interests, if the main things which matter to us are money and food and physical pleasures then some day we shall hear the words, "You can't take it with you." But if, on the other hand, we fill our lives with ideas and ideals, with the love of beauty and the bonds of friendship, with the values of goodwill and gracious mercies, then we have something we can take with us.

PREPARES FOLLOWERS

Christ came to make men alive to beauty, to enrich the joys of human comradeship, to set men loving to laughter of little children, to help men feel the thrill of seeking truth and pursuing the perfection of goodness. His enjoyment of life seemed so independent of physical limitations. And He came to impart that quality of eternal living to us so that we might be full of life - - the kind of life we can take with us. Thus Christ prepares His followers for the invasion of death.

Recently I stood at the grave of a very close friend, a distinguished surgeon. I recalled the story of a physician in Scotland who was calling on a patient in his terminal illness. The patient said to him, "Doctor, I believe in a future life, but I can't conceive what it will be like. What's it like?" The doctor was nonplussed. Then he heard a scratching at the door, which gave him an idea He said to the patient: "Do you hear that scratching? That is my dog. He followed me to make this call. He doesn't know what is in this room, but he knows his master is here and that is enough for him." The doctor continued: "I do not know what all is in the next life, but I know my Master is there and that is enough for me."

The Golden Years

Don't Let Phone Stop Ringing Two Weeks After You Retire

By THOMAS COLLINS

The small instrument the telephone company puts in your house for the purpose of carrying on business and social affairs goes on the blink about two weeks after you retire.

It stops ringing.

You can still dial numbers and get the outside world, if you still know anybody who's interested. But the outside world has lost your number. Or the instrument is broken. Or something.

There has been many a retired man who discreetly asked the phone company, a few weeks after retirement, if something were wrong with his line. . .

The best engineer the phone company has can't cure the problem. But you can, if you'll make the effort.

1. Stop dominating all of your wife's time. She has built up social connections in the community and the phone was ringing all right for her before you came home. Now, all her friends know she has you on her hands and hesitate to intrude with chit-chat and committee work. They also figure you wouldn't want her running around to meetings now anyway. So Rule 1 is to let Mama loose and let her friends know you have let her loose.

FIND NEW PEOPLE

2. Abandon the notion that the company which retired you is going to phone you for advice (even though the place is completely fouled up without you), or that business and professional friends will call for long. It is very difficult for a retired man to accept this. But he must. And the day he does he can set out to find a new set of people he can be important to.

3. Make a list of ten organizations in town that need workers . . . for free. By reading the newspaper carefully for a couple of weeks you can find a handful of them. A political party always needs dedicated workers, and should top the list. Then there are luncheon clubs with a purpose (such as the Lions Clubs and their work with the blind); and library associations seeking funds for a new building; and the commissions seeking help for some mountain school; and adult education groups needing both teachers and students. Every town would provide a different list, and you should take from your list of ten the five that seem most promising. Phone and offer your services. The more effective you are in your service, the more important you will become to more people . . . and the more times your phone will ring.

STUDY THE DIRECTORY

4. Take the Classified Telephone Directory and study (not just read) the business firms that are listed. Take one letter of the alphabet per night, which will take you about two weeks since the X's and the Z's don't offer much. Starting with the A's, you'll get Abrasives, Accountants, Adding Machines, Advertising, Airlines, Antiques, and all the way down to Auto Wrecking Companies. In the L's you can go from Laboratories, through Laundries and Lawn Mowers, to Lumber. Surely, somewhere in this study, you will find a firm where your talents and experience will be important. Phone, talk to the Boss, ask him if you can serve him two hours a day, three days a week, or full-time. Sooner or later phone calls will start coming back.

5. Making your phone ring is simply making your Golden Years. It is projecting yourself onto people who already have a good life going for them without you. So you must project, but you must offer something, become important to them. Then your phone will ring its head off.

You're not pretty enough, important enough or rich enough for people who make phone calls to bother much with you after you retire. You've got to give them something they want. If you do, they'll gladly spend the time.

SEEK UNITY

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia (AP)—Emperor Haile Selassie says an African summit conference starting here May 22 will seek for the first time in history to lay the foundation for African unity. Selassie told a press conference the African government heads will also discuss speeding up independence for areas still under colonial rule.

Labrador's Terry Corbett The Friendly Magistrate Pays Some Fines Himself

By GEORGE FRAJKOR

NAIN, Labrador (CP)—Being a magistrate, Terry Corbett is often obliged to fine people. Being a warm-hearted Irishman, he sometimes pays the fines himself.

That may not be the officially approved way for the law to operate, but Terence John Corbett is convinced that in a pioneer area such as Labrador there is sometimes a distinction between justice and law.

"I suppose that basically I'm still more a social worker than a judge," he said reflectively after cleaning up a backlog of liquor cases in Nain. "I still get more satisfaction out of finding people jobs than finding them guilty."

His people number about 35,000 and are scattered over 112,000 square miles. They are Indians and Eskimos making a bare living on game and fish, hardy settlers whose ancestors dotted the Labrador coast with fishing villages centuries ago, and highly paid, skilled workers at the mining sites of Wabush and Carol Lake and at the Goose Bay air base.

To them Mr. Corbett is judge, philanthropist, job placement officer, arbitrator and messenger.

GAVE UP UNDERWEAR

He gives them more than just a shirt off his back. Once he gave away his winter underwear. At Davis Inlet he gave an Indian his sleeping bag.

Nurses in bleak outposts ask him to bring in fresh fruit and vegetables. Companies ask him to find workers. Schools ask him to find teachers. He seldom fails them. The result is that he is loved as much as respected.

"The RCMP tells me sometimes that I frustrate them," says Mr. Corbett with a chuckle. "They tell me they go to great length to make a case and then all I do is say 'poor kiddies' and I dismiss it. Their pride rather than their fear, emphasizing to them they make fools of themselves when they drink too much.

"I would look upon an offence committed by one of the whites in Goose Bay much more seriously than a similar one committed by an Eskimo out here. We can't expect to enforce the white man's law on them until we can give them the white man's way of living, and we're a long way from that."

They miss the fishing season because they're in-jail. Then it costs the government even more to keep them on relief all winter.

His fines generally ragge from $1 to $3 and terms of payment are flexible. Mr. Corbett's standard question after a conviction is: "When can you pay?" The accused usually works out a payment plan with the RCMP officer or the magistrate.

In Nain 220 miles north of his home at Goose Bay, Mr. Corbett's courthouse is the town hall, a cold, drafty place heated by a pot-bellied stove. In other places his courts have been boats, schools, missions, shanties and private homes.

DEPENDS ON HONOR

In one area of the interior he has to rely on the co-operation of the offenders to complete some cases. That's at Silver Yard near Schefferville, Que. Frequently people from the mining town on the Quebec border wander into Labrador and get caught shooting game on Sundays, illegal in Labrador but not in Quebec.

"I set up my court in Silver Yard and wait for them to answer their summons. They only need to stay in Quebec and we wouldn't be able to do a thing, but they've been very good. They come."

Mr. Corbett can remember having only six or seven serious indictable offences. Liquor infractions, mainly the making of home brew, are the most common cases.

"You can't really blame them for making the stuff. There isn't much else they can do. As long as they don't bother people or beat their wives or shoot dogs or damage property, there's nothing much you can do about home brewing."

He tries to play on the Eskimos' and Indians' pride

Mr. Corbett never expected a career in the judiciary, much less one in Labrador. Born and educated in St. John's, Nfld., he articled for two years with a law firm but then decided to go into social work instead and studied at the Halifax School of Social Work.

He returned to St. John's to work as a welfare officer for juvenile court, and later was appointed a magistrate. He served in Harbor Grace and briefly in Holyrood.

MARRIED NURSE

In 1957, when the time for transfers came around, he was given his three choices. "Holyrood, Holyrood, and Holyrood," he wrote. He got Labrador.

A year later he returned to St. John's long enough to marry Mary Power, a public health nurse he had known for years, and came back to Labrador.

"I've never regretted it. In fact I'll be sorry to leave."

Magistrate Corbett's approach to law is pragmatic.

"Why fine an Eskimo or an Indian $20 for something even if the law calls for it? They'll never be able to pay it. So you send them to jail. It costs the government about $600 to fly them out to jail. And suppose

Pilgrims Knelt on Calvary, Priests Lifted An Effigy of Christ From the Cross

JERUSALEM (AP)—Beneath flickering candles pilgrims knelt at Calvary on Good Friday night and priests lifted an effigy of Christ's body from the cross and buried it in his original tomb.

In Jerusalem's ancient Church of the Holy Sepulchre—to most Christians the exact site of the Saviour's crucifixion, burial and resurrection — Eastern and Western churches held four separate burial services in a profusion of holy ritual.

Earlier in the day, thousands of pilgrims walked in the footsteps of Christ from the site of Pontius Pilate's fortress and through the Streets of Sorrows to Calvary.

Emulating the Saviour's suffering, some carried heavy crosses. Some wore sandals in their trek over the cobbled way. Others wore reproductions of the glittering helmets of the Roman legionnaires who followed Christ to his death nearly 2,000 years ago.

In the night's culminating ceremonies pilgrims from many lands bowed in the dark vaults of the church crumbling with age and resounding with chants of hymns.

ENDED IN SPLENDOR

The pageantry ended in splendor with robed and bearded Roman Catholic priests withdrawing nails from the cross on Calvary. Then in a balcony high inside the church doors, its bare rock shielded with rich mosaics, candles flutter over glowing lanterns.

Wrapped in sheets of linen, Christ's effigy was carried by the procession down a spiral staircase to the stone of anointing where beneath eight hanging lamps it was anointed, spiced and incensed. Then, to the singing of prayers, it was carried to the candlelit sepulchre.

Throughout the afternoon hundreds of solemn pilgrims entered the church scaffolding that holds up the church walls, eating their lunch and resting upon paper and straw orange peels on the floor. In the churches high-walled courtyard police struggled to erect barriers to control the crowds of visitors.

In the afternoon procession, the pilgrims stopped at 14 stations of the cross to pray in many tongues. The stations mark where Christ was scourged and fell, where he stumbled and fell and, finally, where he was nailed to the cross and died.

There were American women in gay Easter bonnets, Germans, Italians, French, Lebanese, Filipinos — and others from more remote corners of the Christian world.

Jerusalem seemed little changed from the days of Christ.

Tribesmen in desert headdresses drove flocks of sheep through the twisting streets. Vendors haggled at stalls filled with fruits from the Jordan Valley, sheep carcasses and gilled-ing fish from the Sea of Galilee. Tattooed Bedouin women scurried about with baskets on their heads.

But Moslems watched respectfully, for they, too, honor Christ.

More than 10,000 pilgrims have poured into the Holy City for Eastertide with donkeys carrying their baggage past its walls.

A warm sun replaced the grey cold of the last few days as the pilgrims squeezed into the courtyard of the Church of the Holy Sepulchre. The church, said to house the tomb of Christ, has stood on the traditional site of Calvary for 1,600 years.

Not far off, an aged muezzin called from the tower of a mosque for Moslems to pray.

IS HOLY FOR MOSLEMS

Jerusalem is a Holy City for both Christians and Moslems, and on their Holy Mount the Moslems knelt beneath the Dome of the Rock, near the Holy Sepulchre. From the rock, Moslems believe, Mohammed rose to heaven on his horse.

The call to prayer on Friday's procession was so great that several pilgrims fainted.

Pilgrims who did not walk the way of the cross worshipped in and incensed. Then, to the singing of prayers, it was carried to the candlelit sepulchre.

In the churches high-walled courtyard police struggled to erect barriers to control the crowds of visitors.

INSPECTS DEBRIS FOUND OVER SUNKEN SUB—Vice Adm. Bernard L. ## Ten Soviets Shot for War Crimes

MOSCOW (Reuters) — Ten men, all Soviet citizens, have been shot for Second World War crimes, the Soviet defence ministry newspaper Red Star reported today.

The newspaper said the 10 deserted to the Nazis when they invaded the Soviet Union and joined the SS.

They then worked in a death camp at Sobibur in Poland, where, a court in Kiev, Ukraine, was told, up to 15,000 people a day died in gas chambers.

Ukrainian security police officials had tracked the accused down all over the Soviet Union, the newspaper said.

COLDWELL COMMENTS

OTTAWA (CP)—M. J. Coldwell, chairman of the Canadian Committee for Nuclear Disarmament, says "the unexpected strength in Monday's election of the shattered Diefenbaker government is an indication that Canadian voters refuse to support the acquisition of nuclear arms- by Canada." Coldwell, former national leader of the CCF party, said in a statement it is clear that parties opposed to nuclear arms received a majority of the votes cast.

Metro Govt. Celebrates 10th Anniversary Monday But Some Changes Wanted

TORONTO (CP)—The government of Metropolitan Toronto, the first such administration in North America, celebrates its 10th anniversary Monday, strong and sturdy but in a mood of revision and change.

For a decade the 13-municipality government has functioned progressively but flaws in its structure have become apparent. Remedial recommendations have been made and at least one commission is expected to examine it this year.

Sprawling over the 240 square miles which comprise the City of Toronto and its 12 amalgamated suburbs, the administration forms a single geographic and social unit which aims at providing the costly, large-scale services the municipalities can't afford individually.

It was born out of civic confusion resulting from great industrial and residential expansion after the Second World War and its success has been such that two similar municipal administrators have been modelled on it.

FOLLOWS EXAMPLE

Florida's Dade County amalgamated certain municipalities, including the City of Miami, in 1957, and Greater Winnipeg adopted some of Metro's aspects in 1960. A recommendation that Vancouver amalgamate its municipalities has been made by the British Columbia legislature.

"I thought it would take 15 years to work properly, but its success has exceeded my original expectations," says Lorne Cumming, Ontario deputy minister of municipal affairs, and one of the chief architects of the Metropolitan government.

Apart from its current program, Metropolitan Toronto has spent more than $800,000,000 on capital financing. The municipalities have paid $775,000,000 and the provincial government $125,000,000.

Prime among its achievements have been establishment of a rapid transit system, extended water and sewage projects, public housing and homes for the aged projects and a 4,-000-acre park system.

But discontent has been growing among several municipalities about their representation on the 34-man council. Each of the 12 suburban municipalities provides one member and the City of Toronto 12.

Unless there is some change, the suburban townships of North York, Etobicoke and Scarborough by 1968 will have nearly 50 per cent of the administration's population but only 15 per cent of its representation.

Another seven suburbs contain only six per cent of the population but have 29 per cent of the representation. The City of Toronto, with half the voting power, has 39 per cent of the population, pays 45 per cent of the assessment and occupies only 14 per cent of the area.

"All this makes it quite clear that a change in the existing system of Metro representation is necessary," an Ontario government official said.

Municipalities retain autonomy over education and welfare services and other local functions say this has led to duplicities in the sharing of costs for these services.

They say the suburbs appear to carry an excessive school cost burden, while the city is faced with heavy welfare costs.

A redistribution of metropolitan funds in these areas is proposed. The city has also suggested complete amalgamation but some municipalities prefer merger of certain adjoining areas.

Do Not Send Man to Kingston Says Magistrate

TORONTO (CP)—Magistrate S. Tupper Bigelow has recommended a young Toronto man serve a 12-year sentence in "some other place than Kingston Penitentiary."

Dennis R. McCullough, 21, said certain persons at Kingston Penitentiary would kill him if he was sent there.

McCullough pleaded guilty last week to two charges of armed robberty and two of breaking and entering. He was arrested in Texas for moral turpitude and deported.

Police said McCullough and another man stole $1,300 from a downtown office of the Toronto welfare department March 14. He received a 12-year term for this offence Thursday.

He was given a concurrent term of seven years for armed robbery involving theft of $30 from a confectionery store and concurrent terms of five years each for stealing goods worth $24,672 from two Toronto homes.

Communist Camp Has Given Rousing Welcome to Pope's Encyclical 'Pacem in Terris'

VATICAN CITY (AP) — The Communist camp has given a rousing welcome to Pope John's encyclical "Pacem in Terris" (Peace on Earth).

Without waiting for word from Moscow, the major Communist parties of Western Europe praised the Pope's call for peace and disarmament.

The encyclical and the reaction are symptomatic of the new spirit developing between communism and Roman Catholicism.

It has become increasingly clear in the last six months that the Vatican is attempting an entirely new approach to Communism, displaying a willingness to talk with Communist governments on non-theological issues.

The Soviet world likewise has shown a desire for a new and less hostile approach to the church.

COMMUNISM NOT NAMED

Without mentioning communism by name, Pope John's encyclical said that under certain conditions Catholics could work with persons who reject Catholic doctrine. The Pope said that political movements change with time even though the basic philosophies remain the same.

Commenting on the encyclical, the French party organ L'Humanite expressed "immense satisfaction." The Italian party organ L'Unita talked of "a spirit of negotiation."

None mentioned the encyclical's reaffirmation of the church's bedrock opposition to Communist philosophy and methods.

Though Pope John opened the door to practical co-operation in the effort to achieve world peace, he issued a mighty warning against Communist ideology. He spoke against fear and punishment as means of government and stressed that men have the right to choose their leaders.

But the Pontiff made plain that despite such differences all men must make every effort to reduce world tensions.

SPEAKS WELL OF POPE

Khrushchev's speech in which Stalin displayed toward the papacy, Soviet Premier Khrushchev has spoken well of Pope John in public at intervals since 1961.

The premier in September, 1961, said a papal appeal for East-West negotiations was a good sign. He also hoped Catholic leaders of the West would heed.

Concrete evidence of the change in relations between the Vatican and the Kremlin came six months ago when two Russian Orthodox churchmen came to the Vatican ecumenical council as observers. It was the first formal contact between the churches since the 11th century.

Last December, Moscow radio broadcast a message in Vatican policy toward the East-West conflict and paid tribute to Pope John for what it called his break with (1) rabid condemnation of communism, (2) all-out support of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, and (3) insistence that Western powers maintain a tough line toward Communist countries.

Khrushchev took the initiative again at the end of the year,

Paris Police Uncover Secret Network

PARIS (Reuters) — Police sources today announced the discovery of a powerful anti-Gaullist Secret Army Organization network in Paris and the arrest of several of its members.

The sources said one of these arrested was former Lt.-Cmdr. Henri Lafont-Bay, sentenced in absentia to 15 years in prison for his part in another such network. Police had been looking for him for more than two years.

The sources said that about 10 persons had been arrested and several others questioned, many documents were found during their search.

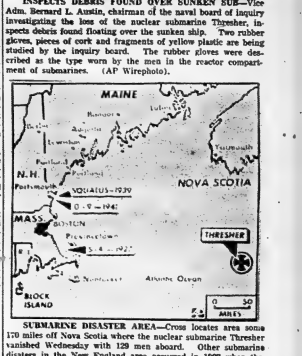
sending new year's greetings to the Pope. Pope John sent his blessings in return.



MAKE OVERTURE

The Russians made another overture to the Vatican in February by releasing Archbishop Joseph Slipyj, primate of the Ukrainians, after 18 years in Siberia.

Last month, the Pope received Khrushchev's son-in-law, Alexai Adzhubei, and his wife in private audience. It was the first papal audience ever given to a top Communist.

At the same time, Khrushchev sent congratulations to the Pope on the award to him of the Balzan Peace Prize. The premier warmly praised the Roman Catholic ruler as a man of peace.

Speculation has grown since that Khrushchev and the Pope might meet if plans for the premier to visit Italy materialize.

U.A.R. Expected to Bring New Pressures on Jordan

By JOSEPH MacSWEEN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The birth of the new United Arab Republic is expected to bring fresh and perilous pressures on the monarchist system of Jordan and Saudi Arabia as well.

Already it is being said—despite the somewhat nebulous character of the new U.A.R.—that Egyptian President Nasser's stature as leader of pan-Arabism has been much enhanced.

Nasser's desire to topple Jordan's King Hussein has been well known for a long time. But an Israeli analysis, for instance, says Nasser's campaign has hitherto been handicapped because in the public eye it was regarded as a spiteful personal feud.

Now that Egypt, Syria and Iraq have come together in the federated U.A.R., with Nasser regarded as certain to become president, it's thought Hussein will have to face a deeper kind of subversion, based on a sort of missionary zeal by an Arab socialist ideology.

ISRAEL WATCHES MOVES

It is not surprising that Israel watches these things with utmost attention since the Israeli leaders feel that Nasser's brand of pan-Arabism is particularly menacing to them.

Not only impoverished Jordan, observers say, but also oil-wealthy King Saud of Saudi Arabia may be endangered by the new move which, for the first time since the Second World War, has given Cairo, Damascus and Baghdad a common political stance.

Defence Secretary Robert McNamara of the U.S. is said to have urged Peter Thorneycroft, British defence chief, to build up Britain's strength in the Middle East as a top-priority operation. Lord Beaverbrook's Daily press says:

"Mr. McNamara realizes that the British bases at Aden and Bahrain are the only military protection against a Nasser coup in Saudi Arabia and perhaps in other areas where the U.S. has immense oil interests."

This is described as an "astonishing turnabout" by the U.S. government since the Second World War has given Cairo, Damascus and Baghdad a common political stance.

Yard Seeks He Who Leaked British Nuclear Survival Secrets to Ban-the-Bombers

LONDON (AP) — Scotland Yard today began a search to find out who leaked Britain's nuclear survival secrets to ban-the-bomb marchers. Authorities admitted it was another major security breakdown.

The country's hush-hush plans for keeping going in event of a nuclear attack were handed out as a pamphlet Friday to 10,000 persons marching the 50 miles from Aldermaston, near Oxford, to London. The annual march from a nuclear research centre to the capital is intended to dramatize demands that Britain strip itself of nuclear arms.

A series of sensational espionage cases have led to charges of sloppy security against Prime Minister Macmillan's Conservative government. Press and Parliament have expected to create an uproar over the latest leaks.

The pamphlets were handed out by members of the militant Committee of 100 which played a prominent role in the anti-American demonstrations at the time of the Cuba crisis last October. It had no part in organizing the march.

The Committee for Nuclear Disarmament, which did sponsor the march, quickly disclaimed any knowledge of the pamphlets.

"CND INNOCENT

"I have seen this pamphlet, but I do not know where it comes from," said Very Rev. John Collins, canon of St. Paul's Cathedral and head of the CND. "It has nothing to do with the CND."

Besides being distributed to marchers, 4,000 copies of the pamphlet were mailed to newspapers, public figures and even Britain's intelligence chief.

Government officials conceded the information in it was largely accurate and warned that the pamphlet's authors will be prosecuted if caught.

Information given in the pamphlet included the location of underground headquarters for civil services in the event of a nuclear attack, along with the names of co-ordinators of military police, fire, food, health and transport services.

The six-page document also contained photographs of one of the regional civil defence headquarters.

A defence ministry spokesman said it was "a serious breach of the Official Secrets Act."

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

Having now reached the maturity of a full-grown eighteen-hole course the Bay of Quinte Country Club's future no one of the leading golf centres of the district seems assured.

The new nine with the careful nurturing and care of club professional George Balazs is now molded into an 18-hole that opens a new vista of individual and tournament play.

The development of the new nine from a stubborn stony terrain into what could be the "better half" of the course with the whole rounding out a promising eighteen-holer, puts the club on a par with some of the better golf courses of the district.

With two years of hard preparatory work behind it, the course this spring after careful pre-mixing planning and weather preventative operations gives promise of ultimate development that should peak it well to the front.

Now in his ninth year as the club professional George Balazs points with more or less justifiable pride to the good condition of the new nine after the blanket of winter had been lifted.

While he did not tell me this, I believe that the ultimate development of the new nine holes and the club's arrival at an eighteen-hole status, is the end of several years' "ambition" on Balazs' part.

There was a touch of pride in his voice the other day when he told me the eighteen holes would be available for play over the Easter holiday weekend.

"The course wintered well," he said, "and this may sound strange at this time of year. It could stand a little rain. However the weather thus far has been such as to give us a jump ahead of former years."

Last fall the course was treated with winterkill preventative. The greens were brushed, fertilized, scalped and treated with more chemicals. The tees have been treated for crabgrass.

"We do not look for water trouble this year," Balazs said. "Everything is in readiness and all that has to be done is to hook up the system when it is needed."

This year is perhaps the earliest the club has beaten the usual spring problems, winter aftermaths, and what not to the opening punch. It is definitely the first time that eighteen holes have been ready for play at this time of the year. Good pre-winter care and timely "spring" operations have readied the course for what could be a record for 100 per cent opening play facilities.

While I have not approached him on the matter I think there is one country club official who is delighted with the turn of things. He is H. H. "Red" Trill, who presided over the club for the past two years and who put a lot of time and effort into its development.

The all-out development of the new nine and the ultimate attainment of the club to "big tournament" status, will, I believe, be a big moment in the golf life of Mr. Trill. He worked hard to attain both.

However the presidency has passed into the highly capable hands of George O'Brien, a former director, who by dint of hard work and interest in the club, deserves the honor of being the 1963 "chairman of the board." The club definitely won't lag with George at the helm.

A well-deserved honor came to the club over the holidays with the announcement that pro George Balazs has been named a director of the Canadian Professional Golfers' Association.

This, I understand, is the first time a Bay of Quinte pro has been so honored. George has been a highly active member of the Association for a number of years and his elevation to the directorate is an appreciative tribute of the association "brass."

While George anticipates a busy year with his well-stocked pro shop and every-day activities he will take time out to play in the Miller, PGA and Canadian Open tournaments this season.

With increased social, clubhouse and other facilities and a maturing into 18-hole "manhood," so to speak, the future looks bright for the country club. The day may not be too far distant when "Quinte" vies with other top-flight country clubs of the district for some of the outstanding golf tournaments of the day.

Twice In A Row

Kidd Wins 15-Mile Race

HAMILTON (CP) — Bruce Kidd Friday became the third athlete to win the Firestone Veterans' annual 15-mile race more than once when he finished well ahead of the field in the second successive year.

Kidd, a University of Toronto student whose specialties are the three- and five-mile events, finished the race in one hour, 18 minutes and three seconds, 1:36.5 outside the record he established last year.

Gar Williams of the University of Chicago was second in 1:19:57, about 300 yards behind Kidd. Third was Darce Moore Jr. of the New York Pioneer Track Club in 1:20:7.

An astonishing feat of the event was that of Olympic walker Alex Oakley of Toronto Gladstone Club who decided to walk the race and lapped two of the 74 runners, finishing in 2:02:21.

Oakley was working out for the 20,000-metre walk at the Pan-American games in Brazil.

Litz Fits In Leafs' Second 4-2 Win

By BILL MacDOUGALL

TORONTO (CP) — Bill Gadsby will have to put more oomph into his bodychecks if he wants to convince Toronto Maple Leafs of a theory he promulgated after the first game of the Stanley Cup finals.

The Leafs had just beaten Detroit Red Wings 4-3 Tuesday night when the veteran Red Wing defenceman said in answer to a question about how Detroit would fare in a hitting hockey game:

"Hit? Who hits for Toronto? Baun maybe, and he runs at you. We've got the guys who can hit."

Thursday night the clubs met again with the same result—a 4-2 Leaf victory that gave them a 2-0 lead in the best-of-seven final. Apparently Gadsby and the Wings didn't hit hard enough.

The Leafs pooh-poohed Gadsby's theory Friday as they sat in the dressing room after a practice in preparation for the third game in Detroit Sunday night.

"I don't see them doing it," said defenceman Bobby Baun. "They'll have to prove it to me."

LACKED EXCITEMENT

Except for some excitement provided by Ed Litzenberger and Ron Stewart of the Leafs and Gordie Howe of the Wings, there was little to recommend Thursday night's game. Most of the 14,071 fans would have been pleased with some solid hitting, or even some good hockey, to liven things up.

Litzenberger, usually a benchwarmer, startled everyone, especially the Wings, by scoring a goal and setting up two by Stewart. Litzenberger was a replacement on left wing for injured Frank Mahovlich. Bob Nevin, who was unable to get a point in Leafs' semi-final against Montreal Canadiens and they scored twice against Detroit Tuesday night, got his third of the series Thursday.

Gordie Howe, still bewildered by a mild attack of influenza, shook it off long enough to score both Detroit goals. Although he didn't play like the all-time great he is, he was still the best Red Wing on the ice.

Stewart had nothing but praise for the lanky Litzenberger after the game.

"Litz played a helluva game," the right winger said. "He set up my real well for both my goals. All I had to do was put it in."

DUCKS QUESTION

Litzenberger was asked whether he thought he should get a regular job, but his reply was cautious.

"It's up to the coach," he said. "I'm available if he needs me."

Imlach would make no promises.

"We'll play it by ear," he said. But chances are if Mahovlich is back Sunday night, Litzenberger will be back on the bench.

Mahovlich skated Friday but Imlach said it will be Sunday before any decision is made on whether the winger, who has a pinched nerve and pulled left knee, will see action in the third game.

The Leafs leave by plane for Detroit tonight.

The Red Wings left immediately after Thursday night's game for their playoff hideaway in Toledo, Ohio. Referees Detroit manager-coach Sid Abel said they will take it easy until Sunday night.

The fourth game is also in Detroit, Tuesday night.

Difference In Leagues

Balky Pitchers, Easy Umps?

NEW YORK (AP)—National League baseball parks have been echoing with the umpiry cry of "balk" at such an alarming rate this season, the question immediately arises as to whether there has been secret change in the balk rule.

"No," says Jocko Conlan, the dean of National League men in blue. "Definitely not."

"No," echoes League President Warren Giles. "There has been no change in the rules. The umpires have not received any instructions from me to enforce the balk rule more than in the past."

Why is it then that in the first five days the National League umpires called a dozen balks while over the same period not a single balk call has been made by American League umpires?

Five were called on New York Mets pitchers alone.

Also, how does Giles account for the fact that National League umpires have called more balk through the first three days last year?

The National League umpires did not call any.

"The pitchers must be committing more balks if more have been called," insists Giles.

Does that mean National League pitchers have not been taught as well as American League pitchers how to avoid balking?

The rule says a pitcher must pause in his delivery for a full second before making delivery.

The disparity of the balk calls could be due to a variety of reasons.

National League umpires may be more discerning. The balk rule is being interpreted differently by the men in blue. American League umpires may be more lenient.

Alvin Jackson, one of the Mets' culprits Wednesday, admitted he had balked.

"There's no question that I didn't hesitate," said the New York left hander. "They've been letting us get away with it for years and it's just a bad habit not easy to shake."

Ottawa Jrs. Grab 2-0 Lead

OTTAWA (CP)—Ottawa Montagnards continued their mastery over Charlottetown Penguins Friday night by defeating the Maritimes junior hockey champions 8-5 in overtime.

The win gave the Ottawa district champions a 2-0 lead in games in the best-of-five interprovincial series. The third game will be played here tonight.

Canadian Amateur Hockey Association officials said the winner of this series will advance against the Quebec branch champions in a best-of-seven series, opening in the rink of the Quebec champion next Friday.

They indicated that the winner of this series will probably be given the right to challenge the Ontario branch champions for the Eastern Canada junior hockey championship and the right to oppose the West in the Memorial Cup final.

Al Stitt paced the Ottawa win with three goals, including the winner at 3:33 of the overtime period. Other Ottawa goals were scored by Jim Chiarelli, Greg Gordon, Jean-Paul Groulx, Mike Fitzpatrick and Gordon Hamilton.

Lloyd Gallant and Stan Pearson each fired two goals for Penguins. Their other marks men were Gordon Whitlock and David Martin.

Wolves Even Series With Frontenacs

SUDBURY (CP) — Sudbury Wolves, who finished the season in third place 20 points out of second, didn't make very good prospects when the Eastern Professional Hockey League playoffs began.

But the Wolves have set out to prove they should be a team to consider when they're playing for that extra playoff money.

First, they demolished second-place Hull-Ottawa Canadens in straight games in the best-of-five semi-finals.

Friday night they rocked the league champion Kingston Frontenacs, exploding for three goals in the third period for a 5-3 victory.

The victory for the Wolves evened the best-of-seven final at one game each. The series moves to Kingston tonight.

JOHNSON IS LEADER

Rookie Jim Johnson, only 19, spearheaded the Sudbury attack with a goal and three assists. Linemate Red Armstrong added a goal and two assists. Other goals were by Mike McMahon, Dunc McCallum and Dave Richardson.

Pete Panagabko, Pat Stapleton and Cliff Pennington scored for Kingston.

Williams Rated Over Terrell

PHILADELPHIA (AP) Cleveland Williams, the heavyweight contender who packs power in both hands, is rated a favorite to defeat Ernie Terrell tonight in a scheduled 10-round televised boxing match at Philadelphia Arena.

The fight could be the last one in Pennsylvania for some time.

Governor William M. Scranton will meet with the State Athletic Commission Monday to discuss the future of boxing in Pennsylvania following the amateur ring death of 19-year-old Francesco Musaqua in Canonsdale last Saturday night.

The governor has been asked to declare a six-month moratorium on the sport and a bill has been introduced in the state Senate to outlaw boxing.

Birdies Five For 3-Stroke Margin

'Dashing Doug' Leads Greensboro

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP)— Dashing Doug Sanders, the golfer who shot a record 64 one of the links, birdied five of the last eight holes Friday to charge into the 36-hole lead of the $50,000 Greater Greensboro Open golf tournament with a three-stroke edge on rounds of 68-65—133.

First day leader Gary Player capped an unhappy 74 round by four-putting the 17th green to drop to a tie for 17th place at 140, seven strokes behind Sanders.

His 35-30 performance over the par 36-36 Sedgefield Country Club course, a 7,000-yarder, shot Sanders ahead of Dave Marr, whose 67 gave him second place at 136.

Tied for third place at 137 were Australia's Kel Nagle, Dick Mayer, 1957 U.S. Open champion, Tommy Aaron and Don Fairfield.

Stan Leonard of Vancouver was among eight players tied at 139. Leonard had rounds of 68-71.

It took a score of 146 or better to qualify 66 professionals for the last two days.

One of those who missed the cutoff was Jerry Magee of Toronto, who soared to a 77 today after carding scores par 71 Thursday. Magee was the only other Canadian entered.

George Balazs, golf professional of the Bay of Quinte Country Club has been named a director of the Canadian Professional Golfer's Association.

It is the first time a Bay of Quinte golf pro has been accorded the honor.

Mr. Balazs is now in his ninth year as the club professional and has been largely instrumental in the development of the club's new nine holes.

Maloney Is West MVP

SEATTLE, Wash. (CP)—The Western Hockey League has named Vancouver's Phil Maloney its most valuable player for 1962-63.

It is the second time WHL players have picked the 35-year-old Canuck centre for the H. R. Cleverdon trophy which carries a cheque for $500. He won previously in 1955-56.

Maloney had 102 points in voting based on five points for each first-place choice, three for second and one for third. Seattle's Guyle Fielder, the league scoring champion, was a close second at 333 points, rookie Vancouver goaltender Orland Kurtenbach was third. Other leaders: Nick Mickoski, San Francisco 53; Don Head, Portland 49 and Fred Hucul, Calgary 30; Bob Barlow, Seattle 22.

Dodger Bats Still Weak; Yanks Lose

— Colts Win First

By MIKE RATHET
Associated Press Sports Writer

"I'm a darned sight more concerned about this club scoring some runs than I am about dimension," Walt Alston, mild-mannered manager of Los Angeles Dodgers.

He had better be. The Dodgers may or may not be hitting it off, but they're certainly not hitting, period.

Alston made his remarks about dissension reports before the Dodgers took the field against Houston and reached Dick Farrell for only four hits and one run in 12 innings as the Colts squeezed out a 2-1 victory Friday night.

Alston may be concerned about a team that has managed only 21 hits in four games, but if the results of the first 30 games of the season are any indication, he's not alone.

In the only other game scheduled Friday, Kansas City's Ed Rakow allowed only two hits as the Athletics won for the first time this season, 6-0 over Minnesota Twins. The Colts' victory also was their first.

PITCHERS DOMINANT

The performances by Rakow and Farrell were the eighth and ninth this season in which pitchers have allowed four hits or less. There have been a one-hitter, three two - hitters, two three-hitters and four four-hitters.

Commenting on a statement by Dodgers General Manager Buzzy Bavasi that he had to "stop the players from popping off about Alston" in the light of last year's collapse during the stretch run for the National League pennant, Alston said simply:

"Stories get started sometimes and they become exaggerated. Every time you lose two or three that's what they start saying . . . dissension, or the clash."

Alston said he didn't know the identity of the players who were popping off.

"I don't know for sure," he said while indicating he could make an educated guess. "All I know is what I read, and how much of that is true I don't know. But I intend to find out."

BATTLE OF LOSERS

The Dodgers, meanwhile, were still trying to find out how to score runs after the tight struggle that for eight innings remained a pitchers' battle between two of the game's biggest losers, Farrell and Bob Miller. Farrell, 10-30 last season and a loser in the Colts opener, and Miller, 3-13 last year with New York. Mets were hooked up in a scoreless duel until Miller left the dugout when the Colts threatened.

The Dodgers scored first, pushing across a run in the top of the ninth on Frank Howard's run-scoring single, but the Colts tied it in their half on Carl Warwick's single.

Then, in the 12th, Howie Goss, recently acquired from Pittsburgh and hitting .444, wrapped the game up for Farrell. Goss, who beat out three singles in failing to get the ball out of the infield in five previous trips to the plate, came up with the bases loaded. He lashed an Ed Roebuck pitch over the left field base line, sending Al Spangler across with the deciding run.

The Twins had little success against Rakow, getting only a lead-off double by Lenny Green and an eighth inning single by Vic Power. Rakow got all the backing room he needed when Norm Siebern homered off Jack Kralick following walks to Gino Cimoli and Ed Charles in the first inning.

The loss was the Dodgers' second in a row, following a 2-0 loss to Chicago Cubs Thursday, when Dick Ellsworth shut them out on three hits.

MINCE THE METS

In other games Thursday in the National League, Milwaukee Braves humbled the hapless Mets 6-1 and San Francisco Giants walloped Pittsburgh behind the brilliant three - hit pitching of lefty Billy O'Dell.

In American League action Thursday, Tom Cheney hurled a one-hitter for Washington Senators to shank Bostop Red Sox 8-0. Ed Bressoud's fourth-inning scratch infield single was the only hit off Cheney.

Don Mossi allowed only two hits to lead Detroit Tigers to a 6-1 win over Cleveland in the Indians' home opener. Mossi retired 19 Indians in a row after Tony Martinez hit safely in the seventh.

Baltimore Orioles' reigning New York Yankees 4-1 and Chicago White Sox stumped Los Angeles Angels 3-1.

Sox Hurler Suffers Skull Fracture

SARASOTA, Fla. (AP)—Mike Degerick, bonus pitcher belonging to Chicago White Sox, suffered a skull fracture Thursday when struck by a line drive as he pitched during a Lynchburg, Va., baseball team batting practice.

He is expected to miss the coming season.

Degerick, 20, underwent surgery at Sarasota Memorial Hospital and the surgeon, Dr. Benjamin Solomon, said afterward he had high hopes the promising pitcher will be able to play ball again.

Officials of the White Sox said Degerick will be in hospital three weeks and will not play during the 1963 campaign for class AA Lynchburg.

Degerick was signed by the White Sox for a reported $50,000 in 1961 after playing for Harlan, Ky., in the rookie league, and made one appearance in a White Sox game.

Vanier Will Present New Colors to Regt.

KINGSTON — His Excellency Major-General Georges Vanier, DSO, MC, CD, Governor General of Canada will visit Kingston on the afternoon of June 1st to present new Colors to The Princess of Wales' Own Regiment, according to word received by Lt.-Col. A. K. Twigg, CD, commanding officer of the PWOR.

The colorful ceremony, to be held in the George Richardson Memorial Stadium at Queen's University, will be the highlight of the weekend celebrations marking the 100th anniversary of the Kingston militia regiment.

The centennial celebration, commencing on Friday, May 31, will be attended by all active members of the regiment together with ex-members from across Canada and the United States.

Featuring the celebration will be an all-ranks reunion dinner to be held on Friday night, followed by a parade to the Kingston Drill Hall on Saturday morning when the regiment will be given the Freedom of the City of Kingston by the mayor of Kingston, W. T. Mills, and members of the city council.

At the presentation of Colors on Saturday afternoon, the regiment will be drawn up in review order, and will present arms as the old Colors of the regiment, originally presented by Governor General Lord Tweedmuir in 1936, will be marched off the parade ground and laid up for safe-keeping. Governor General Vanier will then present the new Colors to the regiment after they have been consecrated by Col. J. P. Browne, MC, CD, Director of Army Chaplain Services (P).

Following the presentation of Colors the Governor General will meet members and guests of the regiment before returning to Ottawa.

A dance for all members and ex-members of the regiment will be held on the main floor of the armouries Saturday night.

A drum head service, and a wreath laying ceremony to be held at the 21st Battalion Memorial in City Park on Sunday morning will bring the centennial celebrations to a close.

Ann Landers

Youths' Freedom of Speech Open to Interpretation

ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANN LANDERS—I am getting very close to 13 years old so I consider myself almost a teenager.

What do you think about freedom of speech for us? I don't mean sassing adults. I mean just talking back to parents when we don't happen to agree with them.

Don't you think kids ought to have their say when an argument comes up? Or do you think they should just sit there and not answer back with anything just because the other person happens to have lived on this earth about 28 years longer?

Please give us an answer right away because a lot of us kids are having this problem lately.—BUGGED.

DEAR BUGGED—Thanks for writing. A lot of parents are having this problem, too.

In order to answer properly, I'd have to know what you consider "answering back" and how it is different from "sassing."

Kids should be allowed to present their side of the story, but having presented it they should accept the decision of "that person who just happens to have lived on the earth about 28 years longer."

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS—The letter from "Loose Bolt" boiled loose a few memories for me.

I, too, had romantic fantasies about my "lost love." For 17 years I mooned around when I heard 'our song." I kept visualizing our life together—as it might have been if we had married.

Then the alumni association announced its big reunion. His name appeared on the roster as one who would be in town for it—with his wife and two children!

My heart leaped! I talked it over with my husband and we agreed to invite the old boy friend, his wife and children to stay in our home. I scrubbed, polished, waxed, shined and ran myself to a frazzle for 10 days straight.

When they arrived I almost went through the floor. My poetry-writing dreamboat had turned into a bald-headed, paunchy, stuffy old bore. He bossed his children like a tyrant and his wife cowered in the corner when he looked at her.

My husband and I roared with laughter when they left. I had been living with a dream for 17 years. How nice to be awake!—SQUARED AWAY.

DEAR SQUARED—And moreover you got your house cleaning done.

GLASGOW, Scotland (CP)—Inventor John Cameron claims that blasts of compressed air could keep aircraft runways clear of birds. ## Permit Needed To Keep Captive Birds, Animals

By WILLIAM W. RITTLE
(Lands and Forests)

From time to time we hear of persons having an animal or bird enclosed in some manner in captivity unbeknown to them that a permit is required by law. This permit in the form of a Licence to Propagate Game or Licence to Keep Game in Captivity is available from any District Office, free of charge. It must only be permission to capture wild native animals and actually the animal remains as the property of the Crown. Other regulations restrict the bartering, selling or donating of any animal.

Non-migratory game birds (birds native to Ontario that stay the year around and include the ringnecked pheasant and all hawks and owls) come under this same regulation.

Migratory game birds such as ducks and geese, and migratory non-game birds such as birds that live principally on insects or shore birds and water dwelling birds are protected by the Migratory Birds Convention Act. Anyone having such a bird must obtain a permit from the Department of Northern Affairs and National Resources in Ottawa.

For simplicity it is much easier to list the birds that are not protected by any Act, such as crows, cow birds, black birds, starlings and house sparrows. This is also worth knowing when applying for a summer gun licence.

Woodchucks (ground-hogs) and porcupines are the only animals not protected by the Game and Fisheries Act and are therefore the only animals one may shoot under the authority of the summer gun licence. However, a person may destroy any animal (except those belonging to the deer family) on his own land in defence or preservation of his property.

Different Couple 9 Months Late

DEAR DORIS—I was married at 17 and we have a little girl 9 months old. In the beginning we were very happy. We had a cute little apartment all to ourselves and were looking forward to the birth of our baby.

DORIS CLARK

Then when the baby was born, everything changed. Don was jealous of Dottie and this shocked me. I gave him more attention and got him to do small things for Dottie and gradually he got over it. Then we discovered our daughter had a deformity of the ankle and this started a series of X-rays and tests.

Money worried both of us and Don would pace the floor at night trying to figure out a way to get those doctor bills paid. Then I became ill and had to see a specialist and that really cost us plenty.

We didn't seem like the same couple any longer. I have been to doctors about it and they think I'm afraid of getting pregnant again. Don says he feels like less of a man because he can't satisfy his own wife. So, therefore, I hardly ever want sex, because I know it will be one big disappointment.

All we do now is fight and yell at one another. We disagree on everything. I know mostly everything is my fault but I don't know why I am like this. I really don't think I love him any more or else I wouldn't act this way.—CONFUSED.

DEAR CONFUSED—Sex is taking the rap for all your worries. So turn your back on it. And you do fear pregnancy. This isn't fair to your own nature or your husband's well-being. Knowledge of this important part of marriage and how to plan parenthood, can make you lighthearted and help you find and express love again. Send for a stamped, self-addressed envelope for books to read and further information.

* * *

DEAR DORIS—My daughter, 19, has a steady job, and pays some board. My husband insists that except on very rare occasions she be in by 1.15 a.m. on weekends.

He says she has to learn to be responsible, and on time, and that the place to learn this is in the home. She does not always come in on time, with the result there are frequent arguments.

I say he is too strict on this. He has agreed to abide by your decision. Thank you.—CONFUSED NO. 2.

* * *

DEAR CONFUSED NO. 2—Here's news for him: she is responsible; pays board, works regularly. Has a right to practise making other decisions.

I'd suggest you both settle for knowing who she is with and when she plans to come in. Then if she sticks by her promise—so row!

DEAR DORIS—My legs are too fat and I am ashamed to go to a beach wearing a swimming suit. I go on a diet, but I only go skinnier on the upper part of the body. I would be very thankful if you would send me a book or tell me where to get one.—VERY YOUNG.

* * *

DEAR VERY YOUNG—Exercise can help to remould the figure closer to the heart's desire. Write in again enclosing your name and address on a stamped envelope and I will send you a leaflet entitled, "Be Figure Perfect," which outlines bends and stretches suited to the specific figure fault.

Rawdon

RAWDON — On Friday evening Mrs. Grace L. Morton, teacher and the pupils of the Allan Public School S.S. No. 2 at Mount Pleasant — Rawdon held "Open House" for parents of the children and ratepayers in this section. All fathers and mothers were in attendance, except one, who was ill.

The pupils were massed at the front of the school and following the National Anthem they sang "Our Canada". Randy Scott contributed a vocal selection "Easter Day." There were 17 pupils who took part in an operetta entitled "The Three Little Pigs". Grade 8 pupils gave their speeches which they had previously given in the Stirling competition. Larry Jeffs spoke on "Cleaning Our Polluted Waters" and Brenda closed the colorful movie film was shown by Mr. McDonald of Belleville, a representative of the Bell Telephone Company which was entitled "The Unchained Goddess," telling the science of the weather.

A silver collection was taken for the Junior Red Cross.

The geraniums in the windows, planted by the school children last autumn were most colorful. Their work books, note books, scrap books, art work and maps were all on display.

The pupils assisted by the wives of the trustees served refreshments.

Appreciative thanks was tendered to the teacher and pupils for a delightful evening.

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — Although he isn't required to do so by law, Herb Gray, re-elected Liberal member of Parliament for Essex West, has begun to take down election posters from poles and trees in his riding. He said: "There is no obligation for candidates to remove the signs but I thought it would be a matter of good practice to remove them instead of leaving them on poles and trees to rot like other posters do."

Garden Notes

Caring for Your Houseplants

By Flora M. Saville

A question often asked: why do florist plants fade so quickly in the house? Two reasons; one is the home atmosphere is dryer than that of the greenhouse; two the temperature is higher.

Cool moist air is the rule in the greenhouse. To match this move the plant to a cool room, or a cool part of the room for at least most of the day. Add moisture to the air by filling the plant saucer with pebbles and keeping them covered with water. Do not have water deep enough to soak up into the soil. Evaporation will supply humidity to air. A fine mist spray applied once a day to the leaves will have a good effect on most plants. A humidifier in the home often improves family health and the plants benefit too.

The days are longer now and plants are showing new growth. This is the time to transplant those plants which have outgrown their pots or become pot-bound. Time too, to take cuttings of over grown plants, of coleus, begonias, impatiensly and others you wish to increase for bedding plants.

DIET CUPBOARD

You can do this chore with ease if you have a diet cupboard or shelf equipped with the necessary items. You will need some garden soil, sand, leaf mold, or spagnum moss, dried cow, or sheep manure, bone meal, and charcoal. Add your favorite plant food, this may be tablets, liquid, powdered or granulated. You will need a fungicide and a poison spray, or one of the new multi-purpose aerosol bombs. Rooting hormone powder is handy too.

You need a quart measure, and a cup measure and measuring spoons. An old flour sifter or strainer will do for sifting soil or sand. A wire, or coarse fiber brush will be used for scrubbing old pots.

Have on hand labels, a pencil and a notebook for jotting down dates of transplanting, kind of soil used, time it took for roots to form, date of applying fertilizer or pesticide and effects of same. Keep on hand plastic by the yard to cover pots, also plastic (poly) bags for small plants. You will need pieces of broken pots for drainage.

In taking cuttings allow the cut surface to dry a little before dipping in rooting hormone powder. Most cuttings will root readily in perlite or spagnum moss. Have it fairly damp but not too wet. Cover with a sheet of plastic and close to keep air out and moisture in. Fold a poly bag down, set the pot in and pull up the bag, close top and you have a miniature greenhouse. Cuttings and transplanted plants should not be in full sun for a week or two until they have recovered from shock.

Potting mix for cacti and succulents.

VERY LIGHT MIX

Three quarts sharp sand, one quart garden loam. Add a little crushed clay flower pot for desert cacti and jade plant. When the dish has no drainage hole add a spoonful of crushed charcoal to keep the soil sweet.

MODERATE MIX

Two quarts of sharp sand, two quarts loam, one pint cow manure, two quarts granulated peat, three tablespoons bonemeal. Use this for Rex begonias, African violets, astilbe, dieffenbachia, palm, primrose and velvet plant. Add a quart or two extra of peat for cyclamen, ferns and tropical cacti such as Christmas cactus.

HEAVY MIX

Two quarts sharp sand, four quarts loam, one pint dry cow manure, one quart leaf mold or granulated peat, four tablespoons bonemeal. Use this mix for beefsteak begonias, calceolaria, chrysanthemum, cineraria, fuschia, geranium, hydrangea, Jerusalem cherry, lemon, philodendron, polinsettia, rose, rubber plant, and sansevaria.

DON'T SCRATCH IT

LA JOLLA, Calif. (AP) — Smokers with chronic bronchitis often feel they have an "itch" in their lungs "and the only way to scratch it is with another cigarette." This "scratching" isn't the answer and they should stop smoking, a Swedish physician, Dr. Borje Ejrup, said in describing a 10-day clinic course designed to help smokers break their habit.

At the Park

Opens Monday
"Diamond Head"
In Color

Lush, spectacular modern Hawaii backgrounds "Diamond Head," the Jerry Bresler production opening Monday at the Park Theatre with Charlton Heston topping a cast that includes Yvette Mimieux, George Chakiris, France Nuyen as Mei Chen and James Darren. In Panavision and Eastman Color, "Diamond Head" is reportedly in a giant story of America's newest State, a drama that involves both the people and the tempestuous history of the romantic island paradise.

Heston plays the ruthless young head of an agricultural island dynasty who tries to halt the barrage of his beautiful young sister to a full-blooded Hawaiian boy. Blind to his own hypocrisy, he also carries on a clandestine love affair with a lovely Chinese girl who is to bear him a son. These elements fuse into the violent drama and romance of the absorbing new film.

Miss Mimieux is expected to win new acclaim for her performance as Heston's defiant sister — ranging from the ecstatic excitement of her "courtship" hula with James Darren, to a portrait of deepening loneliness with his sudden death. Chakiris, Academy Award winner for his work in "West Side Story," plays Darren's half-white brother, a young doctor who also loves the girl and who is able to match Heston's violence with triumphant understanding. Miss Nuyen plays Mei Chen, whom Heston recognizes as a girl and not, despite his own pride of family, as a Chinese girl.

When novelist Peter Gilman's book, "Diamond Head," was published by Coward-McCann in 1960, some of the older baronial families, holders of vast pineapple, sugar cane and cattle estates on Hawaii, winced at its merciless profile of a man named Howland, his power and his bigotry. The book was a best-seller, and Howland joined the gallery of fictional giants; Heston, according to Gilman, has made "Diamond Head" a screen giant.

Now, after two years of preparation and four months of location filming under the direction of Guy Green, "Diamond Head" brings its disturbing, smoldering and exploding story of love and hate, death and defeat, to the screen. Aline MacMahon and Elizabeth Allan also co-star and Marguerite Roberts penned the screenplay. Special matinee Easter Monday starts at 1.30 p.m. Doors open at 12.45.

RCAF Hosts Junior Girls Tankard

The Southern Ontario Ladies' Curling Association is sponsoring a Junior Girls' Tankard competition for the year of 1963. The eight finalists from Southern Ontario district are representing Grimsby, Hanover, Lindsay, Alliston, Scarboro, Tam O'Shanter, Weston and Trenton RCAF clubs.

The first event of this nature is to be hosted by the Trenton RCAF on Easter Monday, April 15, starting at 10 a.m. This competition is open to High School girls and Juniors ranging from 14 to 20 years of age. Tankard winners will be decided by a knock out competition. It is anticipated this will grow in proportion comparable to the School Boys' championships in the years to come.

Mr. Dixon Wants Hike In Salary

MONTREAL (CP) — Fullback George Dixon, the all-everything of the Montreal Alouettes, wants a raise this year.

Dixon, preparing for contract talks Tuesday with the Eastern Football Conference club's new coach Jim Trimble, said he feels it is "now or never" for him to get into the worthwhile salary bracket.

He is reported to have made $12,000 last season, and that is dirt cheap for a player who won the Eastern Conference most utile, set an Eastern Conference rushing record, made the Eastern and All - Canada all-star teams and was chosen the outstanding football player in Canada.

Trimble said Dixon seems to be interested in a long-term contract and since he likes long-term contracts also, they might be able to agree.

NBC Comedy Show 'Hazel' Launched on Another Year

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — At a time when many television series are warily awaiting a life-or-death sentence, Hazel is happily launching its new season.

The NBC comedy show, one of the few series with a single sponsor, has begun shooting its programs for the 1963-64 season. All 73 are in the can, the company will disband for a summer vacation, reporting back for the rest of the season in the fall.

Hazel seems destined for a long life, largely because of the engaging personality of its star, Shirley Booth. Beginning her third year as the nosy, warm-hearted maid, she appears willing to continue in the role indefinitely.

A top award-winner of both the stage and screen, she raised eyebrows among her fellow actors when she accepted the series. They asked why she needed the television grind.

The answer seems to be that she doesn't consider it a grind, and that may explain at least part of Hazel's success.

SHE LIKES IT

"I like my work," she commented. "It's confining, but I compensate for that. I have adjusted to the kind of life I lead.

"When I was married, I entertained. Now that I am a widow, I enjoy being by myself. I can be alone without being lonely. I find all kinds of things to do. I cook. I do needlepoint. I even enjoy cleaning out

The Tracks

PORT ERIE, Ont. (CP) — Making his way around the leaders as the field of seven turned into the homestretch in Friday afternoon's featured Thorold Purse, Charles Taylor's Muskeg, under a determined drive by his jockey Jim Fitzsimmons, took the lead at eighth of a mile from home and held on to win the 9th running event by a neck from the early leader, Conn Smythe's Warrior's Day.

Michael Long's Selskirk, also finished strongly to be third, a head behind the second horse.

Muskeg, in winning the sixth event, equalled the track record of 1.04 3-5, set by Ellis six years ago, and his victory gave Fitzsimmons his sixth win of the 22-day spring meeting which started last Saturday.

Earlier in the afternoon, the veteran rider from Calgary, Alta., scored on Cherubon Star, Alda's Five to Fun in the second event. Both victories required verification from the photo-finish pictures.

A warm sun beamed down in the throng of 12,811 fans on this first afternoon of the first long holiday weekend of the racing season, and the favorite men-bers who coupled Muskeg and Warrior's Day in the quinella collected $77.30 for each $2. DOUBLE PAID $37.80

Tarpon Run and Five to Fun, second and third, paid $21.80 in the daily double.

Thursday, Aldo and Lou Polonick's Charley's Pak gave Ron Turcotte his second win of the afternoon, by coasting through on the rail to extend Bo - Tesk Farms' Canadian Shield by a neck in the featured Kenmore Purse before 3,714 fans.

Mrs. M. Fishman's Blessat was third, some four lengths be-hind Canadian Shield.

The quinella on Charley's Pak and Canadian Shield returned $16.6s.

View Hollea Farms' Ma Tanis was the first race of the afternoon and returned $12 for $2 win tickets. Coupled with J. C. and J. H. McKinnon's Molly Brown, 20-1 winner of the second, the pair returned a substantial $407.70 for each $2 wagered.

Wine Hogsheads, Oxen Yokes and Wagon Wheels Are Made Into Furniture

STE. THERESE DE BLAINVILLE, Que. (CP)—Sometimes the only tools of Joseph Hamelin's trade are a wine hogshead, a wagon wheel or oxen yokes.

More often it is a piece of vintage Quebec furniture.

In any case, mild-mannered Hamelin has become one of Canada's most exciting creators of distinctive Canadian furniture.

He is a designer and cabinet maker who wanted to be a baker and even entertained ideas of becoming a priest.

His creations are annually acclaimed "purely Canadian" by the National Furniture Exhibition. Mr. Hamelin not only designs his own furniture—for Thibault Limited at nearby Ste. Therese—but duplicates early Canadian furniture. "He has successfully blended the household tastes of both early French and English settlers," a report on his work said.

To achieve his goal, Mr. Hamelin blends many artistic talents. He is skilled in oil painting, wood and leather carving, and in handling copper.

His creative talents come into play when he moulds chairs and tables from wine hogsheads, or converts wagon wheels and oxen yokes into living room fixtures.

Wooden platters, common in colonial days, and decorated with hand-carved figures, become wall decorations under his touch. Old sabots become wine bottle holders and fancy icecube pails are shaped from wooden buckets early settlers used to gather maple sap.

Mr. Hamelin has copied early Canadian clothes cabinets, bureaus, beds, library racks and hundreds of household pieces. Last year, he travelled 3,000 miles in Quebec gathering vintage furniture to duplicate at the Ste. Therese plant.

He started out as a carriage-maker and blacksmith. He was a woodworker in a sash-and-door mill at Lachute Que., and once helped build a cathedral at Mont Laurier.

The urge to design began when he joined a woodworking mill in Ville St. Pierre. Afterwards, he attended evening courses in Montreal to learn cabinet making and designing.

He got his idea to establish a distinctive Canadian style of furniture 25 years ago.

Now, he is purchasing a farmer's 140-year-old home at St. Hermas, his home town, which he and his employer will develop into a museum — to house his creations for posterity.

Mr. Hamelin, also skilled in oil painting, wood and leather carving and copper work, has won acclaim as a designer of early Canadian furniture. (CP Photo)

Britain's First Bunny Might Marry a Canadian

LONDON (CP) — Britain's first bunny girl sipped dry sherry, wriggled her nose and began to talk about husbands.

"I think I'd like to marry an American or Canadian," said 26-year-old Krista Kent, better known in her hometown of Bedford, N.S., as Beverly Ross.

"Englishmen are a bit inclined to ignore their wives."

Krista, with her 36-24-38 figure scantily clad in satin bodice, fluffy tail and rabbit's ears, is the leading bunny at the Bel Tabarin Playboy Club in London's swish Hanover Square.

"It's strictly look but don't touch," Krista said, "I'm just a glorified waitress serving drinks. The club works on the same principle as the American Playboy clubs, although it isn't owned by the same people."

Krista and seven other bunnies were chosen out of 400 applicants. Each girl is guaranteed £20 a week and will probably make another £20 in tips.

LONG HOURS

"I was looking for a job and thought this would be fun." Krista paused and frowned. "I didn't realize how much work there would be. We're on duty from 8:30 in the evening to 4 a.m."

Krista has been in Europe three years. She has just returned from Rome where she modelled and had small parts in three Italian movies.

Her first job after leaving school in Canada was as secretary at the RCMP branch in Halifax. Later she acted in summer stock and worked for a publicity firm in Toronto. Once, in 1957, she won herself a date with Elvis Presley.

Moving on to Montreal she became private secretary to Hal Banks, president of the Canadian branch of the Seafarers' International Union.

Despite her doubts about European mates, Krista is engaged to an Englishman in the night-club business and plans to marry "sometime soon."

Meanwhile, what about awkward passes from bunny-hungry wolves? Krista tossed her strawberry-blonde hair and narrowed her grey-green eyes:

"You can see I'm a pretty big girl—nearly five-foot-eight. I think I can look after myself."

Prime Minister Meets Pearson For Changeover

Concedes Defeat After Service Vote Counted

OTTAWA (CP)—Prime Minister Diefenbaker meets today with his successor, Lester B. Pearson, to arrange a changeover of power to a new Liberal government.

The 57-year-old Progressive Conservative leader announced Saturday he was conceding general election defeat shortly after the results of the armed services voting became known.

The service vote, 70.5-per-cent Liberal, switched two seats to Mr. Pearson's party at the expense of Conservatives and boosted the Liberal total to 130 seats—three short of a majority in the House of Commons.

The Conservative membership was cut to 94 from 96. The service vote ousted Minister Public Peul Martineau in Pontiac-Temiscamingue — the seventh cabinet member defeated in the election—and also swung Ontario's Hastings South riding to the Liberals.

With the service voters finally heard from, Mr. Diefenbaker and Mr. Pearson both announced the Liberal leader's line busy, and sent a telegram of congratulations that in the meantime Rusk and other NATO leaders have been trying to establish a minimum in-pact of the spirit between French President de Gaulle and other NATO leaders.

GIVES GREATER VOICE

The substance of the new concept of the nuclear force seems to be to give the European allies a greater voice in setting up a nuclear weapons against potential enemy targets.

The plan calls for treating as part of the inter-allied force all nuclear-armed forces in NATO which are capable of reaching beyond the immediate battle area in any future war. This is a projection of the U.S.-British multi-national force which grew out of talks in Nassau between President Kennedy and Prime Minister Macmillan at Nassau last December.

The U.S. is putting three nuclear submarines into the Mediterranean already based on the station. Britain is committing its nuclear - capable Vulcan bombers here.

Also under NATO command are other submarine units — mostly aircraft — which are capable of reaching beyond the immediate battlefield. Some, but not all, are stationed in West Germany. They include the new U.S. and French fighter-bombers and Canadian, Greek, Turkish, Dutch, Belgian and West German as well as British elements.

Unless objections arise, the plan is due to be put into effect at a meeting of the North Atlantic Council at Ottawa next month.

The result of such moves, U.S. officials still hope, should be to give European NATO governments a much more realistic understanding of the problems involved in operating the nuclear deterrent force as well as the nature of potential nuclear warfare.

Hope, Burnett, Chamberlain Win Awards

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Bob Hope, Carol Burnett and Richard Chamberlain won top honors Saturday night in the fourth annual TV Guide awards ceremonies.

"I'd like to be a gracious winner but I haven't had the experience," said Hope after his annual Christmas show for U.S servicemen was judged the best single dramatic, musical or variety show on television.

Winners were determined by a vote of 400,000 readers, a spokesman for the magazine said.

Miss Burnett was named favorite female performer. Chamberlain, of the Dr. Kildare series, was the favorite male.

The Beverly Hillbillies was voted the favorite new series.

The whole Clampett clan—Buddy Ebsen, Irene Ryan, Max Baer and Donna Douglas—accepted the award.

Walt Disney's Wonderful World of Color won for best children's series.

Bonanza was named favorite series.

The Tunnel, a documentary about the Berlin wall, won for best single news or information show. The Huntley-Brinkley Report was named best news series.

NDP Chief Calls Second Sheft' 'Electoral Theft'

MONTREAL (CP)—Fernand Daoust, president of the Quebec provisional committee of the New Democratic Party, said Sunday a statement by six Social Credit members of Parliament that they would support a Liberal government was an "electoral theft."

"This is not what the Social Crediters voted for," said Mr. Daoust, defeated as an NDP candidate in Montreal Maisonneuve-Rosemont in the April 8 federal election.

"The 12 per cent of the electorate who supported Social Credit and the 11 per cent who supported the NDP—26 per cent in all—did not vote for a majority Liberal government.

"They are now being robbed. The manoeuvre by, which the six Social Credit members have been brought to pledge their support to (Liberal Leader) Lester Pearson amounts to substituting a majority government for a minority government."

Michael Oliver, national NDP president, said: "It would surprise me greatly if the Liberals had not been talking to these people."

A Social Credit caucus was

Barefooted President Succumbs To Lure of Unusual Sailboat

PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — A bareheaded President Kennedy succumbed on Easter Sunday to the lure of an unusual sailboat. He hitched a boat ride and soon was at the tiller for a 15-minute sail, taking a soaking from salt spray.

The crew rated the wartime PT boat skipper a good sailor and one chuckled over having "ordered the president of the United States around."

Kennedy took his family on an afternoon cruise after they attended a private Easter Sunday morning mass.

It had been a traditional Easter, with the president's wife photographed in her pale pink sleeveless sheath Easter dress and two-year-old Caroline and John Jr., 2, enjoying a fluffy Easter lay bunny and baby chick that were rolling.

The president even took his little daughter for an Atlantic swim off their yacht, the Honey Fitz.

Then, as the yacht was ending a two-hour cruise, a speedy twin-hulled, sloop-rigged catamaran swept in and caught the president's eye.

He stood up to watch it whip past on close run and finally

ALLIES TO GET INCREASED SAY IN NATO FORCE

Rusk Plan Gains Much Support

WASHINGTON (AP) — Formation of an "inter-allied nuclear force" advocated by the United States would give European NATO nations a much bigger voice in selecting atomic weapons targets behind the Iron Curtain, U.S. officials say.

State Secretary Rusk returned last week from consultations in Paris where an expanded plan for the inter-allied nuclear force was developed. It now appears to have gained considerable support.

One obvious purpose of the plan is to force some kind of link—if possible between future French nuclear forces and those being developed in NATO with the U.S. as primary supplier of the nuclear bombs and warheads.

Rusk returned to Washington convinced that when France has built and put independent nuclear force her strategic nuclear planning and weapons targeting should be co-ordinated with weapons deployed by the U.S. and other NATO allies.

Kennedy's personal appraisal during the weekend, U.S. officials believe, that in the meantime Rusk and other NATO leaders have been trying to establish a minimum in-pact of the spirit between French President de Gaulle and other NATO leaders.

Priest Bars Doors to Every Congregation

NEWARK, England (AP) — Rev. Peter O'Dowd locked his congregation in Sunday for the last 10 minutes of his Easter service.

Father O'Dowd, priest of St. Boniface Catholic Holy Trinity Church, finished the 11 a.m. high mass and began a brief evening service. Noticing people moving towards the open doors at the rear, the priest called out:

"I want you to stay. It's an insult to the Almight on Easter Sunday of all Sundays."

Clapping his hands, he ordered the doors closed. Those who had tried to leave returned to their places.

Father O'Dowd finished the special service 10 minutes later and the doors were opened.

Lukens Steel Raises Prices, President Kennedy Sceptical

NEW YORK (AP)—President Kennedy was reported today, to be sceptical on whether the price increases announced by the Lukens Steel Company meet the "public interest" criteria he suggested for the industry.

Kennedy, anxious to head off any general increase in steel prices, held a series of telephone conferences Sunday after Lukens became the second company in the industry to announce price increases on part of its products.

The Wall Street Journal says "the nation's big steel producers, convinced President Kennedy will tolerate selective price increases, are expected soon to seek their first substantial price relief since mid-1958. Indications over the holiday weekend were that their move could start this week."

The Wheeling Steel Corporation announced increases in prices on a number of its products last Tuesday. On Thursday, Kennedy issued a statement on the Wheeling action.

Following Sunday's phone conferences by Kennedy from the holiday White House at Palm Beach, Fla., the Presidential press secretary, Pierre Salinger, issued a statement on the Lukens move. The statement, referring to Kennedy's plea to the industry last Thursday, said:

"The president's statement of last Thursday speaks for itself. The president said that it was important for the industry and the country that overall price stability should be maintained.

"While the statement did not preclude selective price actions up or down, the president did point out strongly the national interest in over-all price stability."

Lukens said a big drop in profits was the cause of its price increases.

W. E. Masterton, vice-president and general manager of Lukens, said the ratio of earnings to sales was down to 2.6 per cent in the first 12 weeks of 1963.

Redistribution Will Likely Raise Political Hackles

OTTAWA (CP)—A problem rarely mentioned in the recent election campaign promises to raise the hackles of politicians both in and out of Parliament soon after the new House of Commons meets.

It is redistribution, the redrawing of federal constituency boundaries in line with shifts in population recorded in the 1961 census.

Redistribution is undertaken after every decennial census. Before the opposition parties pressed the Diefenbaker government to legislate that the 1961 figures were compiled, they were barely ready before the 1962 election got under way and the question seemed to be side-lined in the tangled political times leading to this year's election.

After the 1961 census, a parliamentary committee on which sat MPs governing Liberals had a majority, amalgamated Lake Centre with the constituency of Moose Jaw, then held by Ross Thatcher, a CCF MP whose harbs stung the Liberal government. Thatcher left quit the CCF, joined the Liberals, and now is Saskatchewan Liberal opposition leader.

When he became national Conservation leader in 1956 and

Police Break up Prayer March, 30 Negroes Arrested

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP)— About 30 Negro demonstrators were arrested Saturday when police broke up a prayer march near the business district.

Negro leaders had said earlier they planned a march on the city jail, where Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. is being held for leading a similar demonstration Friday.

Led by three unidentified Negro ministers, hundreds of persons joined the march. Estimates placed the crowd at more than 1,500.

The demonstrators left a church, walked about two blocks and were cut off by motorcycle patrolmen. The marchers moved through an alley and were headed off by police.

Many of those in the crowd appeared to be bystanders, mostly Negro. They sang and shouted encouragement to the demonstrators.

The ministers then led their following through a field. They again were cut off by policemen.

When asked if they had a permit to parade, a leader said, "We're just walking."

They were told they were under arrest on charge of disturbing the peace.

Police packed demonstrators into patrolwagons alike into waiting paddy wagons. There was standing room only in the wagons and many persons were hauled away in police cars.

Police dogs were brought up to help control the milling, shouting, cheering crowd.

Police clashed briefly during the demonstration with a television cameraman and a reporter for the New York Times. Some one threw a rock through a shield on a police motorcycle. Earlier, Negroes sat among white persons at Birmingham's largest downtown church. The First Baptist, but were turned away from several other churches.

One Negro man and four Negro women were admitted to Sunday.

SOCREDS WILL HOLD CAUCUS MINUS CAOUETTE

Business Reasons Keeps Him Away

QUEBEC (CP) — The newly-elected Social Credit members of Parliament, minus their deputy leader, Real Caouette—will hold a caucus in Ottawa Tuesday.

The caucus was called to discuss the sudden pledge of support to a Liberal government by six Social Credit MPs, Party Whip Dr. Guy Marcoux said in announcing the caucus Sunday night.

Shortly after the announcement, Mr. Caouette, 47, returned to his home in Rouyn, Que., he will not attend the caucus "for business reasons."

Mr. Caouette, the firebrand orator who led the party to its surprise showing of 26 seats out of 75 in Quebec in last June's election—reduced to 20 April 8 amid National Leader Robert Thompson should have consulted him before asking Dr. Marcoux to be spokesman for the sworn statement by the six Quebec Social Creditors.

Dr. Marcoux said Saturday after investigating the statement that three of the six MPs who signed it—Gilles Chatelain, Dorchester; Raymond Langlois, Megantic; Gilles Grenier, Shefford; Lucien Plourde, Quebec West, and Robert Beale, Quebec East.

The statement said the six were prepared to support a Liberal government under Lester Pearson so the country would be able to have a stable government. The six MPs, added to the 130 Liberals elected, would give the Liberals 136 votes in the House of Commons, a majority of the 265 seats in the House.

Mr. Thompson said Friday night from Three Hills, Alta., he had asked Dr. Marcoux and Marcel Lessard, Social Credit MP for Lac St. Jean and caucus chairman, to investigate.

SAYS SIGNERS MISLED

Dr. Marcoux said Saturday Mr. Beale, Mr. Langlois and Mr. Plourde were misled when they signed the statement. He said a telegram had been sent to the governor - general asking that

Will Investigate Rifle Slaying of Estranged Pair

OTTAWA (CP)—An inquest will be held at a non-judicial time into the rifle slayings of an estranged couple in suburban Nepean Township, the coroner, Dr. Thomas Kendall, said Sunday.

The bodies of Herbert J. Deroulin, 50, and his wife, Marguerite, 46, were found about 11 a.m. Saturday in the basement of Mrs. Deroulin's home by a nurse and a nurse serviceman, Percy Runge.

Dr. Kendall said there was "no question" of "murder and suicide." Gloucester - Nepean police said they believe the double shooting occurred between 8 p.m. Friday and 1 a.m. Saturday. A .32-calibre rifle was found near the bodies.

Neighbors said the couple had been separated for some time and that Mrs. Deroulin had taken in three boarders. They said Mr. Deroulin visited his wife Friday and that a noisy argument broke out.

FOUR ESCAPE

BERLIN (AP)—Four 19-year-old East Germans escaped to West Berlin Saturday night without being noticed by Communist border guards, West Berlin police reported Easter Sunday.

Disarmers Clash With Police, Several Held

Ban-the-Bombers on Last Stage of March

LONDON (Reuters)—Mounted and foot police today administered a heavy baton charge of anti-nuclear demonstrators whose marchings columns forced their way through police cordons in attempt to stage a protest at government offices in Whitehall.

The marchers, who entered London by two routes with their ranks swollen by last-minute contingents, were estimated to number 15,000.

One policeman was reported injured and several were knocked down as the surging bodies crowds fought mounted police and hurled sticks and apples.

Organizers of the four-day, 60-mile walk from Aldermaston, Weapons Research Centre in London ran beside the columns of bearded, guitar - carrying demonstrators shouting "keep calm, keep calm."

People reportedly formed chains along the route of the marchers and after skirmishes the marchers broke through chanting "don't push, don't push."

They marched toward Whitehall singing "I've got a secret," to the tune of "Love a Lassie."

Police earlier had arrested several marchers as they trudged toward London from their night camp at nearby Southall, Middlesex. The marchers then surged through a police cordon near Hyde Park and moved toward Constitution Hill beside Buckingham Palace.

One man travelling a wheeled basket loaded with the pamphlets was arrested and charged with unlawful assembly. Marchers were snapping up the leaflets from persons shouting "get your official secrets here."

CALL REINFORCEMENTS

Policemen lost their helmets and traffic was thrown into chaos at the busy intersection as police reinforcements were hastily summoned.

The line of marchers heading for the government offices became generally orderly again after police gave up their attempts to stop them.

The fighting broke out after police earlier clashed with the campaigners entering the area. Ten arrested several of them after a five minute fight.

The marchers were seen as police and security men clamped down on distribution of a sensational pamphlet urging mass "ban - the - bomb" demonstration in front of government offices later today.

In London, leave was stopped for most of the city's 17,000-man police force and hundreds of re-

Church Bells Ring Out Around World to Mark Joyous Easter

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

All Christendom united Sunday in celebration of the joyous feast of Easter and rejoice in the resurrection of Jesus Christ. Church bells rang out in all corners of the globe. The bells of Rome's 450 churches pealed out at midnight after the signal from the 16-ton bell atop St. Peter's Basilica.

It was also Easter for the 2,500,000 faithful of the Eastern Orthodox communion in the Soviet Union, attended by members of the diplomatic corps, Moscow radio reported.

Communist China's official New China news agency said Easter Sunday services were held in Shanghai, the country's largest city, by both Protestants and Roman Catholics.

A broadcast heard in Tokyo said high mass was said in Shanghai's Zikawei cathedral, with the congregation singing "Alleluia" in unison. High masses were said also at other cathedrals, it added.

In the divided city of Berlin thousands of West Germans streamed into East Berlin for services and the annual Easter parade, while cold winds, cloud and rain kept most holiday-makers under cover.

Forty-five floats rolled by, some not from as far away as San Remo, Italy, while bathing

Jobless Fund Gets Shot to Meet Claims

OTTAWA (CP) — The unemployment insurance fund has received a $25,000,000 shot in the arm to meet claims this month and forestall bankruptcy.

The money was advanced to the fund in the latest Governor-General's warrant, dated April 1 but published today in the official Canada Gazette.

The loan is a maximum amount from which the Unemployment Insurance Commission will be able to draw funds to meet its benefit payments during April. Another loan is expected to be made to keep the fund operating in May.

The insurance fund has been plunging steadily from its 1956 peak of $926,000,000 toward bankruptcy, under the pressure of extended claims and heavy unemployment.

At the start of the year, it held about $70,000,000. By the end of February, it had dropped to $39,400,000. March 31 figures will be announced later this month.

Economists said the fund still contained "several" millions of dollars at the end of March. But they did not expect it to last for longer than a few days.

Police Begin Search for '58 Model Car

OTTAWA (CP)—Police have begun a search for a 1958 model car believed involved in a spectacular crash in which Donnie O'Neil, 26, and John J. Lucik, 40, were killed Sunday.

The two were passengers in a car that careered into a traffic island near Mackenzie King Bridge near downtown Ottawa, then hit a power pole on St. Joseph Blvd. Verina, 34, told police from his hospital bed that he was trying to avoid a collision with the 1958 car.

Witnesses said they saw both cars racing parallel across the bridge before the crash. The second car stopped, backed up the wrecking area, then sped away. Witnesses included two policemen walking across the bridge at the time.

Two Killed in Head-on Crash South of Tweed, Five Hurt in Separate Mishaps

Stark reality—in the form of a double fatality—ended any hopes police in the Quinte district held for an Easter holiday free of serious traffic mishaps early Sunday morning.

Instantly killed in a head-on crash on Highway 37, three miles south of Tweed, were Mrs. Donna Rogers, R. R. 1 Tweed, 20-year-old mother of two girls, and Harold Carleton, 19, son of Mrs. Harry Carleton, Thomasburg.

Seriously injured was Mrs. Rogers' husband, George, 22. He suffered rib, jaw and foot fractures. His condition, believed critical after the accident, was reported improved today at Belleville General Hospital.

It was the first, and worst, of a string of serious accidents in the tri-city district over the holiday.

The Rogers were returning from a movie in Belleville when their car collided with Carleton's automobile on a straight stretch of highway. Both vehicles were extensively damaged on impact.

COUPLES RELATED

Ironically, both couples were related. Carleton's mother and Mrs. Rogers' husband, Reginald Reid of Stoco, were first cousins. Both families had lived in the Tweed-Thomasburg area all their lives.

Mrs. Rogers was an employee of the Nichols' chemical company at Solphide. Carleton received his graduation diploma from the Ontario Agricultural College at Kemptville, Saturday morning. He was employed at a Trenton dairy operation.

Mrs. Rogers leaves two daughters, aged two and three years.

Funeral services for both victims will be held the same day—Tuesday. Carleton will be buried at Thomasburg. Mrs. Rogers at Stoco.

Minutes after the Highway 37 pile-up provincial police were despatched to another two-car crash a few miles away on the Stoco county road, immediately west of the highway.

FOUR MEN HURT

Four men were hurt when cars driven by Leo James Foley of Madoc, and Stanley Courneya, of Stoco, collided atop a knoll.

Rushed to Belleville General Hospital with undetermined injuries was Courneya. Treated on the spot and at a doctor's office in Tweed, were Felix Clement, 66, Stoco, face cuts; Brian Conway Young, Peterborough, bruises. A third passenger, Joseph Mattuel, also of Peterborough, was feared to have a fractured shoulder and a possible lung puncture, but, say provincial police, refused hospital treatment.

Midnight Sunday, a 21-year-old Camillus youth, received head, face and hand cuts when he drove against a rock-cut on Highway 401 near Salmon River bridge. Provincial police said Wallace Edward Jones narrowly escaped serious injury when the car, owned by his father, skidded 400 feet along the highway shoulder, striking the cut at least twice. The vehicle was wrecked.

Jones, recently-out of the Royal Canadian Navy, crawled more than wreckage and hiked a ride to his home. He was found there several hours later by provincial police from Belleville investigating the accident, and taken to hospital for treatment.

Monday morning a road transport carrying 18 tons of frozen fish overturned on Highway 401, three miles east of the Trent River Bridge after a front tire blew out. Its driver, 36-year-old Ferdinand Kucera, of Toronto, escaped injury and damage to the truck was light. However, a portable crane had to be called from Belleville to haul the transport and its cargo back on the highway.

Eastern services at the 2,000-member First Baptist Church, which is several blocks from the city's main business district.

Negroes had announced earlier that they would attempt to attend major white churches in Birmingham in protest of a massive desegregation campaign.

Negroes have attended services in all-white churches before Sunday, but this is the first time they have not been segregated during the services.

There were no incidents.

One Negro man and two Negro women were turned away from the Sixth Avenue Presbyterian Church. An usher met them at the church steps and said:

"You cannot go in. White people built this church. White people worship here. I'm sorry, you cannot go in."

The three Negroes walked away.

Fifteen Head Young Cattle Lost in Fire

Fire starting on the drive floor level of the concrete constructed the large frame barn on the farm of Allan B. McCready, 3rd concession of Sidney township, early Sunday afternoon.

Fifteen head of young cattle were lost in the blaze, but Mr. McCready and neighbors managed to drive about 30 head, 20 of them milkers, from the blazing barn before it was unsafe to enter the building.

The McComb family is well known for its pure bred Holstein cattle.

Cause of the blaze has not been determined although it was stated electric wiring could have been the cause. The loss has not been estimated but will be heavy.

Belleville firemen remained at the scene until 7 p.m. last night to guard against further outbreaks of fire.

FAMILY NOT HOME

Mr. McComb had been in the barn less than an hour before it was razed by Kenneth Bush a neighbor.

The McComb's were not at home, having gone to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Don Thompson for Easter Sunday dinner.

We also learned five mire utes to free the older cattle before it was impossible to re-enter the barn, Mr. Bush stated.

Neighbors and passersby helped to free the cattle and drive them to the barn of Kenneth Jones.

Mr. McComb said when the fire was first noticed it was in the east end of the structure of the concrete floor.

Four years ago a $5,000 addition was built on the barn and the structure was re-wired.

District Roads Were Crowded Over Holiday

Enticed out of doors by bright sun and ideal Easter weather, Quinte district roads were crowded over the weekend as motorists took to the road.

And adding to the congestion on the main highways was the first of the seasonal influx of tourists with cars from the provinces of Quebec and New York passing through the district in numbers.

Traffic on Highway was particularly congested with solid lines of cars being in evidence from both No. 2 and 401 were funnelled onto 502 Highway between Marysville and Wooler.

But not all cars were on the main highways as quite a number of motorists took advantage of the day to enjoy their first ride of the season along the country sideroads.

One Guess to Which Many Are Inclining Is Weld on Sub Thresher Broke Loose

By FRED S. HOFFMAN
AP MILITARY WRITER

WASHINGTON (AP) — After nine months in a shipyard, atomic submarine SSN-593 was almost ready to return to sea duty.

Ahead lay a final day of deep diving for this ultra-silent sister of the United States Navy's nuclear - powered subs, the Thresher.

It was the morning of April 10.

The sky over the Atlantic was grey. A brisk breeze was blowing and the submarine rescue ship Skylark bobbed in the choppy waves.

Below, the Thresher glided through the undersea blackness, her long shape a little like that of the shark for which she was named.

CARRIES 129

Normally, the 4,300-ton submarine carried 83 officers and men. But that day there were 129 aboard, 17 of them civilian technicians from the Portsmouth Naval Shipyard on the Piscataqua River, almost more than 200 miles away.

The 227-foot Thresher, leading ship of a new sub class, had sailed to Portsmouth last July 9. Although in commission less than a year at that time, she was due for some post-shakedown work.

This involved overhaul and installation of some new electronics and sonar gear. To do this, holes were cut in the hull—some a yard wide. The hull was subjected to metallurgical tests designated to locate any weaknesses. Navy officials said none were found.

Now the overhaul was finished and on April 9 the Thresher, escorted by Skylark, had moved out from Portsmouth for last dives.

The first day was calm, she was put through gentle paces, a series of shallow dives.

Now her skipper, youthful-looking Lt.-Cmdr. John W. Harvey, 33, was ready to send her into the crucial deep dives.

GOES DEEP

On April 10, the $45,000,000 craft was scheduled to go down to what the navy called her test depth. It was more than 400 feet, but how much more is a naval secret.

Beneath her was 8,400 feet of ocean — about 1½ miles — to a mud, clay and sand bottom.

Standard operating procedure called for her to maintain contact with the Skylark during her tests. These were due to last six hours.

At 9:17 a.m. EST, Skylark heard from the Thresher over the underwater telephone that normally has a tinny tone. There was no hint of alarm.

That was the last the Skylark —and the world — ever heard from the Thresher.

Every minute from then on, the men on the 200-foot Skylark sent out messages, trying to re-establish contact with the sub.

Every 10 minutes the Skylark dropped light explosive bombs. This was to signal the Thresher that, if she was calling, she wasn't getting through.

PLANES SENT

At 2:15 p.m. navy planes were ordered to the Thresher's diving area about 220 miles east of Boston. Some ships were headed in the same direction and others placed on alert to get under way.

The end of Thresher's test period—3 p.m.—passed and still there was silence from the submarine.

"Later in the afternoon," the navy said in its recapping of events of that day, April 10, "it was decided that it was probable that she had encountered serious difficulties, was missing and possibly was lost."

The first naval evidence was flashed out of the Atlantic by Skylark at 5:50 p.m.—about 5½ hours after the Thresher's last message to Skylark.

The evidence: 10 pieces of cork and a fragment of yellow plastic, both materials used inside subs like the Thresher.

The navy said an oil slick had been alighted — additional confirmatory evidence. Although the Thresher was run by nuclear engines she carried about 17,000 gallons of lubricating oil and fuel for her auxiliary diesel engine.

During the night of April 10 and early hours of April 11 the search fleet grew to seven ships, including destroyers and two submarines. All turned on their sonar gear and radar sets. Lookouts peered out over the ocean. More ships came later.

HOPES RAISED

For a brief moment on the night of April 11, all-but-vanished hope flared when the nuclear submarine Seawolf reported that her sound detection gear had picked up that appeared to be hull noises from a stationary object in the area where the Thresher last was heard from.

But the navy quickly discounted the report and said the Seawolf might have picked up sounds from other ships in the search fleet.

By all the evidence, the Thresher lies crushed in 1,400 fathoms of water. At 8,400 feet down, the pressure is unbelievably terrific—3,696 pounds to the square inch.

The navy holds out absolutely no hope that anybody survived. Admiral believed the men died in a "very, very" short time.

A navy court is inquiring into the tragedy.

The navy is bringing its ocean-exploring bathyscape Trieste from the west coast to take a close look at the wreck—if it ever is found.

Special television equipment, which can be lowered to the ocean floor in pressure-proof shielding, also is being prepared.

One guess, to which many are inclining, is that a weld on the hull of the Thresher might have come loose, admitting torrents of water. If so, she would have plunged to the bottom.

All members of ANAF Unit 201 sincerely regret the passing of Comrade Fred Law and extend their deepest sympathy to his family on their great loss. He had been a member of the executive for a good number of years, and had held office as 1st and 2nd Vice-Presidents and various chairmanships. He always carried out his duties in a quiet and pleasant manner with the utmost efficiency. He was a very interested and hard worker on behalf of the club and will be greatly missed. Especially by the executive and more so by members who were on their first term of office. He was always willing to share his experiences with them and give them sage and sound advice to help them out. He had been hospitalized a number of times over the past few years, but it was little thought at the last meeting he attended he would attend no more. Farewell, old Comrade, may you Rest in Peace.

The Sick Chairman reports the following comrades at the B.G.H. Don McLuskie, George Avery, "Warpy" O'Brien and Mike Phillips. Home are J. McGuire and F. Knowles while Bob Cook is in the County Home Hospital. All are coming along as well as can be expected.

City, District Churches Well Filled Sunday

City and district churches had their heaviest turnout of the season yesterday as church-going folk turned out to hear traditional Easter messages.

Bright Easter sunshine undoubtedly was a contributing factor in the heavy attendance noticeable at churches of all denominations.

Family groups were much to the fore among the church goers with members of the fair sex having the first real opportunity to wear that new hat and other Easter finery.

And even the occasional male seemed to be holding his head high with the assurance that only a new suit can give.

Mrs. James Weller Marks 103rd Birthday Easter Day

TRENTON — Mrs. James Weller of Carrying Place was 103 years old yesterday, Easter Sunday.

It was a week of excitement all around. First of all, "Grandma" Weller was presented with her 12th great grandchild by grandson Jack and his wife. The newest Weller was named Laura after her great-grandma.

All week long plans for the birthday celebration were underway. The clan agreed to hold the party at the home of Mrs. Weller's son, Everett, and yesterday, all afternoon, friends and relatives kept popping in to greet the grand old lady. Grandma listened to birthday greetings over the radio, recalled the good old times with good old friends and, before Everett took her home, watched part of the Detroit - Toronto hockey game on TV. Last year, grandma was in bed with the 'flu for her birthday, but this year she was in fine fettle.

Mrs. Weller is a lifetime Murray Township resident. She is the daughter of the late Daniel and Evelyn Fraser Roberts. Two of her seven children survive and there are 11 grandchildren.

Mrs. Weller is hale and hearty; keeps up with the times by reading the newspaper, with the help of a magnifying glass and gets a lot of enjoyment out of her radio. She is a member of the Anglican Church.

WILL VISIT GERMANY

LONDON (Reuters) — Prince Philip and his 12 - year - old daughter Princess Anne, will fly to West Germany Tuesday for a few days' visit with Philip's relations there, it was learned today.

Murray Reeve Battles Fire To Save Fees

TRENTON — Reeve Douglas McMaster of Murray Township, determined to save his township fire-fighting fees, spent all Saturday afternoon and part of Saturday night fighting a large brush fire near the dump, north of Highway 33. He was assisted by his 13-year-old son, leg-and three neighbors. Their work made calling an outside fire department unnecessary. It costs the township $150 for the first hour of fire fighting by outside departments; $100 for each hour or part of an hour thereafter.

Saturday's fire started at the dump. Area residents have reported seeing people dump large quantities of paper at the dump, set fire to it, then drive away. It has not yet been established that this was the cause of Saturday's fire but the reeve can think of better ways to spend Easter weekend than bashing away at a swamp fire with a broom.

QUIET WEEKEND

TRENTON — Trenton police report a quiet weekend in spite of heavy traffic through the city's main streets.

Saturday night, Michael Polluda, 18, of R.R. 6, Brighton, escaped injury when his car rolled over on the Wooler Road. Damage to the car was set at $400.

Tyendinaga Council to Buy Truck and Plow

An estimated expenditure of $40,000 for construction and maintenance of township roads and bridges for 1963 has been approved by Tyendinaga township council.

In addition the township will also purchase a new five-ton-four-wheel-drive truck with snowplow and wing at a cost of $14,225.67. Payment for the truck is provided for in a reserve for machinery account which was set up in 1960 with amounts set aside each year.

The township has two projects underway under the municipal works incentive program. Two thousand dollars is being spent on roadside brush cutting, while a $1,000 project to renovate the township hall has also been approved.

SAME COMMITTEES

Council committees are the same as last year: The Works Committee is comprised of Deputy Reeve Sidney Fitzgerald as chairman with Eugene Whalen and Lorne Chatterton Long. The Finance Committee is composed of Bernard O'Sullivan, chairman, with Delbert Harvey and Reeve Long.

In February the township entered into a formal agreement with the city of Belleville for fire protection, policing, finish equipment and personnel to extinguish fires in the township. A similar agreement is in effect with the town of Deseronto to protect the eastern side of the township.

KILLS IN-LAWS

BEAUVAIS, France (Reuters)—Polish-born farm worker Albert Lewkowicz, 47, went to Easter lunch with his wife's family Sunday and shot and killed his father-in-law mother-in-law and brother-in-law, before going home and hanging himself, police said.

Those Hockey Playoffs

The federal election having been held, only one matter of business needs to be resolved before Canadians can turn their minds to important things, like the planting of gardens, the trimming of lawns and the opening of the fishing season.

We refer, of course, to the annual controversy as to which is the best professional hockey team in the world.

This question is now in the process of being answered and even devotees of the editorial page may have noticed some reference to the matter further back in the pages of this paper.

We have an uneasy feeling that the sports department may labor under the illusion that what goes on in the hockey arena is no business of ours and that any comment on this matter on this page would be an unwarranted interference in the affairs of a friendly but sovereign department. Nevertheless, taking the whole world for our sphere of interest, we shall take a look at the Stanley Cup playoffs.

The first conclusion which we should like to present for our readers' consideration is that if all hockey players were Mr. Robert Hull, hockey would be tremendously more exciting than it already is. Our opinion of the so-called experts who pick the stars on the television broadcasts has never been high, and was never lower than when Mr. Norman Ullman was picked above Mr. Hull following the deciding game of the Detroit-Chicago series. Mr. Hull, as any person who can see a foot in front of his face with bifocals could tell without noticing, was worth any four players on the ice and the fact that he played in a losing cause did not diminish his stature one bit.

Mr. Hull, of course, is handicapped by the way they play the game these days. It is perhaps just as well that the rules have been changed. Without being forced to carry his excursions extra baggage, in the form of one or two enemy players, Mr. Hull could make the National Hockey League a farce.

The player who comes closest to matching his attributes is Mr. Frank Mahovlich of the Toronto Maple Leafs, but he is not equipped with Mr. Hull's overdrive and reverse, and has an entirely unsatisfactory substitute for these a governor which keeps him in second for one minute and forty-five seconds of every two-minute stint. Obviously not an acceptable alternative to the Point zone product.

Mr. Hull's closest rival in our esteem, and ranked above him by all the experts, is Mr. Gordon Howe from the prairies, who plays a game as conservative, but as solid, as the prairie vote. All Mr. Howe does well is skate, stick-handle, shoot, body-check, body-check, rag the puck, dig the puck out of the corners, plant himself immovably in front of the goal and score—but while he may do some of these things more effectively than Mr. Hull, he does none of them so spectacularly.

The difference between Mr. Hull and Mr. Howe is far more apparent than on a breakaway. Mr. Hull makes his own, winding up at one end and pouring on the steam, bending low and heading for an obviously inevitable crash into the end boards which will toss the remains of his battered and bruised body among the spectators, while suddenly leaning over like grass before a hurricane and boomeranging back across the goal-mouth. Mr. Howe takes a pass, stands up straight like a gentleman, moves one leg languidly in front of the other, yawns, plucks the puck from where he has it tucked between his toes, puts the trigger on the rifle disguised as a hockey stick and casually deposits the puck in the net or on the stick of a cruising teammate. As the television cameraman gives one a wider view of the ice one sees with amazement that everybody else, for some reason or other, has been skating in one place while this lazy performance went on.

Add the thinking man's hockey player, Mr. David Keon, and one would have a line which would cause more havoc in an arena than the hydrogen bomb.

But the Stanley Cup hero's role will probably be won by somebody whose main asset in a hockey arena is the possession of as many elbows as a centipede has knees and the tenacity of four dozen bulldogs. More's the pity.

World-wide interest has been created in a "body scanner" developed at the Ontario Cancer Institute. The sensitive instrument, which helps doctors detect cancer in various parts of the body, was developed with the help of funds from the Canadian Cancer Society. A contribution to the Society will help support almost a hundred research projects.

Since 1947 the Canadian Cancer Society has contributed $11,400,000 for research and research facilities. Almost all of this money comes from voluntary donations to the Society's annual appeal for funds.

Must Educate for Leisure

Hamilton Spectator

Young people are told with increasing frequency that if they want to get a good job in the world of tomorrow they must get a good education today.

It should be pointed out, however, that in a future technological world there will be no cast-iron guarantees of employment as we now understand it. Outrageous though it may seem to all our traditional attitudes, education must increasingly emphasize the wholesome use of leisure and the development of a wider social and intellectual consciousness rather than one now almost exclusive aim of "working for a living".

At his press conference the other day Premier Robarts spoke of the U.S. youth employment opportunities bill which he hoped would pass both Houses before Easter.

"One million of our youth are out of school and out of work," the President said, "creating an explosive situation in nearly every community."

He added that the bill "would put these youths to work, and their minds, in our parks and forests, manning our hospitals and juvenile institutions, and developing skills and work experience which will help them in later life."

These words deserve careful study. There is no promise here of "full employment" opportunities, of the traditional ambitions of youth being inspired by the prospect of long and successful careers. Rather the promise is of a country speaking, daisy-picking, bird-watching and minor oratory duties, anything rather than empty idleness which needs breath to meet headon the rapidly developing situation not of established "unemployment," but of enforced leisure.

Modern technology is swiftly shedding man-labor. New jobs are not being created at a sufficient rate to absorb all those involuntarily idled. Nor are there enough jobs for schoolleavers. At present, 1,250,000 leave school in the U.S. at year's end. This number is expected to increase rapidly, to double in a decade and to go on increasing with the population. That situation does not need underlining.

The U.S. is not alone with this problem. All advanced industrial nations are, or shortly will be, afflicted with it. Among Canada's unemployed there are about 77,000 teenagers. In Britain recently, education authorities asked students in the equivalent of grade thirteen to refrain from school another year and do the course again rather than leave and add to the unemployed.

In the meantime, production expands — Canada's increased more than seven per cent last year.

This is the problem of the age. It involves the social, political, psychological and economic future of everyone. Above all, it is intensely human, for on a satisfactory solution depends the happiness of all.

How Jury System Began

— By R. St. George Stubbs In the Winnipeg Free Press

Trial by jury, as we recognize it today, was first introduced in civil cases, as an alternative to trial by battle, which was never popular in England; and, in criminal cases as a substitute for trial by ordeal.

Judges went to strenuous lengths to introduce the jury system into England. In the criminal side, in order to compel an accused to go to trial before 12 of his neighbors, they presented him with the alternative Peine Forte et Dure (trial with strong and hard pain), a form of procedure legalized by a statute of Edward III. This brutal procedure was not abolished until the end of Queen Anne's reign. Let us look at how it worked.

In 1685, Major Strangeways was charged with the murder of his brother-in-law. When he refused to plead, Chief Justice Glynn ordered: "That he be put into the mean house (the press room) stripped naked, laid upon his back with his body bare, that his arms be stretched forth with a cord the one to one side, the other to the other side of the prison; and in like manner his legs be used; and that upon his body be laid as much iron and stone as he can bear and more. The first day he shall have three morsels of barley bread, and on next he shall drink thrice of water in the channel to the prison door, but of what he will, saving running water and this shall be his punishment till he die."

Strangeways was a man of iron constitution. He suffered indescribable agonies while undergoing this torture; until his friends, who gained permission to lay more and more weights on his chest and crushed him to death to end his torments.

Why did Major Strangeways refuse to plead to the country, that is to agree to a trial by jury? Because if he had been convicted of a felony before a jury, his lands and goods would have been forfeited to the Crown. By refusing to die under torture he was able to save his property for his family.

For several centuries juries were but the rubber stamps of the judges. They were expected to return a directed verdict. They were liable to fine or imprisonment for disobeying and do as they were directed. If they took longer to reach a verdict than the judges thought necessary, they were loaded into carts and driven through the streets to endure jeers, and sometimes the violence of the populace for failing to do their civic duty promptly.

* * *

To serve as a member of a jury, in Tudor times, could prove a bitter experience of a man of integrity. In 1554 (four years before Elizabeth I was crowned) Sir Nicholas Throckmorton was tried for treason. He asked that a witness, who was present in court, be called in his behalf. Denied this request, he demanded to know of his judges: "Am I to be put so well contented to hear truth for me as untruth against me?"

His manly conduct impressed the jury and it acquitted him.

This succinct note appears in the report of the case in the state trials: "The Court being dissatisfied with the verdict committed the Jury to prison."

Four jurymen submitted and they had offended in not doing as the judges had directed. Made of stern stuff, the other eight declared that "they had done all things in the matter according to their knowledge and with good conscience, even as they should answer before God at the day of Judgment."

"The lords taking their words in evil part," says the report, in the Star Chamber, "did adjudge worthy to pay excessive fines." When these fines were not paid, they themselves, after eight months. Their treatment had a restraining effect on the jury that tried Sir John Throckmorton who was found guilty upon the same evidence upon which his brother had been acquitted.

Schools Use Time Clocks

Vancouver Province

Tokyo's schools are adopting a time clock system to help bring their students in and out of school.

The parents like it because they can be sure their children are not dawdling, and the schools find that it not only helps establish more punctuality but keeps them from loitering after school.

The time clocks were first introduced at a Tokyo commercial high school to give the girl students a taste of working atmosphere. We suppose the haste to leave school grounds after punching the clock shows a perfect adjustment to the workaday world.

Happily, it seems unnecessary to adopt this westernization back from the Japanese.

Vancouver school children tend to be punctual — only 200 late daily among 64,000 pupils for February, about half of one per cent.

Western school teachers have their own ways of dealing with latecomers.

We remember a high school teacher who demanded a written excuse in the — problems of tardiness.

Time clocks might be more habit-forming. In the event approach doubtless did more to turn out literate graduates.

Thought for Today

Ottawa Citizen

It has long been obvious that Britain cannot continue indefinitely to support its heavy trading deficit in the Canadian market. Excluded from Europe it will ask the chance to sell more here or, alternatively, it will buy less from Canada. Has the Canadian Government thought about this in its long quarrel with Britain?

Strictly Personal

Law-Making Has to Be Consistent

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

Mentioning the man who wanted to suppress certain "dangerous" books, as I did the other day, reminded me of the curious way in which people live in intellectually air-tight compartments.

What I mean by that cumbersome phrase is easily seen in the people who read the "crackdown" on what they consider to be offensive literature: they want the law interposed in this area.

But, in other areas, they complain that there are already too many laws. They are worried about expanding governmental power. They insist that citizens should be left alone to pursue their own pleasures and profits.

Thus, the word "government" to them exists in separate airtight containers. When parents, they are for something, they want no government interference with it; when they are against something, they promptly demand that we pass another and stricter law to cope with it.

We can see the same process operating in the current scare in the area of government spending. Those who protest most loudly against increased expenditures in the civilian sector do not make a murmur of protest about the increased government spending in the military sector.

The fact is the plain fact that 75 per cent of the U.S. federal spending goes to pay for past, present and future military needs. We could spend twice as much on the domestic front without feeling it, if the military budget were made up in a rational world.

Moreover, it is historically accurate to point out that if we are really worried about the armament control," the way most governments take over it is by maintaining a state of military emergency until it becomes an accepted way of life. Most of our extra taxes today are a legacy from World War II, which have never been repealed.

What we, may or may not need for "defense" is a matter of speculation and controversy. But hardly any of the vocal opponents of government spending dare to question our military appropriations; the government, therefore, has a blank cheque on this, and its authority is unquestioned.

We cannot have lower taxes and fewer laws at the same time. We cannot impose restraints upon the government's domestic spending while at the same time acquiescing in its astronomical arms budget. We cannot do this without contradicting ourselves and become ineffectual. To keep one's ideas in such air-tight compartments is eventually to die from psychic suffocation.

To Your Good Health

Glaucoma an Increase In Eyeball Pressure

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, M.D.

Dear Dr. Molner: What is glaucoma, and what causes it? Can anything be done for it? — C. A. R.

I'm glad you asked, because your questions give me a chance to relate some facts that can save the eyesight of many people.

Glaucoma is an increase in pressure inside the eyeball. As the pressure grows, it not only interferes with vision (it can narrow the field of vision, make it foggy, with halos around lights and so on) but in some cases it causes a dull ache in eyes or the head.

Untreated, it can result in blindness. It is probably the greatest single cause of blindness.

But when treated — that's a happier story. Very often glaucoma can be controlled. The earlier the treatment, the better. Various drugs, drops in the eyes, changes in the diet, steps to reduce tension, sometimes surgery to relieve the pressure — all of these methods and combinations of them are saving people's eyes every day.

Glaucoma is a disease that isn't often found until after the age of 40, or sometime quite a bit later. Women are affected more often than men.

The cause isn't always known. It may be a secondary result of some other eye ailment, or there may be no visible reason.

Glaucoma may come on suddenly and painfully, as an acute case. It may deceptively creep up gradually and quietly, with few or no symptoms you can recognize.

But always the pressure in the eye is too high, which gives us our surest warning. A little instrument called a tonometer can measure this pressure. Once used only by eye specialists, the tonometer is more and more becoming standard equipment of other doctors. When a case is discovered, it is time to consult an eye specialist at once.

Dear Dr. Molner: Three months ago I gave birth to a healthy baby. Now my hair is falling out. Is this common? — A. P. C.

I wouldn't say common, but it is far from unknown. In such cases, the hair grows back again normally after a time and without treatment.

Dear Dr. Molner: I'm 19 and terrified about my condition, but am too worried to see a doctor.

For a year now I have suffered from pimples on my face. I've taken medicine which helps temporarily.

I'm wondering if it is something I'm eating and what I can do to get rid of them permanently. I also crack a thick, white mucus-like vaginal substance. How can I correct this? — M. H.

Come now let's get unterrified. You're having troubles that lots of people have had, and have overcome.

I would venture an opinion that other members of your household have pinworm, too. It's the way the ornary creature survives. One person gets rid of it, and gets it again from somebody else. It isn't from anything you eat.

The problem is outlined in detail in my booklet, "Pinworm, the Commonest Pest." (To receive a copy, write to Dr. Molner in care of The Chicago Sun-Times Syndicate, P.O. Book 196, Dundee, Ill., enclosing 25 cents in coin and a self-addressed envelope.

The real key is to get the whole household treated at the same time. It is not difficult with the new medications, but they aren't available as drugstore remedies, because the drug has to be calculated for each person.

Your mucorrhoea discharge may be from pinworms. They are known to irritate the vaginal tract in some cases.

Mrs. Z. A.: Contrary to modern folklore, there is no evidence that a single bump ever "caused a breast cancer."

Much heart trouble is preventable. Write to Dr. Molner for your copy of his booklet, "How To Take Care Of Your Heart," enclosing a long self-addressed envelope and 25 cents in coin to cover cost of printing and handling.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

In my time, I have sat in doctors' and dentists' waiting rooms as much as any man. And in all that time, I have never seen anybody clip anything out of a magazine. Yet seldom in my life have I ever tried to read an article in a magazine in a doctor's or dentist's waiting room that I didn't find myself skunked, when I turned to page 43, to find the page neatly torn out.

Who mutilates the magazines in waiting rooms? Is anybody ever there alone? I have never been alone in a medical or dental waiting room. There are always two or three or even seven other people there. They are all buried in magazines. I have marvelled at the uncommunicability of the people in waiting rooms. I don't ever recall having spoken to anybody there or being spoken to. In complete silence, they read private woes, and a magazine, we keep our eyes resolutely lowered.

Nobody tears out an article on page 43. Nobody quietly snips out an interesting article or an interesting picture. I, barely breathing, we sit and turn the pages, awaiting the end.

Maybe it is the last one. Maybe it is done out of revenge.

55 Fatalities Across Canada During Holiday

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Fifty-five persons met accidental death across Canada during the three-day Easter weekend, 43 of them in traffic accidents.

It was the highest Easter death toll since 1957, when a record 70 died, including 47 on the roads. Last year, 46 died during Easter, 29 in traffic.

Roads were jammed on the weekend as spring-like temperatures and sunny skies brought out thousands in search of relaxation in Quebec and Ontario.

Only two provinces, Newfoundland and Prince Edward Island reported no accidental deaths, it was indicated in a Canadian Press survey starting 6 p.m. local times Friday and ending midnight local times Sunday.

Ontario with 24 deaths had by far the highest toll. Eighteen persons died in road accidents, one in a fire, one was drowned and a third while hunting and three in various other accidents.

Thirteen persons died in British Columbia, 10 on the roads, one in a drowning accident, one in a fire and one from other causes.

Quebec with only seven deaths was well below its usual Easter weekend toll. Six died in traffic accidents and one person died in a fall.

The survey does not include known slayings or suicides, industrial accidents or deaths from natural causes.

Ontario dead include:

FRIDAY

Robert Holmes, 8, crushed to death by a car accidentally started by a friend in a used car lot in Collingwood,

SATURDAY

Mrs. Anna Bredannat, 76, in a fire in her Toronto home.

Claude Birch, 7, of Welland, drowned in the Welland Canal.

Chester Chmiel, 36, of Brantford, when his light plane crashed into a farmyard near his home.

Mrs. Mary Jane Newell, 72, when struck by a car in Strabroy.

Wolfgang Meenerhardt, 14, shot to death in a hunting accident near Guelph.

Roland Lalonde, 20, of Ottawa in a car crash near Plantagenet, Ont.

SUNDAY

Donnie O'Neil, 28, and John Lucik, 40, both of Ottawa, when their car crashed in Ottawa.

Hazel Carleton, 19, and Donna Rogers, 20, in a two-car crash near Tweed, Ont.

Louis Labie, 22, of Levack, Ont., and Bob Tessier, 21, of Onaping, Ont., in a two-car collision near Sudbury.

Mrs. Yvette Archambault, 48, of North Gower, when her car crashed near Rolphton, 30 miles northwest of Pembroke.

Peter C. Hyde, 19, of Milton, crushed when his car moved forward while he was underneath it making repairs.

CENTRE GETS GRANT

NEW YORK (AP)—The Ford Foundation Sunday announced grants totalling $17,217,000 for the Lincoln Centre for the Performing Arts here and its continuing organizations. The foundation granted $12,500,000 to Lincoln Centre in 1956 and 1957, literity."

HOLIDAY TREATS — Patients at Belleville General Hospital, both adults and children, received Easter flowers and treats, thanks to the Women's Hospital Auxiliary. Auxiliary President Mrs. A. Beeby, (second from right), supervises arrangement of plants and Easter baskets by Debby Shulman, Mrs. Owen Clarke, "Holiday Treats" convener, and Carol Noyes. Easter favors for the children were made by C.G.I.T. groups at Tabernacle United Church and St. Andrew's.

the names of the three he struck from the statement.

Mr. Beaule said Saturday: "I was trapped. I signed a brief to be presented to our caucus.

"I didn't know he (Mr. Perron) would send it to the governor-general.

"I publicly repudiate it."

Both he and Mr. Boutin said they were not present when the statement was sworn by Moise Darabanerz, a Quebec City mortgage broker now in Nassau on business, and witnessed by Alexandre Bertrand, vice-president of the Quebec Social Credit organization.

FEARS HOSTILITY

Announcing the caucus, Dr. Marcoux, member for Quebec Montmorency, said the meeting had been planned for Quebec City, but changed to Ottawa because the population of Quebec City "might be a little hostile" as a result of the signing of the statement.

He said Social Credit MPs, from Quebec City had received many telephone calls during the weekend "with demands to know what's going on."

Complaining that Mr. Thompson had bypassed him in ordering an investigation, Mr. Caouette said:

"No one called me. I should have been consulted first because whether something happens in Quebec or in any other province, I am the next in line."

He said Mr. Marcoux' statement about possible hostility in Quebec City was "illogical," since the six MPs who signed the statement "are still strong Creditistes." (Social Credit-ers).

He said he would support a Liberal government himself if it brings in legislation "to push the economy ahead—not for au-

Rain Badly Needed in Quinte District

The comparative absence of frost this year allowed much of the spring runoff to sink into the ground, but rain is now badly needed in the Bay of Quinte district.

Spring cultivation is now well underway but moisture is said needed to sprout freshly seeded fields and to give meadows, pasture and winter grain a boost.

So far there has been little growth but apparent shortage of feed has already prompted some farmers to turn out their cattle to allow them to forage on last year's dried grasses.

prime minister in 1957. Mr. Diefenbaker promised that the next redistribution would be based on recommendations of a commission, independent of the partisan considerations in a Commons committee.

The Liberals promised they also would turn the job over to an independent commission and mentioned that a similar plan was taken by a former Liberal government in Manitoba.

A Liberal source now says that a Liberal government would proceed immediately in the next Parliament to have new electoral maps drawn up. The smaller groups in the Commons have supported the independent commission plan.

What steeper recommendations are produced by whatever commission is formed, will have to be embodied in legislation to be passed by the House of Commons and Senate.

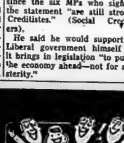
beauties in bikinis delivered in the intemperate weather to adside resorts.

In Switzerland, more than half of the Easter hotel reservations were cancelled in some of the best-known resorts in the Valais Canton, which includes Zermatt where a typhoid epidemic broke out last month.

In a dozen Italian alpine hamlets and resorts, blocked by avalanches, villagers and tourists sat down to Easter dinners carried to them by helicopters.

In New York, nearly 1,000,000 Americans in their Easter finery turned out in sunny weather for the annual parade on Fifth Avenue.

There was a scattering of the bizarre among lady's hats. For instance, one broad-brimmed chapeau featured 40 orchids surmounted by a bird's nest containing one large and two small white doves.



Some women turned up with dogs wearing miniature flowered hats. Canines thus attired included a large white Russian wolfhound and a tiny Mexican chihuahua. Police, guarding against any such signs of "commercialism" or just plain publicity-seeking, eased the pets and their escorts away from the avenue.

Sunrise services, many held outdoors, drew thousands of worshippers in the U.S.

Campbellford Boy to Receive Carnegie Medal, Cash Award

Nearly three years after the event, a Campbellford boy's heroism will be honored tomorrow night. Douglas Shawn Bruce Ellis, 14, of 220 Front St. N., Campbellford will be presented with the Carnegie Bronze Medal for Heroism, a $300 award from the Carnegie Hero Fund, and a scroll from the Province of Ontario. A letter of official notification from Rev. W. A. Cameron, moderator of the Presbyterian Church of Canada will be delivered at the same time.

The awards will be presented during the intermission of a travelogue movie at Campbellford High School, at 8 p.m.

The occasion of the awards was the rescue on June 19 of 1960, of Paul G. Irwin from the Trent River, in Campbellford. Paul, eight years old at the time had been swimming with a friend, and had been caught by the current of the river. He called for help, but his friend could not reach him.

From about 100 yards away, 12-year-old Douglas Ellis heard the call. He ran to the river and jumped in fully clothed. He swam about 50 feet to reach Paul. Unable to pull the smaller boy to shore, Douglas treated water-logged Paul, and called for help.

TWO RESPONDED

Two adults responded. Angus Todd of Campbellford plunged into the water, but was unable to reach the boys. Earl Wood of Campbellford, a non-swimmer, ran to a moored boat on the shore. He threw a paddle from the boat to the boys, hoping they could use it to stay afloat, but the paddle drifted beyond their reach. Setting the boat free, Mr. Wood used it as a paddle, went out and picked up the boys.

Last year, Angus Todd heard about the Carnegie awards, and made application for one for Douglas. The application was approved on January 22 of this year, one of less than 5,000 approved during the 56 years the award has been available.

Presentation of the award will be made by Angus Todd and Paul Irwin. Mayor Tanner of Campbellford, will present the scroll and Rev. A. E. Toombes will deliver the letter of congratulations from Rev. Mr. Cameron. It is expected that a recommendation will be made that Douglas Ellis also be awarded the Queen's Hero Medal.

Police Endure Daffy Weekend

For daffy complaints it was something of a daily weekend on city police records. Among other things Belleville's constables —

Were called to a city hotel in the early morning hours when a night clerk reported an intruder had locked himself in the washroom. Officers heard nothing but the clerk claimed hearing someone breathing on the other side. So, the constables broke down the door. The washroom was empty!

Received a complaint from a Front Street resident who found insurance company stickers plastered to a windshield and wondered what could be done about it. The officers suggested — with good effect — that water and a razor blade!

Investigated the uprooting of 25 feet of fence at Prince of Wales Public School. They were puzzled at first until discovering recent frost heaves in the area had churned up the fence's concrete base!

Added to barking dogs at midnight, people noisily repairing automobiles and celebrating one thing and another while their neighbors were trying to sleep, the holiday weekend made colorful reading in blackand-white police reports.

SEVEN DIE FIGHTING

PORT SHEPSTONE, South Africa (AP) — Seven Negroes were killed and 11 badly injured in weekend tribal fighting near Port Shepstone, 90 miles southwest of Durban.

Teen-Agers Follow the Crowd

DORIS CLARK

DEAR DORIS—So many kids just won't listen to doctors and consequently our country is becoming a living graveyard. Why is it that so many of our teenagers smoke? It's because they are like a flock of sheep: they have to follow the rest of the crowd. The majority of them figure that none of the so-called "dangers" of smoking apply to them.

These dangers are present all the time and yet people just won't acknowledge the fact. Smoking and lung cancer have been proved to be more or less "hung together." If a person is a heavy smoker his chances of getting lung cancer are twice as great as those of non-smokers.

I have an assignment on smoking to do for school so I was wondering if you could perhaps send me a pamphlet on the subject.—ANOTHER TEENAGER.

DEAR TEENAGER—Words of wisdom! I am sending you an article on the dangers of smoking and how to quit.

* * *

CONFIDENTIAL TO ONE MISTAKE—To prevent a second mistake, avoid situations in which petting parties are possible. Write to me for the name of a little book which will help you to understand how boys feel about this. Be sure to enclose a five-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope this time.

* * *

DEAR DORIS—I have been asked by my orphaned nephew to take the place of his father on his wedding day. I am at a loss about what to do or say at the reception.—WONDERING UNCLE.

* * *

DEAR UNCLE—As groom's father you respond to the toast to the groom's mother. But perhaps she, too, has passed on.

If so, your job is to act as a sort of assistant host. You introduce guests to one another, pass the teacups or sandwiches, see that people are comfortable and having a good time.

If you do have to respond to such a toast and would like an outline, write again enclosing a stamped envelope.

* * *

CONFIDENTIAL TO JUST ALONE, SIXTY—Id think your mind was slipping if you didn't want human company. But the best way is to get doing things with others. Then the men you meet will have congenial interests.

* * *

DEAR DORIS—My son (22) has been in trouble with the law and is now in a correctional institution. His time will be up in about two months. He will come home again. He has to look for a job, but who will give a respectable job to a boy who was in an institute of correction? I know he will try hard to make a new start, but where can he begin?

Will some back and face the ever-present again will be hard enough on him, and I am afraid this will be a burden on top of it. So, can you tell me where my boy can go for help?—WORRIED MOTHER.

* * *

DEAR MOTHER—Starting over is tough in a country where many people still see a correctional institution as a place to punish rather than rehabilitate. But there is one Canadian agency which devotes full time to helping ex-convicts get a new start—The John Howard Society. Named after an energetic prison reformer of the 19th. century. For Belleville the address is John Howard Society of Ontario, 159 Wellington Street, Kingston, Ont.

* * *

CONFIDENTIAL TO WORRIED WIFE—Sooner or later your alcoholic husband will have to come to terms with himself, and your problem will be solved by having him Swear on the Bible and so on will not turn the clock. Get in touch with The Alcoholism and Drug Addiction Foundation, 34 Harbord Street, Toronto 5, Ontario.

* * *

DEAR DORIS—I have heard that there is such a thing as a Lone Guide. I live a long way from any group of Guides and am wondering if this sort of thing is for me.—NO COMPANY.

* * *

DEAR NO COMPANY—Any girl between eleven and twenty who can't join a regular company, (through distance, illness, studies or work) can still join in the fun and fellowship by correspondence.

You get a regular Company Letter which gives Guide and Ranger instruction, news about competitions, stories and pictures. You write in your own contributions.

Then once in a while, through a camp meeting or church rally, perhaps, you get to meet other Lone Guides. It's not only national, but international, and leads to wonderful lasting friendships, as well as being a fine way to help others.

Write to The Girl Guides of Canada, 50 Merton Street, Toronto 7, Canada, for more information about joining.

DEAR DORIS—We frequently hear about young girls getting into trouble due to spending late nights in parked cars and dance halls.

I am not surprised if mothers who feel any responsibility at all do not approve of it. Many parents feel that their young daughters under eighteen years of age should not be out after 10 p.m., regardless of what advice others may give. When daughters get into trouble parents also have to suffer.—ONE WHO KNOWS.

DEAR ONE—Is it the lateness of the hour that means trouble? Curfew should depend on where she has gone, who she is with, whether it's a formal dance, a sweater hop or picnic.

The mother who feels responsibility gets to know her girl and her boy friends; helps her entertain them, sometimes, at home; thus makes him feel answerable for her safekeeping. There's room for some mutual trust between Mother, Daughter and Company.

* * *

CONFIDENTIAL TO BAFFLED—There's hope for a gal who can say, as you did, to an arrogant brother-in-law: "If I were your wife I'd hit you with a frying pan!" Show this spirit with your ever-disappearing husband. He has mistaken you for Mrs. Milquetoast.

* * *

SPEAKING of MANNERS

PATRICIA LEWIS

THE DOMESTIC COFFEE BREAK

Many housewives just can't face the day without a steaming cup of coffee to buck them up. Many can't even face the cup of coffee when an impromptu guests goes with it.

Whether visitors are welcome or not at coffee time usually is a subject open to lively debate. Mentioning it can be like opening Pandora's box.

Some homemakers are violently opposed to seeing anything but postman before high noon, and even he is glimpsed only through the mail slot in the door. But there are others who consider a shared cup of morning coffee as a status symbol. If you're popular, they reason, neighbors will beat a path to your door at the first sound of a perk. If not, even the best brand could beat a loud tattoo on a whistling pot and not attract a taker.

We receive letters both pro and con, and viewpoints are strong on both sides of the mocha question. In some communities, visiting over morning coffee is taken for granted. In others, the custom is unheard-of. The one who gets caught in the middle is the woman who is taken for granted and has to go along with a custom that she wishes she had never heard of.

MATTER OF CONVENIENCE

Actually, though, both sides do agree on one point, and that is the matter of convenience. Even those who love to have neighbors drop in for coffee discuss ahead of time the same neighbors drop right out again if something is brewing — like the one coming down with a cold or the reluctant hostess trying to get preparations under way for a luncheon for six.

If the custom is acceptable, good manners should still take precedence over an urge for early - morning togetherness. Let the attitude of the coffee-maker be your guide. If she's sitting in leisurely over a cup and appears to have all the time in the world, that's the signal to take off your hat and be prepared to stay for a long chat and all the brew you can drink.

But if she's downing a quick cup on the run, and indicates between sips that she has to do the marketing, pick Johnnie up at school, sell raffle tickets and put together a PTA report — and all before lunchtime — then it's safe to assume you'd better not linger. Down a cup at the same speed and take your leave on the double.

SHATTERS MORNING

Many readers who say they enjoy sharing morning coffee with a neighbor also confess they'd enjoy it more if the coffee break didn't shatter the entire morning by lengthening into noon, and if it were an occasional, rather than a daily, practice.

Actually, what the custom — if it's to be agreeable — should boil down to this: drop in occasionally, at a time that's convenient, and don't stay too long. Most impromptu social calls properly are limited to twenty - minutes to a half hour. If the morning Kaffeeklatsch is to survive, it should simmer down to the same basic rules of good manners and courtesy.

The zip-front frock has two patch pockets and a hood that ties in a bow at the neck. The hood can also be worn as a cowl back with the bow still tied perkily in front.

You Will Just Have To Have A Party

by Mary Moore

The menu consisted of roast beef, Malabar seafood, spiced currants, egg ring, raw vegetables with almonds, tossed salad, garlic bread, birthday cake, black raspberry ice cream, mints and nuts.

In today's and tomorrow's columns I will describe this food for it is such perfect party fare our habitual hostesses will be eager to try it.

Low-slow roast beef enthusiasts will want to add this statistic to their beef file: a 5-rib, 13½-lb., 4-week hung standing rib roast of beef cost $9.35 (a weekend special). A parte of 3 tablespoons butter and 2 tablespoons dry mustard was spread on the cut surfaces of the meat. It was roasted at 200 deg. Fahr. for 8¼ hours and was perfectly rare and tender. It served 14. Add this beef cut, weight, temperature and time to your beef file card.

MONDAY

Dinner Menu

Baby Beef Liver and Bacon, Hot Chili Sauce, Glazed Parsnips, Asparagus, Celery Hearts and Carrot Strips, Dutch Plum Cake, Pouring Cream, Coffee.

MALABAR SEAFOOD (serves 14):

(This may be served from your chafing dish.)

4 tablespoons butter, ½ Spanish onion, chopped finely, 4 to 6 teaspoons curry powder, 2¼ tablespoons flour, 1 1-3 cups 10 per cent or 18 per cent, cream, 1 teaspoon salt, ⅛ teaspoon white pepper, 1-3 cup lemon or lime juice (Indians use lime with shrimp), 2-3 cup water (or use 1 cup white wine—Sauterne is good — instead of lemon or lime juice and water), 1 lb. fresh frozen scallops, thawed and dried, cut in halves, 1 package (14-oz.) fresh frozen 80th birthday brought forth such ravishing food it must be recorded here.

Some of you will be familiar with Dongs for on occasions I have given you some of her best recipes for she is an expert baker.

In a large frying pan, melt butter, add onion and cook gently until onion is soft but not brown. Add curry, flour, salt and pepper. Mix well. Stir in cream until thick. Add lemon or lime juice and water or wine. Bring to simmering but do not boil. Add all seafoods and simmer until shrimp and scallops are barely cooked. Serve with hot long-grain rice — cook 2 cups in 6 cups boiling salted water covered for 30 minutes.

SPICED CURRANTS:

(This is a 200-year-old English recipe.) 1½ cups light brown sugar, ¾ cup cider vinegar, ¾ cup cooking port, 1 stick cinnamon, 20 whole cloves, ¼ teaspoon nutmeg, ¼ teaspoon ginger, 2 cups dried currants, 1 unpeeled lemon, sliced waferthin.

Simmer together sugar, vinegar, port and spices for 5 minutes. Add currants and sliced lemon. Simmer covered until syrup thickens. Bottle and store, preferably 6 to 8 days before using.

See tomorrow April 16th for the remaining party foods mentioned above.

Weddings

READ — OSBORNE

MARMORA — St. Andrew's United Church, Marmora, was the setting for a pretty spring wedding on Saturday, April 6th, 1963, when Donna Madaline, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George R. Osborne, Marmora, became the bride of Pte. Ross Edwin Read, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Read, of Peterborough.

The double-ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. J. M. D. McLeod, minister of St. Andrew's.

The wedding music was provided by Mrs. McLeod, who also accompanied the soloist, Mr. Richard Staples, as he sang "The Lord's Prayer," and "The Wedding Prayer."

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was lovely in a short gown of organza with fully bouffant skirt over many crinolines which complimented a princess-fitted bodice featuring a delicately hand beaded round neckline. The sleeves were lily-pointed. She wore an Anne Boleyn crown encrusted with seed pearls and bavarian crystal which was caught to a bouffant silk veil. She carried a nosegay of yellow Sweetheart roses and white Shasta 'mums.

Her two attendants, Miss Patricia Spry, maid of honor and bridesmaid, Miss Joan Spry, bridesmaids, wore identical dresses of yellow peau de soie with bell-shaped skirts rounded necklines and short sleeves. Their headdresses featured over the face veils. Their shoes were in matching color. Both carried nosegays of yellow and white Shasta 'mums.

The groomsman was Mr. Ken Osborne, brother of the bridegroom and the ushers were Messrs. Beverley Osborne, brother of the bride and Douglas Hancock.

The reception was held in the Legion Hall in the attractive rooms with the immediate families attending. The bride's table centred on a charming pink linen sheath dress with lace bodice and matching three-quarter length sleeved jacket with elbow length gloves in white and pink shoes and purse matching her dress. Her hat was of matching organza.

The bridegroom's mother assisted, gowned in a turquoise blue sheath dress with matching hat of organza. She wore elbow length white gloves, black shoes and purse and a corsage of Eskimo carnations.

The young couple left on a honeymoon to points east, the bride wearing a white suit dress with matching hat, gloves and black leather shoes and purse. On their return they will reside in Georgetown, New Brunswick, where the bridegroom is stationed with the Navy.

APRIL SHOWERS

April showers may bring May flowers, but they also soak millinery in no uncertain way. They leave a trail of ruined, new straw hats, spotted leather handbags and soggy shoes. The rain in Spain may fall mainly in the plains, but here in Canada, if it's April, you can be sure that it will fall just where you are. Often it's just when you aren't expecting it - great, wet, cloudbursts.

This season's raincoats are smart enough to be really called all-weather coats, suitable for the most gorgeous, sunny, spring day and sturdy enough to rebuff the wettest weather. The "patent leather", shiny look has increased. A pair of those dreadful, plastic things, called rain boots, flat of sole and hot. Why? Because we still can't buy a pair of rain rubbers to accommodate our fat-heeled shoes - that's why.

If you have a question on fashion, just write Pegg Rogers, care of the Ontario Intelligencer, Front St., Belleville Ont.

BUY MANY PAPERS

Sales of foreign newspapers and magazines in Britain increased more than 100 per cent between 1952 and 1963.

Rain hats are plentiful on the millinery front this season. We don't necessarily mean the useful, but hardly attractive, rain bonnet of plastic. There are casual berets, cloches and pillboxes of the softest leather, or fake leather; also water-defiant, bangalines and peterahams.

Umbrellas are flower gardens all on their own this season. We have seen a jazzy one - red roses rampant on a field of white. Fun and practical too!

As From the ankles up, we can feel smart and well- protected this spring. But what do we have on our feet? Yes, you guessed it. A pair of those dreadful, plastic things, called rain boots, flat of sole and hot. Why? Because we still can't buy a pair of rain rubbers to accommodate our fat-heeled shoes - that's why.

The Canadian Press Pres. Replies to Service Criticism

QUEBEC (CP)—Daniel Johnson, leader of Quebec's Union Nationale opposition party, has suggested creation of an "independent and authentically French - Canadian" news agency.

In a 750-word statement issued to the legislature press gallery, he said such a news service was needed to "compete with the Canadian Press service in French."

Mr. Johnson said CP's Service in French lacked "objectivity" in reporting political news and was only a "translation service contributing to maintain French Canada in a condition of inferiority and intellectual colonialism."

The statement criticized a CP report in French April 10 on the first half of the recessed Quebec legislature session which said that three Union Nationale motions had been intended to embarrass the government. The statement described this as "partisan comment."

The statement added that most of the time CP reports are distributed in English even when they concern statements made in French and then are retranslated into French. This applied to statements by General de Gaulle and even some Quebec figures, said Mr. Johnson.

He said events are presented to Quebec newspaper readers through the eyes of foreign correspondents who are "strangers to our culture."

"The daily fare of French-language readers and listeners is a language of translation, almost always hasty and awkward. It is one of the principal causes of deterioration of French in Quebec."

Mr. Johnson said French-language press organs had become vehicles of British and American propaganda. French Canada should have its own news agency with French-Canadian correspondents in other countries with which there are close ties. He suggested Quebec cultural and national groups study the question.

QUEBEC (CP) — A-P. Mercier, president of The Canadian Press, replied Friday to sweeping criticisms of the national news association's French service by Daniel Johnson, leader of Quebec's Union Nationale opposition party.

"It is unfair and inaccurate to describe CP's Service in French as a mere translation service," said Mr. Mercier, vice-president and general manager of the Quebec dailies L'Evenement and Le Soleil.

"Since the start of Service in French, as much news in original French as possible has been obtained to avoid what is called double translation. This effort has been increasingly successful and it is untrue, as Mr. Johnson said, that statements by President de Gaulle are translated by CP's service in French from English translations. Statements by President de Gaulle are distributed in original French.

"The same is done with other official statements and documents when French texts are available.

"Major parliamentary and federal government news is written in French; the Quebec legislature is reported in French; and French - language newspapers which are CP members contribute their local news in French.

"There will always be translation of news from English to French and from French to English in any Canadian service but Mr. Johnson has repeated misinformation about the work of CP on behalf of newspapers published in the country's two languages.

"I have said publicly before that it is nonsense, not to say pure imagination, to suggest that news from CP published by French-language papers is British- or American-slanted. I repeat this. CP's allied agencies, Reuters and The Associated Press, are world news services operating in many countries and languages. Their employees are of many nationalities."

"The Canadian Press is a Canada-wide co - operative of more than 100 daily newspapers. Since it started in 1917, the French - language papers have always been strong in its development. In 1951, after some years of study, the French-language members of The Canadian Press joined together to provide the service in the French language. I think the development of this service is something of which the French-language papers can well be proud."

Pope on Sunday Wished World "Good Easter"

By EUGENE LEVIN

VATICAN CITY (AP)—In 27 modern languages and ancient Latin, Pope John on Sunday wished the world a "Good Easter." He called on Christians everywhere to persevere in the search for brotherhood.

He presented his greetings from the balcony of St. Peter's Basilica before a vast throng estimated by Vatican sources to number between 300,000 and 500,000 persons.

The 81-year-old Pontiff's plea backed up the peace campaign highlighted by his encyclical "Pacem in Terris" (Peace on Earth), issued Wednesday.

A warm noon sun flooded St. Peter's Square as the Pope, sitting on a gilt throne placed on the central balcony, proclaimed the resurrection of Christ:

"Christ is risen: Everyone and everything should be a reflection of His light: Man and the family, the laws and the customs and the various forms of living in common to the nations . . .

CALLS FOR FAITH

"Dear children. Persevere in the faith of Jesus Christ. Never do anything at all that could be opposed to His gospel: This could give pain to your brothers, disturb their conscience, or reject their just aspirations."

The vast crowd that spilled out of giant St. Peter's Square into adjoining streets was assembled for the Pope's usual holiday blessing, "urbi et orbi" —to the city of Rome and to the world. A European television hookup carried the event to almost every Western European country.

Pope John, smiling and speaking in a firm voice that did not show the physical strain of the many religious ceremonies of the last week, first gave his greetings in Italian: "Buona Pasqua." (Good Easter). The French "Bonne et joyeuse fete de Paques" (Good and Joyful Easter) followed. Then came "A happy blessed and merciful Easter to all" in slow enunciated English.

Each time he uttered a greeting he received applause from different sections of his immense audience.

The Pope did not take part in the major Easter mass celebrated inside the basilica earlier. He said mass in his private chapel with only a few cardinals and close members of his household present.

ALL FESTIVE

All was festive in the square. Thousands knelt on the sun-warmed cobblestones as the Pope raised his voice and hands to impart his blessing to Rome and the world. Loudspeakers carried his chant across the square.

Then 500 doves, symbolizing the peace of Easter, were released above the Bernini Colonnade. They fluttered and swung in the brilliant sunshine, scattering in every direction. Voices and clapping swelled to a roar from the throng.

Pope John's 900-word speech was his second address in less than 24 hours. His annual Easter radio message to the world was broadcast Saturday night. In that speech he said he was aware that the achievement of peace will not be easy, but is possible.

"It is true that nothing is easy and we do not hide this fact from ourselves," the leader of the Roman Catholic Church said. "But with the help of God and with a sincere tribute of subjection to Him, true progress in brotherhood and peace is possible."

GOOD START MADE

Pope John said a good start had already been made and that further progress could come through an end to civil strife within nations, through mutual relations among nations and through "an end to suspicions, misunderstandings and threats."

His words were carried by radio around the world on the eve of celebrations of Easter, feast of Christ's resurrection. He broadcast his 1,900-word message a few hours before the midnight Saturday pealing of the bells of Rome's 450 churches, heralding the arrival of Easter morn. Organs and bells have been silent since Holy Thursday to symbolize mourning for the death of Christ on Good Friday.

In recording the speech for broadcast, the Pope looked rested and his voice sounded firm and clear.

Pope John said his encyclical, Pacem in Terris (Peace on Earth), issued three days ago, was dedicated "to the right ordering of society as a means of achieving the most precious benefit of peace."

Ann Landers

Ageing Romeo Proves Adage No Fool Like an Old Fool

ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANN LANDERS—When are you going to get smart and give people some practical, down-to-earth advice they can live with?

Why not be honest and tell the young men who write that they are nuts to get married until they are 40. And then, they ought to marry a woman who is at least 10 years younger (20 years younger is better yet.)

I made the usual boner. I got hooked when I was 22. By the time I was 32 I knew I had made a big mistake. But being a gentleman, I hung around another ten years until the kids were raised. Then I dumped the old lady.

One year later I married a doll who is 18 years my junior. It cost me $60,000 to make the switch but it was worth every penny.

If you are honest Ann Landers, you will admit in your column that all first wives should be shot when they reach the age of 40.—SECOND TIME AROUND.

• • •

DEAR SECOND TIME AROUND—Every few days I get a letter from some middleaged Lothario who mistakes the slowing up of his sex drive for the death rattle. He then must prove to himself (and to the world) that he has lost none of his vim and vigor so he starts chasing around with a chick young enough to be his daughter.

These restless neurotics who want to automatically shoot their wives at 40 should consider saving the last bullet for themselves.

Read the next letter.

DEAR ANN LANDERS—Please forgive the looks of this letter. The ink is a little smeary but I spilled some bourbon on it. I know you don't care for drinking, but when I tell you why I am a little loaded you won't be so hard on me.

I was married for 28 years to a fine woman. She helped me build a business from the ground up. I don't know how she found the energy to run our home, have four children and be my right hand in the business, too, but she did. She even took care of my sick father until he died.

Three years ago a well-shaped, lively girl came to work for me. She had been married and was in the process of getting a divorce. I was flattered by her attention and soon we made plans to see each other out-of-town on weekends. Then we began to go out together right in town.

She made me feel young again. It was as if I had discovered a new world. Something must have snapped in my head because one day I decided to ask my wife for a divorce so I could marry this 27-year-old.

Everybody was shocked. My children told me I was crazy. Our friends all sided with my wife. All she said, was "If this is what you want you should have it."

I had to give my wife plenty—that's the law out here—but I was sure it was worth it.

My new wife and I took a 3-month honeymoon. By the time we got home I was sick of her. The sex attraction was gone. She seemed to go completely dead.

I know now I should have stayed with my comfortable old slippers. These new shoes are not for me. I'm ashamed to admit I was such a fool. I've wrecked my life, broken a good woman's heart, lost the respect of my children and have earned the title of —JACKASS OF THE CENTURY.

• • •

DEAR JACKASS—I can add nothing to your letter. You've said it all.

And now—just a word of advice: Millions of people have looked for a solution at the bottom of the bottle. No one ever found it there.

• • •

shouted, "Any chance of getting inter?"

The three men and three girls aboard the Pattycat said later they had run their boat as close to the Honey Fitz, joking about giving Kennedy a ride.

Mainzy, though, the girls just wanted a closer look at the president. And, they got it. "I was just flabbergasted," said 24-year-old Toni Briant, when she realized Kennedy wanted to come aboard.

"The girls were screaming and squealing so I wondered how he kept a straight face," said 22-year-old crew member Charles Graves, a pre-dental student at Palm Beach Junior College.

A ladder was put over the side of the Honey Fitz, Kennedy donned a tan windbreaker, took off his shoes and promptly boarded the sailboat with his friend and wartime PT boat buddy, Navy Undersecretary Paul Fay.

There wasn't enough room on the sailboat, so the three girls temporarily were transferred to the Honey Fitz.

The 27-foot Pattycat was skippered by Paul Lundenberg, 28, a West Palm Beach boat designer and builder. Graves and the other crew member, Dr. Ivan Schmidt, a West Palm Beach surgeon, joined in raising Kennedy a real good sailor. They said he seemed "absolutely fascinated."

He took orders just like anyone else aboard a boat, said Schmidt.

MOSCOW (AP) — Pravda carefully deleted rebukes to the Chinese Reds from its reports Sunday of the Finnish Communist party congress in Helsinki. The Communist party newspaper, apparently adhering to a compromise line - fire agreement between Moscow and Peking, reported only the Finnish Communists' strong statements of support for the policies of Premier Khrushchev.

inforcements were called in to control the march of 15,000 campaigners.

The arrests today came as police closed on the marching column to confiscate copies of a pamphlet that gave details of British civil defence plans in event of a nuclear attack.

IN SHOPPING CART

A fight broke out as officers surrounded a marcher wheeling a supermarket shopping cart filled with pamphlets. After a short struggle the man and several marchers were taken away in a police car.

Thousands of leaflets were handed out by the marchers shouting "Get your official secrets here."

In central London, thousands more demonstrators arrived by chartered buses and private cars to join the end-of-march demonstration.

Security officers and plainclothesmen mingled with the disarmers nearing the end of the annual four-day, 80-mile trek from Aldermaston weapons research station to London.

A political storm brewed over the alleged serious breaches of security in the pamphlet signed "Spies for Peace" and distributed among the marchers.

Home Secretary Henry Brooke today was quoted as calling the pamphlet "the work of a traitor."

CONFISCATE BOOKLETS

Police swooped on the line of marchers and confiscated hundreds of pamphlets when they first appeared, but Peter Cadogan, international secretary of the militant Committee of 100, said his group was publishing an additional 15,000 copies of the anonymous document.

He denied his committee, which shares leadership of the march with the Campaign for Nuclear Disarmament Committee, was responsible for the original.

"But now this information has been made public I regard it as our duty to break the gag which the government has put on our newspapers and tell the public as much as we can about these secret plans," he said.

Security officers, pushed by government officials amid almost universal criticism of additional security precautions in today's British press, were reported checking hundreds of persons in civil defence and other organizations who might have had access to the pamphlet's information.

Scotland Yard said about 1,000 persons—from top-ranking government leaders to telegraph operators—had access to the booklet.

REDS TO BROADCAST?

An unconfirmed report said Moscow radio would broadcast the contents of the pamphlet today.

The Soviet embassy in Kensington, the west London suburb from which some copies of the pamphlet were mailed, told The Times: "We did not receive a pamphlet. We saw something about it in the newspapers."

The pamphlet described underground control centres where, it said, regional governments offices would be set up after a nuclear attack. It listed locations and gave emergency phone numbers.

One of the alleged secret sites, on the line of the Aldermaston march was "invaded" Saturday by demonstrators who broke through a police cordon to plant disarmament banners on bunkers and staged a 20-minute sitdown in front of bunker doors.

Sunday, the marchers tramped through Windsor, where the Queen and Prince Philip were spending the Easter holiday at Windsor Castle, and handed castle authorities a "human rights charter" for presentation to the Queen.

All major newspapers in Britain today warned in headlines of trouble ahead for the government as a result of the "Spies for peace" security breach.

'ANOTHER TRAITOR'

The Daily Sketch calls the "Spies for peace" pamphlet "the work of somebody in the know—another toasted traitor."

The Daily Express describes the pamphlet's revelations one more serious lapse in security. "The public will expect an immediate and fruitful investigation by the government."

The Express says a "spy list" of possible suspects was being sent by government security officers to Scotland Yard, which has been called into the investigation.

The Manchester Guardian comments: "Either official secrets are important or they should not be secrets. Evidently even amateurs can penetrate ours."

Sport Slices...

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

The chappie who wrote the song, "Nice Work—If You Can Get It" could have been inspired by the careers of one or more professional hockey players.

It's nice work all right. The hours are good; the season's comparatively short; the hazards fair and the loot is lordly.

"If you can get it," is another matter. That is comparatively easy, too. All you need is the ability, stamina and endurance of a Gordie Howe—and you're made. It's as simple as that.

But you don't have to be in a class with the greatest player the game has ever produced to take home a pay cheque that is second to none in professional sport with the exception perhaps of baseball and "unshaven" basketball.

You could settle for five or ten thousand less a year and still keep up with your banking or stockbroker Jones neighbors.

If the gods of hockey Olympus look favorably on Howe and the Detroit Red Wings and returns Lord Stanley's hallowed pewterware to the American side of the Detroit river, Floral, Saskatchewan's gift to professional hockey will log home some $38,500 in pay and bonuses for the 1962-63 season.

If the gods decree otherwise and the imps of Ishtah cling to their hard-gotten bauble for another year, the Howe purse will be lined with a measly $36,500. The $2,000 is the difference between the winner and loser share of the final series.

But win or lose, the big slope-shouldered Howe can look back on a highly successful, not to say profitable season.

Without the manna that falls from the bonus heavens, Mr. Howe totes home $29,800 (American funds) as the regular stipend for 70 nights regular work in the Abel-Norris Hockey Productions Incorporated. That includes such extra-curricular work as training, exhibition games, etc.

Of course being a specialist helps the Howe hacienda's income to considerable extent. The loot accrued from this medium could very well amount to roughly one-third of the figure—placed on the parchment signed last fall by the Abel-Norris interests and the party of the first part.

For instance, add $1,000 for scoring Goal Number 35, then add $100 for each of three goals scored after the bonus number was reached.

When the Red Wings finished in fourth place in the league standing Mr. Howe with other Wings' players pocketed $250 each.

Came the battle with the Faltering Falcons of Chicago and on the strength of the Wings emerging victorious in the six-game tournament, Howe and Company deposited $1,500 in the personal bank accounts.

At the halfway mark of the league struggle Howe led the Hart Trophy most valuable player award and picked up $500. If he repeats in the final voting, and there is little doubt of that, another $1,500 goes into the Howe depository.

For poking home 38 goals and enough assists to earn him the seasonal leaguing championship the right side of the Howe ledger is upped $1,500.

If he makes the first all-star team—and who dares to say he won't—he will collect another $2,000. He has collected this golden twinkle on more than a few occasions—at least $1,000.

Howe, always a great team man, wants the Wings to win the Stanley Cup. "It's a matter of prestige," he told a sportswriter. "$2,000 worth of prestige."

Bisons Oust Providence, Barons Win

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Buffalo Bisons swept into the final round of the American Hockey League playoffs for the Calder Cup by beating Providence Reds twice over the week-end.

The Bisons, Western Division champions, won the best - of-seven series 4-2 by whipping the Eastern Division champs 3-1 on Providence ice Sunday night. On Saturday the Bisons had an 8-1 romp over the Reds at Buffalo.

The Bisons now will meet the winner of the best-of-five Cleveland vs. Hershey series in the final playoff. Cleveland shut out the Bears 4-0 Sunday night and, coupled with its 5-1 Saturday victory, now lead in the series 3-1. The fourth and possible deciding game is scheduled Wednesday at Cleveland.

A Providence turnout of 5,703 saw Buffalo win Sunday on two third-period goals by Art Stratton and Barry Cullen that broke a 1-1 tie. Stratton's goal came on a short shot after a feint with about six minutes to play. Buffalo's Doug Robinson and Ed

TORONTO (CP)—With a flick from his whip, trainer-driver Dunc MacTavish moved Dares Direct into a strong finishing kick which carried him away from his field with ease and to victory in the $4,000 Invitation Handicap at Greenwood Raceway Saturday night.

Owned by the Cloverland Farm of Bronsburg, Que., Dares Direct's victory in the invitation was his fourth in succession at the meeting, and was at the direct expense of Noral Gale, star of the pacers stabled at Greenwood.

Dares Direct paced the mile in 2:05, fastest time of the meeting. Lightly regarded by the crowd of 8,133, the seven-year-old by Meadow Gene out of Waar, returned $13.50, $5.60 and $3.20 after besting Noral Gale by 4½ lengths. Armbro Express picked up third money.

Favorites Armbro Duke and Gale's Pride took the opener and second race respectively and combined for a $9.70 daily double. The quinella in the sixth returned $29.20.

FlacQueen of the Reds were the earlier marksmen.

'Newfie' Faulkner Stars In Wings Win

By PAUL RIMSTEAD

DETROIT (CP) — A slight, blonde youngster who put Newfoundland on the hockey map this season has followed up by putting Detroit Red Wings back in the Stanley Cup picture.

Alex Faulkner, a quiet and unassuming centre from Bishop's Falls who played only one National Hockey League game prior to this season, scored two goals Sunday night—his fourth and fifth in the playoffs—to lead the Red Wings to a 3-2 victory over Toronto Maple Leafs.

He scored only 10 goals during the regular 1962-63 NHL campaign.

"Without this one we were dead," said Detroit manager-coach Sid Abel. The Leafs, defending cup champions, won the first two games of the best-of-seven set by 4-2 scores.

But those games were at Toronto. Now they're in the Wings' back yard and their lead has been cut to 2-1 with the fourth game scheduled here Tuesday night.

Veteran Vic Stasiuk, sent to the minors earlier this season, scored Detroit's first goal 33 seconds after the game started. Dave Keon and Tim Horton were the Toronto marksmen.

SCORES WINNER

Faulkner, 26, broke a 1-1 tie with his first goal in the second period. Then, after Horton tied it in the same period, Faulkner tipped in the winner.

It was Faulkner's third winning goal in the playoffs and all of them were scored in Sunday night games. He notched two against Chicago Black Hawks in the semi-final.

"I only hope we're around long enough for him to get another one next Sunday," he told reporters after the game.

Punch Imlach, manager-coach of the Leafs, admits he didn't think last year that Faulkner was a National Leaguer.

"Otherwise I would have protected him," he said.

But he didn't and Detroit paid the $20,000 draft price to claim Faulkner last summer.

Does Imlach now feel that the pride of Newfoundland is an NHLer?

"He's scored five big goals, eh?" was Imlach's reply.

The Wings, tired in the second game Thursday at Toronto, credited the three-day layoff for their reversal of form. They hadn't been skates since Thursday's game.

LEAFS OFF COLOR

The Leafs, especially the forwards, didn't play as well as in the first two games. Imlach said his forwards gave the puck away continually.

Big Frank Mahovlich was back in the Toronto lineup and showed more spirit than in the semi-final against Montreal Canadiens. He injured a knee in the opening game against Detroit and missed the second game. Detroit's Floyd Smith hit Mahovlich hard into the boards in the third period Sunday night.

"Best thing that could have happened to him," said Imlach. "Now he knows his knee is back to normal—it didn't bother him. From here on in he'll drive."

Stasiuk, who didn't expect to return to the NHL after being shipped to Pittsburgh Hornets of the American League early this season, sent the 13,000 fans off yelling with his quick goal. He fired a screened shot towards Johnny Bower in the Toronto net and it bounced once before going in.

Detroit goaltender Terry Sawchuk, who came up with a sound game after a so-so start in the playoffs, came out to cut down the angle on Keon's shot and collided with the little Toronto centre. Keon let the puck drift into the open net under its own power.

TRAPS LOOSE PUCK

Faulkner's first goal was from about 35 feet. He trapped a loose puck, then stopped in front of Toronto defenceman Carl Brewer.

"I was waiting to see if I could get it over to Brucie (Mackenzie)," said Faulkner. "Then I just decided to shoot."

Horton's goal was protested by Detroit. Sawchuk followed referee Frank Udvari to centre ice to complain. Red Kelly shot from the blueline and Sawchuk blocked it, but Horton, a standout on defence, was there to push it in.

"That puck bounced off Horton in the crease," Sawchuk said after the game.

Faulkner's winning effort was a tip-in from the side of the net. Defenceman Marcel Pronovost, playing one of his best games, shot from the blueline and Faulkner directed it in.

"I didn't know where it was going," Faulkner said. "I just tried to get my stick on it."

The Wings headed for their hideaway in Toledo, 50 miles from here, after the game and Leafs went to a hotel in suburban Dearborn.

Imlach planned a practice for today but Abel prescribed rest for his warriors. Relaxation has been valuable to the Wings.

Lead Cut To 2-1

Flyers Lose To Toronto

TORONTO (CP)—The Neil McNeil Maroons Saturday night snapped a nine-game winning streak of the Niagara Falls Flyers by winning the third game of the Ontario Hockey Association Junior final 4-1 in Maple Leaf Gardens.

In trimming the Flyer lead in the best-of-seven series to 2-1 the Maroons scored three unanswered goals within six minutes in the final period.

The Flyers opened the scoring when big Gary Dornhoefer drove a passout from Ron Shock through the legs of Neil McNeil netminder Gary Smith.

Mike Corbett evened the score for the Maroons midway through the second period as he fired one into the short side after taking a pass from Bill Macmillan.

In the third period Mike Walton fired two goals, including the game winner, while Andre Champagne scored the other Maroon marker.

Chicubs Hand Giants First Defeat

Colts Whip Dodgers

By JIM BECKER
Associated Press Sports Writer

When Chicago Cubs pried Larry Jackson and Lindy McDaniel loose from St. Louis Cardinals last winter, Bob Kennedy, the Cubs' head coach, confidently described it as the trade of the year.

"We got our ace starter and our best relief pitcher in one deal," he said.

Kennedy looked like a pretty fair prophet today. Jackson handed the mighty San Francisco Giants their first defeat of the season Sunday with ninth-inning help from McDaniel.

The defeat dropped the Giants into a first-place tie with Pittsburgh Pirates and Philadelphia Phillies, all with 4-1 records.

Alvin McBean scattered 10 hits and pitched out of two bases - loaded messes to beat Cincinnati Reds and Joey Jay 4-0 for the Pirates.

TWO FOR BALDSCHUN

Jack Baldschun, the relief workhorse of the Phils — 122 games in the last two years — picked up the decision in both ends of a double victory over the Cards, 4-3 in 10 innings, and 5-4.

Houston Colts whipped Sandy Koufax and Los Angeles Dodgers 5-4 and the hapless New York Mets went down 1-0 in 10 innings before Milwaukee Braves, in the other National League games.

On Saturday the Giants edged the Cubs 2 - 1, the Pirates bombed the Reds 19-4, Milwaukee whipped the Mets 5-2, the Dodgers topped Houston 3-1 and the Cardinals blanked Philadelphia 7-0.

Jackson's sparkling performance against the Giants Sunday was in line with the fine pitching the Cubs have had all season. In five games, all against the Dodgers and Giants, Cub pitchers have a 1.20 earned-run average. Jackson, who lost the opener to Don Drysdale of the Dodgers, has allowed two earned runs in 15 2-3 innings.

The big right hander had the Giants shut out until the ninth when Jim Brock made a two-base error on Chuck Hiller's fly ball. Jackson got the next two men, but Willie McCovey doubled home the only Giant run. McDaniel came on, gave up an infield single and then got Tom Haller for the final out.

SANTO PACES CUBS

Ron Santo singled to open the second inning and scored on Ernie Banks' double for the first run, and then homered to lead off the fourth.

McBean pitched the Pirates to their fourth straight, although he left the bases loaded twice and stranded two men in three other innings.

Jay pitched a five hitter for the Reds for eight innings, but gave the fatal blow, singles by Smoky Burgess, Doon Clendenon and Bill Virdon, came in the fourth inning for the only run. It was Cincinnati's fourth straight defeat after an opening victory.

The St. Louis pitching staff, which had 53 consecutive scoreless innings ended the last 21 innings of last season, came down to earth with a thud against the Phillies. Wes Covington doubled home a run in the sixth inning of the opener to snap the string. Charley James tied the score at 3-3 with a Cardinal homer in the seventh but Earl Averill's short sacrifice fly in the 10th pushed over the winner.

Clobber Quakers 9-3

Peg Wins Western Title

SASKATOON (CP)—Winnipeg Maroons whistled through the Saskatoon Quaker defences Saturday night to hand Quakers a 9-3 defeat and win the best-of-seven Western Canada senior hockey championship 4-3.

Maroons now go to the Allan Cup final against either Windsor Bulldogs or Montreal Hawks. Tables were turned from last year, when Quakers eliminated Maroons in the western final.

Flashy Maroons were ahead 3-1 at the end of the first period and 6-3 after the second. They scored three unanswered goals in the third.

Veteran Fred Dunsmore paced Maroons with three markers. Ross Parke and Lloyd Orris each scored twice, and Gary Abbott and Chuck Lumsden scored single goals.

Jackie McLeod fired two Saskatoon goals and George Swarbrick added the third.

Goderich Peewee Tournament

GODERICH, Ont. (CP)—Perennial finalists finally paid off for Harriston, Ont., Saturday when, after eight years of frustratingly steady losses, its C division entry scored two victories to get off to a big start in the eight-day 19th annual Young Canada Week Peewee Hockey Tournament here.

A total of 16 identical teams competed in C and D division games Saturday.

Harriston started off by knocking off Fort Perry 5-2, then came back to beat Corunna, a team composed mainly of Sarnia Indian reserve boys, 3-1.

Terry Newman provided the sustaining Harriston punch, racking up six goals, four against Fort Perry.

The closest Harriston came to winning in previous tournaments was a 3-3 setback on three different occasions, while the worst defeat was when it went under to Oakridge Acres, Ont., 20-0 two years ago.

Other two-game winners were Wingham, which Harriston meets Friday, and Paisley.

Wingham battled to a 2-2 tie a 28 - 9 shots - on - goal basis, Friday, bounced back to edge Southampton 3-2.

Paisley shut out both Belmont and Atwood 4-0 in D division tilts.
